COLONEL'S LAST WORD AN ATTACK ON ROOT

"Counsel Against the People," He Calls Senator and Other Lawyer Critics.

CAUGHT IN PLATFORM CRASH

But Comes Out Unhurt, Though Splashed with Ice Water—Issues Warning to "Reactionaries."

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Before his friends and neighbors in the Oyster Bay Opera House Col. Roosevelt wound up his campaign to-night by a bitter attack on Senator Elihu Root, formerly a member of his Cabinet, and the three other lawyers, Messrs. Guthrie, Marshall, and Milburn, who this afternoon joined Root in denying the accuracy of the Colonel's law and facts in his Madison Square Garden speech of Friday.

The Colonel had not seen any of the newspapers, and had only heard of the attack by a telephone message. His eyes gleamed with joy, and he promptly heeled himself with a formidable host of documentary evidence and went to the Opera House, determined to heap confusion on the head of Root.

A few hours before at the Mineola meeting the speakers' platform collapsed just after the Colonel's arrival. The chief Bull Moose was sprinkled with water from the ice pitcher, but suffered no injury. None of those on the platform with him was hurt either.

At the Oyster Bay rally the Colonel undertook to prove that the eminent lawyers were absolutely wrong in their versions of the legal cases he had cited at the Garden, but he did not contend that he knew more law than they. On the contrary, he insinuated plainly that they had erred not through ignorance, but through malice aforethought. He made a strong point of their waiting until they thought he would not have an opportunity to answer them before Election Day when they had all the time since Friday to answer him, and he took the keenest enjoyment out of the fact that this Oyster Bay meeting enabled him to foil them.

He took particular joy in the fact that at the very moment Root and his fellow lawyers were defending the Court of Appeals for its decision in the Knisely case, a decision by that same court was being published in which the Knisely case was overruled.

"The next time," said the Colonel, with infinite relish, "that Mr. Root rushes to the defense of the Court of Appeals he had better find out just where the Court of Appeals stands."

He always singled out Root above the others, and every time he came to Root's name the relish with which he was attacking the four lawyers increased tenfold. Whenever he spoke of them it was always as "these four eminent corporation lawyers," and once he spoke of them as "the four eminent corporation lawyers, acting in their present capacity as counsel against the people."

He reiterated his charge that the high courts had perverted law and added to it the charge that these four men were among those who had induced the courts to do so.

"They are," said he, "defending the courts for the very perversions of law for which they themselves are responsible."

Col. Roosevelt's Speech.

Here is Col. Roosevelt's speech:

"I wish to devote a few minutes to certain gentlemen of the other side who answered my Madison Square speech this afternoon, so that, I suppose, they thought I would not have time to make any reply to their answer. I wish to state right at the outset that there is always a presumption against any individuals who wait until the afternoon before election day to traverse the statement of an opponent. The presumption is that they take that course with the hope that it will be too late for him to reply.

"The answer to which I refer is the statement of four of the most eminent corporation lawyers of New York, Elihu Root, John G. Milburn, Louis Marshall, and William D. Guthrie, to the statements I made on Friday night discussing the cruel injustices done again and again to workingmen and workingwomen by certain decisions of the Court of Appeals.

"I am informed that these four gentlemen attacked the statements as being contrary to both the facts and the law. The first was the case of the tenement house cigar manufacturers. That is a case in which Mr. Root and his assistants in their present capacity as counsel against the people say I misstated the law and the facts. Now I will read to you what is said by a woman who knows the conditions of tenement house life as few other women and as hardly any man knows them—by Florence Kelly in a book called 'Some Ethical Gains Through Legislation,' and I cordially commend Mr. Root and his assistants who signed his protest to study that book and to ponder what is meant by the word 'ethical' in connection with legislation.

"Of the Jacobs case to which I referred, Mrs. Kelly says:

> "To the decision of the Court of Appeals in case in re Jacobs is directly due the continuance and growth of tenement manufacture and of the sweating system in the United States and its present prevalence in New York.

"That is the statement of a woman who as regards knowledge of tenement-house conditions, knows so much more than those four great corporation lawyers that her little finger is thicker than their loins when you come to study what they know and what she knows of the subject of which they have ignorantly presumed to speak. Mind you, I am speaking of Mr. Root, of Senator Root. I want you to make no mistake in his identity.

Takes Up Knisely Case.

"As to the Knisely case to which I next referred, these four great corporation lawyers said to-day that the decision of the Court of Appeals in that case was in accordance with the law, and was a proper decision. A decision is reported today in The Law Journal, Fitz Water vs.

CLARK AS A "BLASE BUYER."

Knight, Who Sold Him Pictures for $740,000, Sued for Commission.

LONDON, Nov. 4. — The sale to ex-United States Senator William A. Clark, of a collection of old masters for $740,000 by Sir George Donaldson, is the subject of a suit which began to-day in the Lord Chief Justice's Court here. Alfred G. Temple, the well-known expert and Director of the Art Gallery of the Corporation of London, is suing Sir George for $100,000 commission on the sale.

Mr. Temple, to-day, through his counsel, argued that owing to his friendship for the late Edwin A. Abbey, R. A., the American painter, he was able to introduce Mr. Clark to Sir George Donaldson. At first Mr. Clark bought pictures of the value of $170,000, and Mr. Temple received his commission on that transaction. Later on, however, Mr. Clark purchased the balance of the collection, and Mr. Temple is now suing for the commission on that. Mr. Abbey, it was explained, refused to accept a commission and would not allow Sir George Donaldson to give his wife a present.

A letter was read from Sir George to Mr. Temple complaining that the latter was acting too quickly. In it Sir George wrote:

"Wait until your hare is on the field, then start the dogs. Oh, you innocent lamb! Kopp of Old Bond Street had his measure and is trying to get him to make an offer for a portrait, but I anticipate failure, and if your letters have gone at this inopportune moment the game has been given away. Remember the blaze buyer only wants to buy when the holder of fine things don't want to sell. Put a pinch of that salt on your bird's tail."

The case was adjourned.

ACCUSED HUSBAND IN WILL.

Mrs. Brown Said He Caused Her Death, So Left All to Daughter.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—The will of Mrs. Ida Johnson Brown, who died in Hyde Park General Hospital on Saturday night, which was filed to-day, accuses her husband, the Rev. William A. Brown, of having caused her death and leaves everything to her mother, Mrs. Ida Johnson, in trust for her daughter. This daughter is Ida Brown, 8 years old, who since the death of her mother has mysteriously disappeared. The father took the child after the mother's death and has not been seen by her relatives since.

The body of the dead woman was taken to Brooklyn to-day for burial.

The woman's will, which was filed today in Suffolk County Probate Court, is as follows:

"Being weak in body and with no prospects of recovery, but of sound and disposing mind and memory, I make this my last will and testament, revoking all others.

"I will give my body to my mother and require that it be buried in the family lot in Brooklyn, N. Y.

"All my property, real, personal, or mixed, I give to my mother, Ida Johnson, in trust, nevertheless, for my daughter Ida, to be given to her upon her arrival at the age of 21 years; the income, if any, or the principal, if required in the opinion of the trustee, to be used for Ida's support or education.

"I purposely leave nothing to my husband, William A. Brown, as he is the cause of my death, and if any other reasons are desired I refer to a sworn statement by me, dated April 12, 1912, and in the custody of my lawyer, George M. Nay.

"I appoint as executrix and trustee my mother, Ida Johnson, and require that she be not required to furnish any surety or sureties on her official bond."

TAKEN DEAD TO BELLEVUE.

Policeman Who Delivered Body Departed Hurriedly—Queer Story.

Without offering any explanation, a man in civilian clothes, who said he was Patrolman Gatewood of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, drove up to Bellevue Hospital in a cab at 6 o'clock last night and left an unconscious man in the care of Dr. Hill in the admission ward. The doctor examined the patient and found him dead, his skull fractured, his chest crushed in, and his body covered with cuts and bruises. Then the doctor turned to question the man who had carried in the body, but he was gone.

Detective Stapleton of the East Twenty-second Street Station, who was assigned to the case, had the dead man identified as Timothy Fitzgerald, 60 years old, a janitor, of 410 East Twenty-third Street. Louis Rosenberg, a conductor on a First Avenue horse car, told the detective that the dead man had been on his car and that in attempting to alight at Twenty-third Street before it had stopped, he was thrown heavily to the street and thus injured.

Patrolman Gatewood made a report to the Twenty-second Street Station later in the evening, and said that he did not wait longer at the hospital, because he was late in reporting for duty at his station, where he was going when he found the man lying on the street in the midst of a crowd.

The police and Dr. Hill are inclined to doubt the story that the man was so severely injured by a fall from a horse car, and intend to investigate the case further. In the dead man's pocket was found an unopened pay envelope containing $11.50.

SON BORN TO MRS. GERAGHTY

Newport Heiress's Mother Reconciled to Her, but Not to Her Husband.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 4.—Mrs. John E. Geraghty, formerly Miss Julia Steel French, who eloped by automobile and was married to John E. Geraghty, a chauffeur, in Centre Village, Conn., on Aug. 11, 1911, gave birth to a boy in the Vanderbilt Ward at the Newport Hospital, this afternoon. Mother and son are both reported as doing well.

As far as can be ascertained, Amos Tuck French, father of Mrs. Geraghty, and her aunt, Mrs. French Vanderbilt, who is in New York, have not been won over. The reconciliation of Mrs. Geraghty with her mother, Mrs. French, and her aunt, Mrs. Stuyvesant Leroy, and other members of Mrs. Geraghty's family, does not include John Geraghty, who, with his family, will go to Brookline, Mass., to live early in December.

The child will be baptized in the Catholic faith, of which its father is a member. Mrs. Geraghty was confirmed in the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Mrs. Geraghty reached her nineteenth birthday last May. Since a child she has enjoyed the income of a trust fund from her uncle, the late Amos Tuck, which she will receive in full when she reaches her twenty-fifth birthday.

CAMPAIGN-NAMED TRIPLETS.

Texas Babies Are Christened After Taft, Roosevelt, and Wilson.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kyler of Denison, Texas, sent a telegram to President Taft, received today at the White House, announcing the birth of three sons, named William Howard Taft Kyler, Theodore Roosevelt Kyler, and Woodrow Wilson Kyler.

Assistant Secretary Brahany, in the President's name, sent a telegram to the parents expressing the wish that the triplets would live long and prosper.

COLLEGE MEN PARADE BEFORE MISS WILSON

GOLD TRUST TWINS AT WORK

On Floats They Clean Up Corporation Gold—Judy, the Elephant, and a Gigantic Uncle Sam Win Cheers.

Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of Gov. Wilson, came to the city last night as her father's representative to review the Wilson parade, which had been planned at the eleventh hour by the Wilson College Men's League as a substitute for the parade abandoned on Saturday on account of the death of Vice President Sherman. When it was all over, Miss Wilson enthusiastically declared that she had had the time of her life, and that she would immediately wire her father at Princeton all about it.

Miss Wilson sat in a grand stand in front of the Hotel Imperial, which has been the headquarters of the Wilson Parade Committee. She was accompanied by National Democratic Chairman William F. McCombs, and in her party were Senators O'Gorman of New York and Bacon of Georgia, George Gordon Battle, Perry Belmont, and several members of the National Campaign Committee. During the entire forty-three minutes that it required the torchlight parade to pass the reviewing stand Miss Wilson bowed and smiled at the advancing ranks, and whenever a particularly attractive line formation came by applauded and vigorously waved an American flag at the men beneath her.

Although the parade did not come up to the full expectations of the Wilson managers, owing to the shortness of the time for preparation, it brought out 60,000 persons, who lined Fifth Avenue from Washington Arch to Twenty-third Street and Broadway from Twenty-third Street to Fifty-seventh Street, and kept the air ringing with the cheerful sentiments that are customary on the eve of a Presidential election.

The parade began to form in Washington Square at 7 o'clock. From that time until 7:50, when the parade got under way, the residents of lower Fifth Avenue had the greatest variety of free street-corner band concerts that was ever offered to aristocracy or any one else. At every other corner there was a band, and they played with unusual vigor in unrestrained rivalry with each other.

"Big Bill" Edwards, the Street Cleaning Commissioner of the city, led the parade as Grand Marshal with a bunch of Princeton ribbons tied on his left arm. His aids were Robert R. MacLea, John L. de Saulles, and Joseph R. Truesdale, and before them marched an escort of mounted policemen.

The first "feature" of the parade was Uncle Sam himself, a man seven feet three inches tall, and carrying a giant American flag. He was Commissioner Edwards's tallest stableman, Edward Rockle of Stable K, at Broadway and Seventy-seventh Street. The news that "Big Eddie" was to play the part of Uncle Sam had spread among his comrades, and they were on hand to jeer him.

Three little children in a donkey cart followed close behind Uncle Sam, and shared with him much of the cheering from the sidewalk. Their car bore a transparency which read:

> Our daddies are going to vote for Wilson and Sulzer. We are the Young Democracy.

The children were Raymond Keahan, 9 years old; Eda Kellihan, 4 years old, and Eddie Kellihan, 5 years old, all of 619 Hudson Street, and related to the late P. H. Keahan, Tammany leader of the Fifth Assembly District.

Following the children in the cart were the college delegations, under the banners of Princeton, Yale, Harvard, Brown, Columbia, Fordham, New York, Michigan, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, and Virginia, with Princeton leading. Hundreds of transparencies were hoisted above the heads of the students. Among the mottoes were "The Little Napoleon—William F. McCombs," "For Btter Team Work in the Real Game," "The Way to Improve Your Mind Is to Deliver the Goods," "Woodrow Wilson, Herald of the Dawn of the Era of Good Feeling," and "For a New Machine Built on Scientific Principles."

Judy was also in the parade. Judy is the prize elephant of Luna Park, aged 65 years, and weighing 3,000 pounds on the hoof. Although she has engaged in two political stunts before, having raced the Democratic donkey once to Wilmington, Del., and once to Washington, she played on these occasions the part of the Republican Party. Both times she lost the race.

"We gave her 100 pounds of hay and told her we'd take her to Manhattan to walk for Wilson,' declared Paul Schwartz, her keeper, gently stabbing Judy with his iron hook, "and she shook her head in great glee. We started at 2 o'clock and got to Washington Square at 6 o'clock, and I want to see any elephant who can walk twenty miles faster than that. She is for Wilson, just like everybody else from Coney Island."

To prove that Judy was indeed a Democrat now, this sign was pasted on her sides:

> G. O. P. Legalized Monopoly of Broken Promises.

There were about twenty floats in the parade, a few from the Coney Island Mardi Gras collection and others reminiscent of the old itinerant morality plays. They were given up to the "Gold Trust Twins," and included among them Col. Roosevelt, President Taft, Andrew Carnegie, J. P. Morgan, George W. Perkins, Frank A. Munsey, and others. As the floats moved along "Gold Trust" twins were seen busy with dishpans and scuttles loaded with imaginary corporation funds.

As the van guard of the parade reached the reviewing stand a queer looking furniture van moved out into Broadway from Thirty-third Street. A burst of laughter greeted it, for it was filled with Roosevelt campaigners who had lost their bearings. A strip of muslin floated from the rear of the van with the words, "Advance Guard. Roosevelt and Johnson."

The police quickly drove it from the line of march, but shortly after there was a fluttering of papers from an upper window of the Hotel Imperial, directly over Miss Wilson's head. She looked up and caught one of the yellow sheets, which were blown in all directions by the breeze. It proved to a pamphlet of Roosevelt campaign songs prepared for the use of the Jane Addams chorus. Miss Wilson laughed heartily over the Ode to Roosevelt set to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland," and beginning with the words "Thou wilt not cower in the dust, Roosevelt, oh, Roosevelt."

The Bull Moose campaigners, it seemed, were intent to distract attenton from the feature in the parade which was about to follow. This consisted of a full-grown Bull Moose mounted on a wagon, with two Standard Oil cans tied to its tail. When Miss Wilson saw that her enthusiasm found vent in real cheers.

All the time that the parade was in progress the large searchlight from The Times tower, which will be used in heralding to-night's election returns, flashed

LORD DECIES SUED FOR BUILDING DEBT

Refused to Pay $32,000 Excess Charges on Mansion Built for Bride at Stoke Poges.

HIS MOTHER DIRECTED WORK

South Kensington Masterpieces Copied in Country House—No Expense Spared.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—How Lady Decies, mother of Lord Decies, superintended the building of her son's mansion at Sefton Park, Stoke Pogis, was related, with other illuminating details, in the High Courts to-day. Lord Decies was sued for $32,000 due to Holland, Pannen & Cubitts, London contractors, for alterations and rebuilding connected with the mansion. The original bill was about $100,000. Lord Decies paid $65,000, and the money sued for was in the form of excess charges. Lord Decies made counter-claims for various sums on the ground that he had already paid more than the work was worth.

Lord Decies sat in court at his solicitor's table, deeply interested in counsel's speeches.

The building operations, said the King's counsel, had been carried on very rapidly, as Lord Decies was about to go to America at the time to marry Miss Vivien Gould, and he was anxious to have the house ready for the return of his bride. He brought back his American bride, but the building operations were not ended, and Lord and Lady Decies went to the South Kensington Museum and inspected the treasures there. Then he gave instructions for elaborate decorative work, copied from old masterpieces, to be installed in the country mansion. Real oak paneling was put in bedrooms and halls—the very best oak to be obtained in England. All the decorative work was superintended by Lord Decies's mother, who was deeply interested in ornamental designing, said the counsel. Lady Decies's bedroom was magnificently paneled in walnut.

It was indicated that the mansion was built with American money.

Horace Farquharson, Lord Decies's architect, stated in the witness box that he had been introduced to Lord Decies by Lady Decies's brother. Discussing the cost of the mansion with the witness, Lord Decies said: "The question of finance does not bother me much, because the money is going to be furnished for me." This he told the witness confidentially. Time was everything, money no object, added counsel. The witness was explaining, when court adjourned, how he made plans for a strong room to contain a service of gold plate and Lady Decies's jewelry.

ALARM FOR CZAREVITCH.

Physicians' Report Indicates Tuberculosis of the Bone.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times says the long-awaited statement regarding the Czarevitch's illness causes deep consternation among the Russians. Even to the uninitiated mind it is evident that the Prince's condition is likely to cause much anxiety in the future.

The doctors are still very pessimistic, and the carefully worded report unhappily leaves little doubt that the patient suffers an organic defect in the blood and doubtless also tuberculosis in the leg.

HARVESTER AGENT ARRESTED

International Company Employe Held in $60,000 Bonds for Embezzlement.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 4.—Wallace J. Poland, Pacific Coast agent of the International Harvester Company, was arrested here to-day, charged with embezzlement, by Aubrey E. Ambrose, traveling auditor of the company.

The specific sum named is $1,500, but it is understood that the amount involved is much larger.

Police Judge Weller held the prisoner in $60,000 bonds or $25,000 cash bail.

BULGARIAN PREMIER TO AMERICAN NATION

M. Guechoff Sends a Message Through The New York Times's Special Correspondent.

HOPES FOR OUR FRIENDSHIP

Our Aid in 1876 Will Always Be Remembered by the Bulgars—The Influence of Robert College.

By FREDERICK PALMER,
Special Correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Copyright, 1912, by THE NEW YORK TIMES Co.

SOFIA, Nov. 4.—Minister President Guechoff, who is both Premier and Minister of Foreign Affairs and to whose statesmanship and initiative as Adjutant of King Ferdinand the Balkan Alliance is largely due, along with his letter of introduction to army headquarters, gave me this message to America:

In the great national crisis in 1876 Bulgaria was befriended by America in a way which will always be remembered by our people. It was Robert College, which has done so much for our education, that first raised a voice for the victims of the atrocities committed by the Turks during the Bulgarian insurrection of 1876. It was the American Consul General at Constantinople, the late Eugene Schuyler, who first made an official report confirming all the appalling Turkish crimes, news of which had been communicated to the press by professors of Robert College.

We hope that the Americans will befriend us in the present crisis also.

What we want is that Europe agree to a definitive settlement of the Balkan question. That settlement ought to have been made at the Congress of Berlin in 1878, when, after the Russo-Turkish war, Turkey was at the mercy of the great European powers.

The great powers then committed the mistake of leaving Turkish misrule in several provinces of Turkey in Europe. That mistake must not be repeated now.

It is in the interest of European peace and humanity as well that Turkish misrule cease once and for all in the Balkan Peninsula.

The influence of Robert College is still shown here, many Government officials having been educated there.

SNATCHES GIRL FROM DEATH.

Subway Officer Grabs Woman as She Tries to Jump Before a Train.

Shortly after seven o'clock last night Special Policeman John B. Murphy observed a young girl pacing nervously the uptown platform of the Times Square Subway Station. She permitted several trains to pass, and then walked to the extreme end of the platform. Murphy kept close behind her and, just as a train was pulling in, he says, she made an attempt to throw herself in front of it. He was too quick for her, however. He grabbed her by the shoulders and dragged her back, as she screamed and fainted.

The platform was crowded at the time, and Murphy carried the girl into the ticket office and summoned Dr. Keil from the Polyclinic Hospital. The girl was soon revived and was taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Station.

There she gave her name as Anna Wilson, 19 years old, of 230 West 146th Street. Se said she had quarreled with her brother, Benjamin, a clerk in the Hudson Terminal Branch Post Office. She would not tell what the trouble had been about and was locked up, charged with attempted suicide.

TIGHT LACING KILLS ACTOR.

Female Impersonator Collapses on Stage Through Wearing a Corset.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 4.—Tight lacing caused the death last night of Joseph Hennella, a female impersonator, at the City Hospital, after collapsing on the stage of a South Side vaudeville theatre late on Sunday night.

In order to add to the illusion when he appeared in a woman's rôle he wore a corset tightly laced, to give the effect of a small waist.

Hannella fell unconscious on the stage in the course of his act. He died three hours later. The hospital physicians said the tight lacing had caused a kidney trouble and induced a tendency to apoplexy. Hennella was of medium height, and inclined to be stout. He was 40 years old. In his younger days it was easy for him to get the feminine lines, but lately his increasing girth made it necessary for him to lace extremely tight to create the illusion. Usually he made several changes of costume in the course of an act, and the constriction caused by the corset rendered this a fatiguing and laborious process.

COAL MINE CAUGHT ACTORS.

Bessie McCoy, Now Mrs. R. H. Davis, Wants Her Money Back.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Histrionic talent does not contribute to the successful operation of a coal mine, according to a suit filed to-day against Dr. Jay F. Pitts of Chicago by Mrs. Richard Harding Davis, who was Bessie McCoy, an actress, before her marriage.

Mrs. Davis asserts that Dr. Pitts sold her $3,000 worth of stock in the Bessemer Block Coal Company, an Indiana corporation, asserting that the company was in a flourishing condition. She says Victor Moore and De Wolf Hopper are investors with her in the company, but this did not prevent the company from suspending operations.

Mrs. Davis bases her suit on a written agreement from Dr. Pitts, in which she says he promises to "stand personally good for any losses in the Bessemer Block Coal Company."

De Wolf Hopper, it is said, furnished $1,000 to meet the last payroll of the company before it suspended operations.

FINE ELECTION WEATHER.

Fair and Warm Is the Promise for Southern New York.

Weather Forecast for Eastern New York—Cloudy in the north, fair in the south; warmer.

If this promise of the Weather Bureau holds, New York will march to the polls to-day under a sunny sky. If fair weather means a big vote, then the vote, not only in this Sate but in the country east of the Rocky Mountains, will be large, for the prediction is for generally fair weather east of the Rockies. The range is the dividing line, for west of the Rockies the conditions make for unsettled weather and rain. This is because of a storm that is off the North California Coast, and which is moving in an easterly direction.

While in the northern part of this State it will be cloudy, there is nothing alarming in that, because the weather observers could find yesterday no indication that a storm is brewing in this part of the country. It will be warmer to-day in the East and Southern States. Elsewhere there is nothing to indicate much of a change in temperature during the next forty-eight hours.

NEW COMET DISCOVERED.

French Astronomer Reports It Visible and Moving Southwest.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 4.—The discovery of a new comet by Astronomer Borrelly of Marseilles, France, is announced in a telegram received to-day by the Harvard College Observatory from Prof. Kobold of Kiel, Germany.

The position of the comet is given on Nov. 2 3,044, G. M. T., as right ascension 17 hours 47 minutes; declension plus 38 degrees 57 minutes. The comet is reported to have been visible in a small telescope and to be moving southwest.

GOV. FOSS A GRANDFATHER.

Eugene Noble Foss, 2d, Arrives as an Election Baby.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—Gov. Foss became a grandfather to-day by the birth of Eugene Noble Foss, 2d, weighing eight and a quarter pounds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Foss, the Governor's son and daughter-in-law, at their home in Jamaica Plain. Mrs. Foss the younger was Miss Dorothy Chapman of San Francisco. Today was also the birthday of the Governor's wife.

The Governor has received many congratulations over the arrival of the "election baby."

WILSON'S CLASSMATE KILLED

Peter A. V. Vandoren Dead in Automobile Accident Near Bristol, Pa.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—Peter A. V. Vandoren, a lawyer of Princeton and a classmate of Gov. Woodrow Wilson, was killed, and Henry C. Bunn, former Curator of Princeton University, was seriously injured in an automobile accident near Bristol, Penn., late to-night.

The men were on their way from Philadelphia to Princeton, and it is said that their machine skidded while crossing a bridge over the railroad tracks and fell thirty-five feet down an embankment.

Jersey Farmer Struck by Motor, Which Runs Away.

SALEM, N. J., Nov. 4.—After being struck by an automobile late Saturday night John C. Ballinger, an aged farmer, died here yesterday. He was walking to his home in Pennington when he was run down. It is said the machine that struck him had side lights, but that the front lights were not lit and that the old man did not see the car until it was too late to avoid it.

The occupants of the car left the victim lying on the roadside and sped away. Ballinger was picked up by persons driving in a carriage and brought to Dr. MacDonald's hospital here. Before his death he recovered consciousness and told about the machine striking him.

The officials say they have the number of the automobile that struck Ballinger, and Coroner Hitchiner will hold an inquest when he gets the name of the owner from Trenton.

RUN DOWN IN FIFTH AVENUE.

John Hoffmeister Is Dangerously Hurt by an Automobile.

John Hoffmeister, 28 years old, a steward, of 414 West Forty-ninth Street, was taken to Flower Hospital in a dangerous condition last night after having been struck by an automobile as he was crossing Fifth Avenue at Fifty-seventh Street. Hoffmeister suffered a fracture of the skull and several of his ribs were broken.

The automobile is owned, the police say, by Albert E. Cortis, insurance broker, with offices at 100 William Street. Mrs. Cortis was in the machine. The chauffeur was not detained, the accident having been declared unavoidable.

AUTO TRUCK CRUSHES BOY.

The Third Person Killed by Heavy Machine Whose Number Is 13.

Thomas Lombino of 2,154 Second Avenue, playing on that thoroughfare just above 112th Street early last evening, ran blindly across the path of a heavy motor truck and was crushed to death. The truck was laden with stone for the Oscar Daniels Construction Company in their work on the new subway.

George Millard of 512 East 123d Street said that the little boy was the third person that had been run down and killed by that same truck this year, and the license number of the truck is 13.

D. LLOYD SEEKS DIVORCE.

Young Boston Millionaire's Marital Troubles Reach a Crisis.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 4.—Demarest Lloyd, prominent Boston man, Harvard graduate, and yachtsman, said to be worth $9,000,000, has filed in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court of Suffolk County a divorce libel against his young wife, Mayme Fisher Lloyd, a Kentucky girl, whom he married while attending Harvard University. The papers have been impounded by the court.

The grounds on which the libel is brought are indicated by the fact that the libellant filed a motion, according to the divorce docket, to amend the libel by inserting the name of the co-respondent.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE BULGARIAN ARMY, Sunday, Nov. 3.—From a military point of view the campaign on the battlefield may already be regarded as settled.

The Bulgarians look forward to the ensuing diplomatic campaign with dark determination.

They have decided to take advantage of every point that they have gained. They will only negotiate directly with the Turkish Government.

The brilliant co-operation of the Bulgarian leaders, combined with the heroism of their troops, is bringing the Bulgarians fresh successes daily.

An attempt of the Turks to take up a position again north of Sarai and at Tchorlu in order to cover their retreat totally failed, as also did the intervention east of Visa of Turkish troops who had advanced from Visa through Sultan-Baktchi.

The Bulgarians are pushing forward in pursuit of the Turks with the greatest energy in order to succeed in driving the largest possible part of the defeated Turkish Army from its line of retreat on Tchatalja as a final res of the Lule-Burgas—Sarai operations.

The enormous exertions and very great sacrifices entailed by the blows struck at Kirk-Kilisseh and Lule-Burgas naturally evoke a temporary need of repose, but this will not bring the operations to a standstill for any length of time. On the contrary, the advance on Tchatalja may be begun this week.

At present every nerve is being strained to hasten the fall of Adrianople, particularly in order that the Bulgarian siege guns may be released for eventual use in front of the Tchatalja positions.

Adrianople's powers of resistance have diminished visibly day by day. The Turks reply weakly and at irregular intervals to the heavy fire of the Bulgarian artillery. The Turkish works on the northwest front have suffered heavily, and since the last great sortie in the direction of Marash, already reported, the activity of the garrison appears to have considerably diminished.

The want of provisions in the invested city is reported to be already extremely serious.

The imminent fall of Adrianople is regarded here as an event of the greatest military and political importance, both as evidence that even the Tchatalja fortifications cannot save Constantinople, and as enabling the whole Bulgarian Army to concentrate for the march on Constantinople.

The Turkish soldiers appear to be already convinced of the inevitability of their complete defeat and its results.

A Turkish soldier captured at Marash said to a Bulgarian officer:

"Effendi, lead me before the Sultan."

Asked what he wanted with King Ferdinand, the Turk replied:

"I wish to beg him not to let the great Mosque of Sultan Soliman be destroyed when Adrianople is captured."

The Anatolian prisoners throw the blame for the Turkish reverses on the Young Turks because, they say, the latter deposed ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid and so offended against the Koran.

POWERS' ATTITUDE VARIES.

Germany Tries to Obtain Armistice—Others Refuse Turkish Plea.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—The Turkish Ambassador here was yesterday directed by the Ottoman Government to inform Great Britain of Turkey's willingness to receive assistance in bringing about a suspension of hostilities with a view to arriving at a peace settlement. Tewfik Pasha immediately on receiving the communication from Constantinople went to the Foreign Office and conferred with Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, for two hours.

The latest proposal to the powers made by the French Premier, Raymond Poincaré, is as follows:

First—Recognition by the powers of political and administrative changes in the territory occupied by the troops of the allies.

Second—Retention of the Sultan's sovereignty at Constantinople and the region round the capital.

Third—The summoning of a European conference, in which the Balkan nations shall participate.

The Balkan nations and Greece, however, are persistent in their determination that Turkey must arrange directly with them the terms of peace without the intervention of the powers. This attitude is emphasized in a statement from official sources, which says:

"The Turkish proposal of peace is satisfactory in so far as it shows a desire to prevent further bloodshed.

"As regards foreign intervention, however, there seems to be no chance of the Balkan States listening to any foreign counsels while treating for the arrangement of conditions of peace. These must be settled between the Balkan States and Turkey direct.

"It may at this stage be declared that the whole campaign was prearranged and has so far been carried out entirely in accordance with the programme. For a considerable time an officer of the Greek military staff, Col. Dousmanis, was engaged at Sofia preparing the military details, while the political programme was largely, if not entirely, the work of Premier Venezelos of Greece.

"The Union of the Balkan States at this moment is more close, hearty, and intimate than it has ever been before, for it has been welded by blood and common sacrifice. There is not the least danger that any disagreement as to the division of territories or the positions of the frontiers will disturb it. It may be assumed that, inasmuch as the details of the campaign were arranged with the greatest care, the same procedure will be followed both as to the conclusion of hostilities and subsequent political considerations."

Refuse to Propose Armistice.

The powers which have thus far replied to Turkey's appeal for their mediation in the war declare that they could make only proposals for peace, and could not approach the Balkan nations with a request for an armistice. Some of the Governments have pointed out that Turkey's proposal for a cessation of hostilities, in other words, an armistice, would offend the Balkan victors. Other Governments take the position that it would be an infringement of international law for the moment. The war must, therefore, continue, and the Turkish armies, which, the Porte has at last admitted, have been beaten, must keep on with their unequal struggle against the victorious invaders.

It is hoped and believed still that the powers will soon find a formula under which they can offer their good offices. The terms of peace themselves are a matter entirely for the belligerents to settle, Bulgaria having again affirmed that no interference by outsiders will be tolerated. In this she has the whole-hearted support of her allies.

The negotiations, which were taking place among the powers when Turkey sprang her surprise of asking for mediation, were not oversuccessful. The European Governments had not even agreed upon the preliminaries for an offer of mediation. The suggestion made by France, to which Russia and England subscribed, met with nothing but criticism in Austria, and she, of course, was backed by Germany and Italy, the other two members of the Triple Alliance.

It is suggested, however, that Austria misunderstood the proposal in regard to "disinterestedness," which was not, as believed by Austria, directed against the idea of economic arrangements between Austria and the Balkan League. Still, Austria's attitude has caused much uneasiness, and reports that she is mobilizing continue to circulate all over Europe.

Germany Trying to Aid Turkey.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—The Turkish Ambassador presented to the Foreign Office this afternoon a communication from his Government asking the powers' good offices to bring about an armistice.

Germany immediately put itself into communication with the other five great powers, with a view to carrying out the request.

The reply of Germany, Austria, and Italy to Premier Poincaré's proposal has just been dispatched. It rejects the proposed declaration of "disinterestedness."

It is semi-officially declared that the German warships are being sent to Turkish waters because the German Government has no confidence in the ability of the Turkish Government to prevent massacres.

The Italian Foreign Minister, the Marquis di San Giuliano, has arrived here and has had several conferences with the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg. These were primarily intended to deal with the general relations of Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy, but are being devoted almost exclusively to the question of the Balkan war.

KIEL, Nov. 4.—The German armored cruiser Goeben sailed this morning by way of Skagen, and the protected cruiser Breslau will follow this afternoon by way of the Kiel Canal. The Goeben is to go to Constantinople and the Breslau to Smyrna.

The cruiser Vineta has left Corfu for Constantinople, the Hertha for Salonika, and the Geier for Haifa.

Rear Admiral Trummler has been placed in command of the German warships in Turkish waters.

France's Reply Unfavorable.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—The French Government has refused the Turkish Government's appeal to it to take the initiative in bringing about intervention by the great powers to stop hostilities and impose an armistice on the Balkan States.

The reply of the French Foreign Office points out that for France to take the course suggested would be contrary to international law, and would make her appear as siding against the Balkan States. France could, it was added, only consider in accord with all the great powers a request for mediation, properly so called, if such a request be addressed to her.

The French attitude in regard to the Turkish appeal for mediation is shared by England and Russia. Turkey's proposals were as follows:

First, that the powers offer, and if need be enforce, an armistice on the belligerents.

Second, that the powers profit by the armistice to invite the belligerents to make known their peace terms, and, if necessary, harmonize the conflicting terms of the belligerents.

In refusing to act Premier Poincaré declared that France was unable to accept the suggestion about an armistice without furnishing to the Balkan allies guarantees relative to the conditions of peace. An armistice, he said, would check the advance of the allies at the height of their victories and give the Turks time to reorganize and strengthen their armies.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 4.—None of the Powers has yet replied to the Porte's request for mediation.

The belief is held here that King Ferdinand will not be sorry to accept European intervention, as it is considered that after its tremendous sacrifices the Bulgarian Army must be near exhaustion.

It is asserted that the Sultan himself was deceived by Nazim Pasha's optimistic reports and only realized the true situation when an English cruiser brought the latest news, which was conveyed to the Porte by the British Ambassador. The Porte than asked the powers to intervene.

The Porte's circular note to the Ottoman representatives in Europe read in part:

"The object and intention of the Imperial Government being always pacific, it was in order to defend itself against the four Balkan States that Turkey had recourse to arms. Although military preparations were incomplete, the Imperial Government firmly resolved to employ every effort to safeguard its rights. But in view of the fact that these efforts necessitate a great sacrifice of men, the Imperial Government, in order to spare the further shedding of blood and to furnish proof of its love of peace, invites mediation by the powers with a view to ending the war."

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 4.—The newspapers announce the arrival at Odessa of two representatives of the Turkish Foreign Office on a secret mission. They will interview the Russian Foreign Minister, M. Sazonoff, and subsequently go to Berlin and Vienna.

Advices from Odessa say that the Russian Black Sea fleet is cruising off the mouth of the Bosporus, ostensibly with the object of protecting Russian subjects in Constantinople.

FERDINAND MAY BE EMPEROR.

Report That He Will Be Proclaimed When Allies Enter Constantinople.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—As King William of Prussia was proclaimed German Emperor at Versailles in 1871, so, it is said, King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is to be declared Emperor of the Balkan Federation when the victorious troops of the allies reach Constantinople.

This report from Paris is probably more a guess at King Ferdinand's ambitions than an accurate gauge of his power to realize them. Its possibility, however, is a logical development of the situation.

The Turkish Government's appeal to France to impose an armistice on the Balkan allies has been rejected, and though the German attitude is more favorable to the Porte, it is not likely that any power will go further than an offer to mediate.

The support of the other powers was made a first essential of France's offer of mediation, and Austria's rejection has now been followed by that of Germany and Italy of Premier Poincaré's proposal that all the powers should make a declaration of "disinterestedness" as a preliminary to joint action.

Thus a fresh formula must be found before mediation by the concert of Europe becomes a possiblity.

The Union of Austria, Germany, and Italy against M. Poincaré's proposal clearly indicates how easily the concert of Europe may be turned into a discord.

The disagreement of the powers removes the last obstacle to the Bulgarian march on Constantinople and the downfall of the Ottoman Empire in Europe. Whether or not it will be succeeded by a Balkan Empire is King Ferdinand's secret, and it opens too vast a question for present discussion.

Before the final triumphal entry into Constantinople something yet remains to be done. Though the Turks are still being hotly pressed by the Bulgarian forces, some pause will be necessary to give King Ferdinand's exhausted warriors a chance to gather strength for their final effort.

The fall of Adrianople, which is expected daily, will release 50,000 men and siege artillery for the attack on the Tchatalja lines, supposing that the retreating Turks have succeeded in reaching those defenses in sufficient numbers and spirits to make their resistance formidable.

However, as Lieut. Wagner states, the advance on Tchatalja may be begun this week.

If the reports of the casualties in the great battles in Thrace are correct, the losses, though heavy, are by no means extraordinary. Twenty-four thousand Turks and 20,000 Bulgarians are stated to have been killed or wounded. At Mukden the casualties on both sides were estimated at 100,000. At Sedan, too, the proportion of losses was higher, while in the American civil war the casualties were greater than in any European war of modern times.

TURKS AGAIN REPULSED.

Prussian Officer Killed by His Own Men After Battle of Lule-Burgas.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—The Turkish Army, occupying the line from Tchorlu to Istrandja, was repulsed yesterday by the Bulgarians on the eastern flank, according to a news agency dispatch from Sofia.

A dispatch from Belgrade to The Standard gives a report that a Servian force has reached the neighborhood of Antivari, on the coast of Montenegro. If this is true, the Servians will join with the Montenegrins in the attack on Scutari.

A Vranya dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that the concentration of the Servian forces has been completed and that the advance on Monastir and Salonika has commenced. The Third Army is advancing westward toward Durazzo, and another division, starting from Novi-Bazar, is approaching Scutari. Gen. Stephanovitch, with another large force, is marching to form a junction with the Bulgarians besieging Adrianople.

A Mustapha Pasha dispatch to The Morning Post says it is officially stated that twenty battalions of Turks, supported by artillery, made a sortie along both banks of the Maritza River, west of Adrianople. The battle lasted all day. The Bulgarians made a vigorous counterattack and drove the Turks back with heavy losses.

The Bulgarians complain of serious breaches of the rules of war, alleging that the Turks use the white flag to entice the enemy into danger.

SOFIA, Nov. 4.—Bulgarian troops have now occupied Buk, on the Salonika-Constantinople Railroad, and this, with the possession of Nevrokop, finally cuts communications between the Turkish Army in Macedonia and the Turkish garrison of Adrianople.

The Turkish troops on Saturday attacked the Bulgarian left flank at Bunar-Hissar, but the Bulgarians repulsed the attack, putting the Turks to flight and capturing five of their officers and 1,300 men, in addition to a quick-firing battery.

The spoil captured by the Bulgarian troops at Lule-Burgas included depots of clothing, arms and stores, fifteen camels, a searchlight, and telegraphic instruments.

Prisoners taken by the Bulgarians say that a Prussian officer named von Welt, who held the rank of Colonel in the Turkish Army, was killed by his own men after the disastrous defeat at Lule-Burgas. The prisoners say they went into action in a famished condition. The men had only one biscuit or half a loaf of bread for three or four days. Many of them deserted to the Bulgarians.

USKUB, Nov. 4.—The advance of the Servians toward Monastir and Salonika is progressing successfully.

The defeat of the Turks at Kumanova was so complete that the pursuing Servians found the Turkish troops had abandoned the absolutely impregnable positions of Katchanik Pass and Ovchepolye, which it was expected would be the scenes of desperate resistance on account of the natural defenses.

When the Servians reached the pass they found that the Turks had fled in the wildest confusion, leaving twenty-one of their field guns and numerous rifles and ammunition.

At Kratova the Turks left 135 field guns behind them.

The railway between Uskub and Mitrovitza has been repaired.

BELGRADE, Nov. 4.—A batch of prisoners, numbering 1,360, chiefly Arnaut tribesmen and other irregulars, captured by the Servian troops in Macedonia, arrived here this morning under escort.

They presented a pitiable sight. All of them were barefooted and in rags, while they were almost starving.

VIENNA, Nov. 4.—A correspondent of the Reichspost, telegraphing from Scutari on Saturday night, said the Montenegrin troops were obliged to retire from Tarabosch Mountain, as they could not hold the positions they had taken and occupied there. They left several guns behind them when they retreated, but they had rendered them unserviceable. The Montenegrins set fire to several Mohammedan villages.

The Montenegrin troops made repeated attacks on Scutari from the plain without gaining much ground. The Turks even had some small successes, returning from one sortie with eighty captured rifles.

The Turkish officers believe that the City of Tarabosch will hold out for some time.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 4.—Abdullah Pasha, commander of the Turkish Eastern Army, is still at Tcherkesskeui, and at noon to-day a Turkish detachment destroyed an important railway bridge at Tchorlu.

Official sources admit that 15,000 wounded were left on the field at the battle of Lule-Burgas.

Nazim Pasha is still confident of his ability to hold the lines of Tchatalja against the Bulgarians. Aided by the Turkish fleet, it is pointed out, the Ottoman army will doubtless resist to the last in guarding the gateway to Constantinople.

ATHENS, Nov. 4.—The Greeks have occupied the Turkish Island of Ispara in the Aegean Sea, northwest of Chios. The people of this island were massacred by the Turks in the war with Greece in 1824.

Gen. Ricciotti Garibaldi arrived here to-day and received an ovation.

GREEKS SUFFER A CHECK.

Meet a Superior Turkish Force—Atrocities by the Moslems.

ATHENS, Nov. 4.—The Greek advance on Monastir has suffered a check. A force marching from Janitza to Florina, twenty miles to the south of Monastir, met a superior Turkish force and was obliged to suspend the march and entrench in a strong position.

The fighting between the Turks and the Greeks around Janitza was of a most stubborn character. The fields around the city are covered with bodies and the road from Junitza to Salonika is strewn with war material thrown away by the retreating Turks.

The Greeks have captured a large number of prisoners and fourteen pieces of field artillery.

A wireless message from a foreign warship at Salonika says that the Turkish Army which was defeated at Yenidje, about fourteen miles from Salonika, has reached that city in complete disaster.

Before their flight from Statista, to the southwest of Kosani, the Turks pillaged a monastery. They cut a monk to pieces, impaled a 3-year-old child, and massacred many of the inhabitants of the town.

The Greeks pursued and killed many of them.

EUROPE'S MOST SAVAGE WAR.

Turkish Brutality Almost Incredible —Correspondents Not Safe.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—While the number of troops engaged in the series of battles fought between the Turkish and Bulgarian Armies in Thrace in the last fortnight was not so large as that of the armies who fought in the Russo-Japanese war, yet this will probably be the most savage and bloody war ever fought in Europe.

The fighting is followed by many massacres by the Turkish soldiery, whose brutality is hardly believable. The reports issued by the Bulgarians are probably exaggerated, but the accounts of independent witnesses show that the situation in this respect is very bad.

One of the railway officials who escaped from Lule-Burgas describes how he saw the bodies of two Bulgars of Turkish citizenship who had been done to death with bayonets. He said:

"Not a single inch of white skin was visible on their bodies, which were covered with a crust of blood. I could not look at food for days after I had seen them, and this is only one incident of the atrocities committed."

Asked as to the position of war correspondents with the Turkish Army, he said:

"I should not give much for their chances, as it will go hard with any Christians who fall into the hands of the Turkish irregulars. These are entirely beyond the control of their officers, and they have been perpetrating wanton acts of cruelty all along the line of retreat."

The losses of the two armies thus far are not known, and the estimates given are mere guesswork, but that they have been extremely heavy goes without saying, and it is probable that the Bulgars who attacked fortified positions lost even more than the Turks.

One correspondent says that 40,000 Turks have fallen since the battle of Kirk-Kilisseh, and another that they lost 20,000 at Lule-Burgas.

At the Bulgarian Ministry of War, according to a dispatch from Sofia, the names of 4,000 dead Bulgarian soldiers have been listed, and it is known that in the last few days 20,000 Bulgarians were wounded, half of them seriously.

Nowhere on the scene of operations have there been adequate hospital facilities, and from all accounts those on the Turkish side are almost useless.

A correspondent retreating with the Turkish Army telegraphs that for thirty miles he passed wounded men either lying on the ground or being transported on bullock carts, while others painfully dragged themselves along. They had no food, and there was not a habitation within twenty miles.

The Turkish hospitals consist chiefly of bearer companies, and the transport wagons carry no nourishment for the wounded.

The arrival of foreign warships at Salonika and the approach of the Greek Army to that town have had a tranquilizing effect on the population.

At Stambul more patrols have been placed on the streets, and every preparation is being made to try to prevent the threatened massacre of Christians. Besides a warship, Great Britain is retaining two steamers at Constantinople to assure the safety of refugees.

Mine Blows Up Greek Merchant Ship.

DESCRIBES HORRORS OF TURKS' FLIGHT

M. H. Donohoe Paints a Fearful Picture of the Retreat After Lule-Burgas.

TRACK IS PAVED WITH DEAD

Soldiers Without Food, and Just as It Arrived After a Bitter Night a Further Flight Was Ordered.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—In the course of a dispatch cabled from Constanza, M. H. Donohoe, The Daily Chronicle's correspondent with the Turkish main army, says:

"The track of the beaten Ottoman Army is paved with dead and dying, and, as an aerial rear guard, great flocks of black crows, which caw a hideous requiem, ever hover near, marking down some weary soldier staggering to his end. Pariah dogs of vulpine breed, scenting carrion, have gathered from afar, their dismal howling resounding throughout the night. They and the crows are the only gravediggers for the dead on the way from Tchorlu."

Abdullah Pasha's retreat from Tchorlu, where he passed Thursday night, after his defeat at Lule-Burgas, was, begun, Mr. Donohoe states, on the news of a Bulgarian enveloping movement. Once the railway line at Tcherkesskeui was cut by the Bulgars, nothing could save Abdullah's army.

The beaten forces had bivouacked indiscriminately on the plateau commanding Tchorlu, in the railway station, and in the sheltered valleys which adjoin it. The night was extremely cold, this adding to the sufferings of the already severely tried fugitives.

Only small quantities of flour and barley were found in the town, and these were commandeered immediately, but they did not serve to feed a tithe of the starving men, the bulk of whom therefore passed the bitter night without food, drink, or cover. Of rice, which is the staple diet of the Ottoman soldiers, not a grain was available.

By noon on Friday efforts had been made to obtain supplies of food from Constantinople, but before many trainloads had come through the Bulgarian guns intervened, and actually threatened the town.

Tchorlu was strategically weak, and on Friday morning an immediate general retreat was ordered, and the remnants of Abdullah's army directed their steps toward the entrenched lines of Tchatalja, where it was hoped that a final stand might be made.

"These defenses, from which so much is expected," Mr. Donohoe adds, "may very likely, when subjected to the strain and stress of war, prove but a snare and a delusion.

"The morale of the retreating troops has been severely shaken, if not in some cases entirely destroyd, by the ordeal through which they passed last week. They are in a thoroughly jumpy condition, suffering from what military men call 'maseritis.' Those who still had rifles and cartridges left in the darkness of Thursday night saw imaginary enemies on every side and fired off their rifles indiscriminately. As often as not they shot a comrade.

"The state of the army in the last stage of the retreat was pitiable in the extreme. Hundreds of men with the soles torn off their boots walked with bleeding feet, which must have caused excruciating agony at every step they took"

Mr. Donohoe pays a high tribute of respect and admiration to Turkish stoicism, saying:

"Such fortitude in such circumstances may well excite the envy of European soldiers of all nations. The Ottoman soldier as I have seen him during those awful five days of torture, suffering, starvation, and defeat faced everything cheerfully and uncomplainingly.

"He went days without food, and no murmur of reproach crossed his lips. When his weary, benumbed legs refused longer to support his emaciated body he lay down and died complacently, as if death from starvation were part of his every-day duty. No fear of his approaching end could be seen in his pain-racked features.

"In the firing-line he stood, seldom caring to take cover, with folded arms, his cartridge-pouch empty, his rifle useless, and took the fearful punishment meted out to him without wincing, meeting death with calm composure.

"The Allies may have beaten the Turkish Army, but they have not conquered the Turkish soldier."

WATCHED HIS ARMY BREAK UP.

Abdullah Pasha Hoped in Vain for Reinforcements.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—A vivid description of the battle of Lule-Burgas is given by Ellis Ashmead Bartlett, special correspondent of The Daily Telegraph with the Turkish forces. Describing the second day of the battle, Wednesday, Oct. 30, he says:

"On the low hills in front of Sakizkoy, Abdullah Pasha and his staff took up their stand on an ancient mound, about 50 feet high, of which there are many scattered over the country. They are said to be the tombs marking the burial places of victims of former battles in this dark land. To-day this proved to be the tomb of Turkey's hopes, for from this mound Abdullah Pasha watched the defeat and destruction of his army.

"Neither of the combatants seemed anxious to renew the struggle, and it was nearly 8 A. M. before the Bulgarian artillery commenced a furious bombardment all along the line from Lule-Burgas to Karagach. In spite of the immense expenditure of ammunition the previous day, the enemy apparently had an unlimited supply left, for he did not use it sparingly, but fired with rapidity and precision.

"Against this storm of shells the Turkish artillery could return but a feeble reply, for not a scrap of fresh ammunition had been brought up during the night, and those batteries which still possessed a few shells in caissons were loath to use them until the decisive moment arrived.

"It was a sad sight to watch the long lines of infantry on the hills a mile to our front, the batteries of artillery and horse teams lying for hour after hour under this storm of shrapnel, unable to reply, unable to advance, and unwilling to retire. Men and horses fell in scores, and soon a dismal procession of wounded men, bleeding from feet, hands, faces, shoulders, from anywhere where a hurt was not vital, came dribbling back past us into the village of Sakiskoy.

"The hill, on which Abdullah Pasha had taken up his stand, was about the centre of the arc of a semi-circle extending from the railway line at Lule-Burgas station to Karagach on the northeast. It became speedily obvious that the object of the Bulgarians was to break or turn the Turkish left flank and, if possible, cut off the retirement of the army from Chorlu and at the same time crush Abdullah's centre or at least hold the Second Army Corps and prevent it from advancing.

"The plan of Abdullah, the only one which offered the smallest hope of success, was to hold his left wing with his Fourth and First Corps, to attack with his centre, now formed by the Second Corps, and to crush the enemy's left wing by hurling the whole Third Corps under Mahmoud Mukhtar on to it to gain time for the Third Corps to come up from Visa.

Abdullah Ordered an Attack.

"Abdullah ordered Torgut Shevket Pasha, commander of the Second Corps, to attack the firing line, and, in consequence, suffered enormous loss. Abdullah, I fancy, had imagined the enemy would take the offensive against the Second Corps, and when they displayed no inclination to do so, he decided to take the offensive himself.

"As a matter of fact, the Bulgarians, having suffered immense losses in their final effort to hold the Second Corps on the previous night, had now intrenched themselves, determined, as was proved later in the day, to act on the defensive in this part of the field and furiously attack Abdullah's left wing.

"Had the Turkish commander in chief had a fresh army corps in hand, or had he even possessed a spare division of infantry, some batteries of artillery, or even ammunition for his batteries, it is possible the attack of the Second Corps would have been crowned with success, but as it was his troops were already worn out and decimated. His artillery had only a few rounds left, and the morale of the army had sunk to the lowest ebb.

"Nevertheless, the troops of Torgut Sheoket advanced bravely to the attack. The firing line was formed nearly half a mile long and swept forward over the open ground until it became almost hidden from view amidst the low shrubbery, of which I have already spoken.

"For a short time it really seemed to us spectators as if the advance would be successful, for the infantry pressed steadily, and only the enemy's artillery opposed the onrushing Turks, but suddenly the deafening roar of musketry rent the air, intermingled with the tragic hum of innumerable machine guns.

Half Slain, Rest Routed.

"The noise was infernal, but only lasted for a short time, when suddenly there appeared, rushing from the wooded ground, the remnant of the Turkish firing line. Fully 50 per cent. had fallen, and the remainder, losing all semblance of order, dispersed in small groups and under a perfect rain of shrapnel, dashed back on to the supports and reserves.

"Even here their flight did not end. In spite of the efforts of the officers the fugitives pressed on to the rear until they reached safety behind the ground on which we were standing.

"The supports and reserves of the broken firing line were hurried to the front. They, too, reached the edge of the wooded ground, where they were met in turn by such a hail of shrapnel and bullets that the lines seemed literally to melt away to nothing under the withering blast.

"Two Turkish batteries, the only ones which seemed to possess any ammunition in this part of the field, attempted to relieve the pressure by opening up on the enemy's guns, but as these were invisible it made not the slightest difference to their volume of fire. The only effect was to attract to the artillery some of the shrapnel, which had played such havoc with the infantry. Two Turkish batteries were speedily placed out of action. One of them lost all its men except seven, and had 150 horses placed hors de combat.

"Fresh teams were sent up later in the day to bring them to the rear. I examined this battery carefully on the following day during the retreat. The shields were bespattered with shrapnel, and an entire shell had passed through the shield of one gun.

"The incidents I am now relating took place about midday. For the time being the forward movement of the Second Corps came to an abrupt stop, and the infantry fell back a considerable distance, where they remained for hours, exposed to the enemy's shrapnel fire, unable to advance and unwilling to retire.

"While this desperate struggle was raging in front, the Second Corps of Bulgarians was engaged in delivering a series of equally desperate attacks on Abdullah's left wing and the centre, held by the Fourth Corps on the extreme left and by the First Corps between Lule-Burgas and Turk Bey. The brunt of this attack fell on the weakened Fourth Corps, which the night before still held its intrenchments on the hills facing Lule-Burgas.

Here again the Turkish defense was crushed by the immense superiority of the enemy's artillery fire. Here again the old story was repeated of Turkish batteries unable to play any part in the battle from lack of ammunition. Here again the half-starved, worn-out infantry were expected to fight like men.

"Throughout the day the Bulgarian advance against the left wing made steady progress. Having gained possession of the railway station, they were able to outflank the Fourth Corps and force it to retire through fear of having its retreat altogether cut off. The efforts of Sali Pasha's cavalry to stem the advance proved utterly futile. They, in turn, had to give way before the terrible rain of shells and the gradual outflanking movement, and the retirement of the Fourth Corps was plainly visible to Abdullah Pasha and his staff through the clouds of smoke thrown up by the enemy's shells, which were now bursting over the left wing of the army. The enemy threatened every minute to envelope our rear and jeopardize the retreat of the First and Second Corps to Tchorlu.

"By 2 o'clock in the afternoon the position of Abdullah's army was critical, almost desperate, and the glasses of the staff were all turned toward the northeast, in the direction of Viza, from which point Mahmoud Mukhtar, with the Third Corps, was making tremendous efforts to come up. An engagement of a desultory character had been taking place in that direction throughout the morning, but the smoke of bursting shells showed that up to the present the Third Corps had been making steady progress. Messengers had arrived with the news that Mahmoud Mukhtar was driving all before him; that the enemy was becoming steadily demoralized in his front, and that he hoped to come up to the relief of the Second Corps.

"In the course of the afternoon this news temporarily raised the spirits of the General Staff, and for hours all our glasses and all our hopes were fixed on the Third Corps. About 2 o'clock this engagement to the northeast became furious. It was obvious that the Bulgarians had detached large reinforcements from the front of the Second Army Corps, or else had brought up fresh troops, and had passed the right wing of the Second Corps until they were almost in its rear, and were concentrating every man in this part of the field to hold Mahmoud Mukhtar back.

"In the whole course of the battle I never listened to such artillery fire as that which arose from the contact of the Third Corps with the enemy.

"Mahmoud Mukhtar, not having been engaged the previous day, was able to employ his artillery to good advantage, and to meet the Bulgarian guns on more equal terms, but even here, in spite of its previous exertions and vast expenditure of ammunition, the Bulgarian artillery soon gained the upper hand.

"Throughout the campaign the Creusot gun proved its immense superiority over the Krupp in a manner which amazed the Turkish artillery officers, but how far this superiority was due to the weapon and how far to superior handling it is premature to say.

"Even the heroic efforts of Mahmoud's hitherto unbeaten infantry could not drive back the enemy, who fought with unparalleled determination and ferocity, absolutely throwing away their lives in the Japanese manner whenever a point had to be won or held. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon it became obvious that Mahmoud Mukhtar's advance had been completely checked. The smoke of his guns no longer steadily approached the right flank of the Second Army Corps. Rather, it seemed to recede, as if he were being slowly driven back. In any case, the great gap between the Second and Third Corps had not been filled."

LONDON, Nov. 5.—"The commander in chief of a great army in battle without any communication with or knowledge of the movements of his forces," is the description of the plight of Abdullah Pasha on Oct. 30, the decisive day of the fighting, which Ashmead Bartlett cables to The Daily Telegraph from Constanzan.

The correspondent compares the position of the Turkish commander with that of Gen. Oyama during the Manchurian battles, when the Japanese commander was twenty miles behind the fighting line but in constant touch by telegraph and telephone with every regiment and battery of his army. Abdullah was supposed to be directing the movements of four army corps over a front twenty-five miles in extent. He had a position in an old graveyard close to the front.

"Abdullah," says the correspondent, "remained throughout the entire day, except for one brief interval, on a mound, his sole companions being his staff and his personal escort. His sole means of obtaining information as to what was happening elsewhere were his field glasses. Not a line of telegraph or telephone had been brought to the front; not a single wireless installation, although the Turkish Army, on paper, possesses twelve complete outfits for its army corps, and not an effort had been made even to establish a line of messengers by relays to connect headquarters with the various corps. Not a single aeroplane was anywhere within 100 miles of the front. If any exist, there was no one to fly them.

"In the course of the whole day I saw only one orderly ride up with a message, from which I gather that the corps commanders did not even take the trouble to communicate with the commander in chief.

"Thus the battle, instead of being directed by one master mind, resolved itself into four isolated engagements, with four separate commanders, each ignorant of his comrades' movements, each having the same difficulty in communicating with his divisions and brigades."

The correspondent corroborates other stories of distress among the troops, who were practically without food for two or three days and could find no water except from muddy ponds. They slept on the bare hills without blankets.

While the Bulgarians were bringing up reserves Abdullah Pasha was without a single fresh battalion to throw into the firing lines. Thousands of men, who should have been with their regiments were strolling about the country searching for food, so weak that they could hardly drag themselves along.

EXPLAINS WAGNER'S SUCCESS.

Reichspost Says It Is Due to Military and Linguistic Ability.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

VIENNA, Nov. 4.—The Reichspost publishes the following statement in its evening edition:

"The journalistic success that the representative of the Reichspost, Lieut. Herminigilde Wagner, who is with the headquarters of the Bulgarian Army, has had in his reports of the progress of the war, is due to his especial military talent and to his knowledge of languages.

"His success has caused the spreading of meaningless reports. It is said that he owes his position to a special letter of introduction to King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, and other similar reports are made.

"We hereby state that these statements are inventions."

Lieut. Wagner's dispatches have attracted attention all over the world.

AMBASSADOR ZIA SKEPTICAL.

Says He Does Not Even Believe Turkey Is Suing for Peace.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Dark as the outlook may seem to the followers of the Sultan, the Turkish Ambassador here, Zia Pasha, holds firmly to the belief that in the end Turkey will triumph over her enemies. He contends that the reports thus far have not given a true account of the military operations, and that the resources of Turkey in the way of trained soldiers and the men to make a great army are greater than the outside world knows. Zia Pasha, in a statement issued this afternoon, asks the American public not to form a judgment too soon, and to await trustworthy reports from the theatre of war before taking it as a foregone conclusion that Turkey is beaten irretrievably.

"In three weeks," says the Ambassador, "Turkey can recruit from Asia a greater army than that which has been engaged in the war in the Balkans. That this will be done, if the need comes, I have no doubt.

"There is no possibility either of the fall of Constantinople or of a massacre or pillage of the Christians and foreigners there. If we have been defeated I look for an official announcement ordering a fresh army from our territory in Asia Minor. I do not know that we have been defeated, and am inclined to doubt newspaper reports under the circumstances, because the correspondents are not at the front, and are compelled to rely upon rumors.

"Turkey is able to fight indefinitely. Personally I do not believe there is any truth in the report that she is suing for intervention by the powers, or that she intends to do so.

"The fortifications around the capital are so strong that the enemy will find it impossible to penetrate them, even if the Turkish Army has been defeated in battle, which we do not now concede. We have received no advices from home indicating that our army has been routed. The last cablegrams received were most encouraging

TURKS IN CAPITAL ARE EAGER TO SLAY

Ugly Feeling Grows Among the Populace and Old Prophecy of Massacre Is Recalled.

DEFEATS INFLAME NATION

Lower Classes Are Arming—Report of Slaughter of Christians at Rodosto Reach the City.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—The Daily Chronicle's Constantinople correspondent sends the following uncensored dispatch, under date of yesterday:

"The situation in Constantinople grows more grave every day.

"The continual rumors of Turkish defeats exasperate the Moslem element of the population. Hostility toward Europeans is increasing and is shown more openly and arrogantly as the days pass.

"The lower classes express their fierce animosity without any attempt at concealment. Some of the workmen's guilds openly boast that they have taken a sacred vow to massacre every Christian in Constantinople should Bulgarians enter the city or should Rumelia be severed from Turkey. Fanatics swear on the Korean to take terrible vengeance on the infidel. The theological students, always a dangerous element, are now preaching incitements to the mob in out-of-the-way mosques. They refer to the ancient belief that the Turks will possess Constantinople for 500 years, after which Europeans will take the city. The prophecy goes on to say that according to the prophet's command the true believers are to massacre the infidels before they leave.

"Hostile demonstrations, organized in secret, take place nightly. Last night a crowd of Kurds and other ruffians, well armed with swords, bayonets, and Browning revolvers, gathered at a place called the Seven Towers, and after long deliberation decided to march against the European quarters. Fortunately the police intervened before their intentions could be carried out. Many arrests were made, and the prisoners will be tried by court-martial to-morrow.

"Terrible reports of massacre and pillage come from the provinces. The patriarch of the Greek Church has received information of a terrible massacre going on at Rodosto. The town is full of Bashi-Bazouks, who are committing all sorts of outrages. The Metropolitan applied to the Governor of the town, but the latter declared that he could do nothing while war was going on. The patriarch made a last appeal to the Porte this afternon.

"A hostile crowd attempted to march to the European quarter of the city, buo fortunately the police were on the alert and opened the swing bridge between Stamboul and Galata, thus preventing what might have been a terrible disaster."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 4.—Deficiencies in the commissariat were largely responsible for the Turkish reverses. The Turkish plans aimed at encircling the Bulgarian forces by an advance on the right wing. The Bulgarian General concentrated his efforts on an attack against the Turkish centre at Sarai and the left wing along the railway. The Turkish right was meeting with much success, but the commissariat broke down completely owing partly to bad weather, which made the roads difficult and prevented landing operations at the Turkish base, Midia.

As a consequence, Mahmud Mukhtar Pasha, commanding the right, was compelled to sacrifice the advantage gained because his troops were without food the whole day.

The Turks, it is said, were also defeated not because the Bulgarian is a better or a braver man, but because he is more scientifically trained and better armed, especially in the matter of artillery.

In this connection military men here are recalling the words of a distinguished officer who said: "While the Turkish soldier is learning the goose step the Bulgarian is learning to shoot straight, and, what is more important, to control his fire."

Same plate, showing no germ life after use of FORMAMINT.

"My sore throat is gone since I used these convenient tablets"

INDOORS—outdoors; city—country; every day—every night; everywhere—anywhere; you cannot avoid breathing germs.

The throat is the first point of danger in which disease germs settle—once they gain foothold, there is every likelihood the infection set up will lead to sore throat—to say nothing of Tonsillitis, Laryngitis, La Grippe—even Diphtheria.

Wulfing's Formamint
THE GERM-KILLING THROAT TABLET

is the newest scientific principle advanced for the treatment and prevention of germ infection. Formamint incorporates a powerful germicidal agent in a harmless, pleasant-to-taste tablet. By dissolving in the saliva, the active germicide property of Formamint is carried into the throat, reaching every fold and pocket in the germ-teeming membrane—doing its work easily and searchingly—killing germ-life.

This a gargle cannot do—it comes into only momentary contact with the infected membrane—cannot be taken often enough to be effective. Formamint can be taken any hour, any place—and is positive in its germ-killing quality.

8,000 physicians have certified to the efficiency of Formamint. Convenience itself—you can tuck the bottle away in vest pocket or handbag.

Men's Overcoat Day at Saks'

Saks' Overcoats at 17.50 to 30.00 will poll a big vote today!

¶ We submit that the overcoat season has been delayed long enough.

¶ A late dinner or a fugitive collar button is not regarded as sufficient excuse for holding a theatre curtain beyond eight-fifteen.

¶ We therefore take it upon ourselves to declare this to be the official opening of the overcoat season, despite the unprofessional conduct of the thermometer.

¶ Besides, if ever an overcoat season was deserving of recognition by meteorology, or man, basing its claims on the character of its credentials, this is that season.

¶ Masculine modes in overcoats are almost as numerous and diverse this Fall as are feminine modes habitually—this is, in fact, peculiarly an overcoat year, and

Saks', as ever, is the authentic center for overcoat styles

¶ At all prices we are by reputation first and foremost in ready-for-service clothes, but it is the fact that we sell more higher-priced garments than any other house in America, which has elevated our popular-priced clothes so far above the average productions at 17.50 to 30.00.

¶ And nowhere in this land of trumpeting, braying and Bull Moose calls can you find that wonderful range of selection, in fabrics, colorings and models, which awaits you at Saks' this Election morning.

¶ The fabrics for the most part are those rough surface coatings, in solid colors, in snappy light and dark Oxfords, and in the new Cambridge colors; and the models are no less numerous.

¶ The majority of our overcoats at 17.50 to 30.00 are made on regulation lines, with many variations of the belted back feature, finished with self collars, and the split three-piece sleeves, having fancy turned cuffs.

¶ Yes, Sir, you can also get a Saks greatcoat for 17.50 to 30.00. Single or double breasted, belted in various styles, and shown in a variety of collars that button to the neck or lie fallow like a Presidential nominee of an Election evening.

A Special Saks Overcoat silk-lined at $25

¶ When you see the word "special" coupled with a Saks garment, you may be assured that the announcement is worthy of every voter's consideration. All Saks garments are special, in the sense that they are better than the average. But this silk-lined overcoat at 25.00 is special in the further sense that it is better than the Saks average.

¶ Made of fancy coatings, and black and Oxford coatings, on rather conservative lines. Finishes somewhat below the knee. Is silk-lined throughout—Saks-tailored throughout—and has that style throughout which is calculated to appeal to the man who has an eye for style.

TURKEY'S COLLAPSE IS RUSSIA'S CHANCE

Czar Can Now Absorb Persia at His Leisure, Says W. Morgan Shuster.

ALREADY IN FULL CONTROL

Now All Fear of the Moslem Is Gone and England Won't Meddle if Left Free in the Balkans.

In the triumph of the Balkan Powers over Turkey W. Morgan Shuster, sometime Treasurer General of Persia, sees Russia's opportunity to hasten the proclamation of her sovereignty over Persia, a sovereignty which, according to Mr. Shuster, has for months existed in fact, if not in appearance, to the outside world. Mr. Shuster's information is to the effect that Russia has been quietly filling up the country with her own troops until now there is a force there big enough to cope with any situation that may arise.

With England playing into Russia's hand in Persia for a long time in order to get St. Peterburg's support in whatever attitude she herself may take in a settlement of the Balkan situation and later in the readjustment of boundaries that may follow the present war, Russia has been doing as she pleased in the remoter Near East, Mr. Shuster says. The practical collapse of what was regarded as a powerful Turkish Army removes the last hindrance to Russia making bold acknowledgment of her rule in Persia.

"The Balkan war and its outcome have a decided bearing on the situation in Persia, to this extent," said Mr. Shuster, at the Hotel Astor, last night.

"For the past six or eight months, as nearly as I have been able to follow the situation from English newspapers and personal letters, the Russians have been pouring troops into Persia until now there are anywhere from 25,000 to 50,000 Russian soldiers in that country.

"The reason it is so difficult to state their number with anything like accuracy is that communications are poor, Russia is in control of them, and it is no new thing for her officials deliberately to deceive even the British consulates and legation. I recall very clearly an instance where the British Minister was informed that in one small town in Northern Persia there was only one sotnia or company of Cossacks quartered, when, as it developed later, there were three or four times the number there.

"So that whatever figures Russia may give out in no sense indicate the real situation. As to what this is and what she has been doing in Persia since last December we can only gather from correspondence and from the stories of people who have come back.

"But Russia to-day practically occupies the whole north of Persia—fully two-thirds of the country, including Teheran, the capital. She is in absolute control of the situation, both from a political and a military standpoint.

"England has been playing for Russia's moral support all along in the European situation—in case of 'eventualities,' as the diplomats put it.

"The result has been that Russia has been forcing England's hand in Persia more and more, until now nothing remains to take place but a formal acknowledgment of Russia's sovereignty by the civilized powers. In other words, Russia is to-day the de facto Government in Persia.

"The Balkan situation, with the doubt it produces as to the line-up of the European powers, which are unlimited, leaves Russia all the freer to hasten her absorption of Persia, without the risk of serious protest from the British Government.

"In other words, England is playing to hold Russia in line with herself and France in any stand she may take on the settlement of the Balkan complications. The effect on Persia, therefore, is to hasten her end as a nation, and what might have taken some years to accomplish under normal circumstances has already been brought about, through the critical situation in Europe, produced by the Balkan difficulties.

"What settlement, what political and territorial readjustments will be the outcome in Europe, I do not venture to predict. It can readily be seen that it is to Russia's advantage, and her policy, to have the Balkan States successful. In other words, she can fish better in troubled waters.

"So long as Europe is embroiled over these difficulties, Russia can pursue her near Eastern and far Eastern policies practically unhindered. Turkey has always been considered the military force of the Moslem nations, and has heretofore exercised some influence on the Persia situation because of her supposedly strong army. That influence has, however, now largely disappeared."

LONDON DIFFERS ABOUT THIRD PARTY

One Paper Sees It Leavening Our Political Life, Another Says It Will Bring Little Change.

JUST FRESHER SHOP WINDOW

Hands That Are Pushing the Goods Are the Same Old Hands, Declares Hamilton Fyfe, Recently Here.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 5.—The Times, in an editorial this morning on the American Presidential election, says:

"It is not to be supposed that in the improbable, but not wholly impossible, event of Progressive success, the responsible leaders of that party would proceed forthwith to apply to the highly organized communities of the Eastern and Middle States and still less to the Federal Constitution all the measures of direct government which have been adopted in States like Oregon or Nevada. Mr. Roosevelt has never acted with recklessness, and even in the heat of the campaign has not always forgotten to make his reserves.

"No triumph, on the other hand, of the Democrats or of the regular Republicans is likely altogether to suppress the movement which he has led. The new third party may share the fate of other parties, or it may survive and gather strength for the election of 1916. But in any case the leaven with which it has leavened American politics and American thought will continue to work.

"The introduction of new elements and new conditions in American life has had the broad results which far-seeing thinkers predicted nearly three generations ago. The great republic is finding herself face to face with questions of the same order as those which have long confronted the nations of the Old World. It is her task to find an answer for them, which shall satisfy the reasonable demands of the masses without destroying the foundations of her political greatness and her economic development."

Hamilton Fyfe, who has just returned from America, has an article in The Daily Mail on the American election outlook. He says, in part:

"The mass of the electors in the United States at this moment are too busy and prosperous to care very greatly who wins or loses as long as business remains good.

"There is an appearance of greater reality about this election by reason of the butting in of the Bull Moose, but any one who imagines that the method of American politics have been or will be radically changed by the emergence of the Progressive Party, under the banner of Col. Roosevelt, is the victim of a delusion and a snare.

"Certainly the Progressives have the fresher shop window, but the hands that are pushing their goods are the same old hands that were busy before, and they are busy in much the same way.

"When I accompanied Col. Roosevelt back to New York two years ago after his African hunting tour, he was profoundly distrusted by the business interests and enthusiastically supported by the intellectuals. Now the men of business are less fearful, while the intellectuals have ranged themselves among his bitterest foes.

"I asked one of the latter, a Harvard professor, for the reason. He told me bluntly that they were disappointed. They felt that they had been let down. That may be unreasonable. They may be utterly wrong in thinking that personal ambition has become the mainspring of his character. I think for my part that they are, but the existence of this feeling has had its effect upon the country at large."

Mr. Fyfe, referring to Gov. Wilson, says that he carried on his campaign with decent vigor, abused no one, and made no extravagant professions.

WOMEN AS ADVANCE AGENTS.

They Take Hotel Accommodations While Men Wait to Vote.

Most of those who registered at the hotels yesterday were women. There were few men about, except those who live here, but many of the women engaged quarters for the men of their families, saying that their husbands or sons would take the first train for New York after voting. Judging from the reservations made, a big crowd will be on hand to-night to assist in the celebration in honor of their favorite candidate—or another.

In the hotels one heard nothing except guesses as to what might happen to-day. A hotel detective who is a Taft man said he had been on the lookout for some of the money offered on Wilson at 5 to 1, and 4 to 1. He had put up $80 on the short end of these bets and was looking to place more. At the Waldorf reports were heard of two men trying to bet $1,000 even that Roosevelt would get a bigger vote than Taft, but their names were not forthcoming. A hotel manager who is for Taft said:

"It is wonderful what a lot of Taft sentiment I have heard during the past few days. I knew lots of men who as late as two weeks ago were talking nothing but Roosevelt, but who are now saying they are going to vote the straight Republican ticket to-morrow."

Another hotel manager: "It looks like a Wilson landslide."

A manufacturer from up the State who is for Roosevelt: "This election is going to be a great surprise to a lot of people. I talked to a New York banker yesterday on the train. He predicted Wilson's election. I think his prediction is wrong. The sentiment for Roosevelt is stronger in New York than many people believe."

A National Committeeman of one of the great parties said: "Nobody knows what is going to happen."

A member of a city commission: "I expect Wilson to win, but never has there been so much uncertainty, and nothing would surprise me."

Almost everybody about the hotels had a lot to say about the "silent vote," and was willing to admit that the only prediction they could make was based on hopes and fears.

The Waldorf is going to make it possible for everybody stopping in the hotel to get the election returns with as little personal inconvenience as possible. A special switchboard was added to the telephone service yesterday, by which, as each return is phoned in, it will be repeated simultaneously to each of the 1,400 telephone receivers in the building.

Sheriff Ready to Make Arrests.

Sheriff Julius Harburger will come to his office a little earlier than usual this morning, and he will be there all day with his coat off, prepared to quell any election disturbances that may arise and to make any arrests that the courts may demand. In order to help him in his work he will have a large army of deputies on hand. The reason for this precaution is a rumor that Gov. Dix may order the Sheriff to reinforce the watchers at all the polls.

TIMES BULLETINS FOR PARIS.

Will Be Thrown on Screens and Posted in Hotels and Clubs.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Much satisfaction has been expressed at the news that THE NEW YORK TIMES Bureau was arranging to supply a special bulletin service, showing the progress of the Presidential election, to all the principal hotels, restaurants, theatres, clubs, &c.

The authorities of the central telegraph office have given instructions that all cablegrams from New York shall be rushed to THE TIMES's offices, where they will be quickly manifolded and distributed all over the capital by a special squad of cyclists.

As soon as these arrangements were made known by announcements, posted up in the places mentioned, scores of inquirers came to THE TIMES Information Bureau to learn how they could get the figures of the election first. Many of them announced their intention of spending the whole night in THE TIMES's rooms after the restaurants and hotels were closed. Several persons who are in the provinces asked that they be informed by telegraph and telephone.

Several Paris newspapers will rely on THE TIMES bulletins of the voting for their early and late editions.

At THE TIMES's offices themselves, which will be open all Tuesday night, the details of the voting and the final results will be prominently displayed, both on the street by means of an illuminated screen and in the reading and writing rooms. The initiative of THE TIMES in thus being first to give the news of the election to the French capital is greatly praised by Americans here, all of whom, of course, are taking the keenest interest in every stage of to-morrow's contest.

PRESIDENT IN OHIO TALKS PROSPERITY

Makes Several Rear-Platform Speeches to Crowds on Way to Cincinnati.

AVOIDS POLITICAL ARGUMENT

Will Play Golf To-day, Cast His Ballot, and Get Election Returns at Brother's Home.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 4.—President Taft arrived in Cincinnati shortly before 8 o'clock to-night after a twelve-hour ride across Ohio, during which he appeared on the rear platform of his private car to speak to station crowds more than a dozen times. He was driven immediately to the home of his brother, C. P. Taft, where he will stop until Wednesday afternoon.

One of the largest crowds of the day greeted the President at the station here, and to the blare of a brass band, the cheers of his fellow-citizens, and in a blaze of red fire he was driven to his brother's home. To-morrow the President expects to play golf on the links of the Cincinnati Country Club, cast his ballot, and then watch the returns come in.

Although he spoke during the day to thousands, the President refrained from talking politics. He spoke of the proposed farmers' banks and the duty of every citizen to exercise his suffrage to-morrow, but he avoided any personal plea. He came nearest to politics at Columbus, where a crowd was waiting at the station.

As the President started to speak the engineer in a nearby locomotive blew his whistle.

"That must be a Bull Moose whistle," shouted a bystander.

"I think it is," said the President, with a smile. "It makes enough noise."

Continuing his speech, the President said:

"I don't intend to ask you for your votes——"

"You don't have to," interrupted a man in the crowd. "We're all for you here."

"Well," continued the President, with a laugh, "if there are enough of you we will win."

At Painesville the President said:

"I want to congratulate you on every evidence that I see of the prosperity that is spread through your entire community. The statistics of our foreign and domestic trade are startling, and they give every evidence that we are going on to greater and greater material growth and prosperity. That is no reason why we should stop in attempting improvements, but it is a reason why we should be philosophical and accept what is coming without grumbling and asuming that everything is bad.

"Your neighbor, Myron T. Herrick, has delved into the question of increasing the credit of the farming community, with a view to enabling farmers to better equip their farms and borrow money at a rate of from 4 to 5 per cent., instead of from 7 to 8 per cent. That does not sound altruistic, but it is real business, for the benefit of the entire community, because, my friends, our mouths are increasing with a great deal more certainty than the production of our fields, and if we go on as we are now for fifty years we will have to get our food somewhere else. Now, what we ought to do is to learn how to make our fields produce more. One of the means of doing so is to enable the farmers to get the best equipment and the best machinery. They cannot do it unless they borrow money at a lower rate of interest, and if we can by banks, and co-operative arrangements among them, make their security sufficient to attract capital at 4 and 5 per cent., it will be a tremendous benefit not only to them, but to all the country."

Both the Republican and Progressive National and State campaigns practically came to a close here on Saturday night, and, with the exception of a few minor meetings here and there, these two parties will do nothing to-day but play a waiting game.

The Democrats, who announced that they would continue the campaign up to the very minute that the polls opened, are fulfilling their announcement.

Manufacturers

IT TAKES A LONG TIME to enumerate all the savings you would enjoy by operating in an industrial building.

IT TAKES A LONGER TIME to convince you of these savings if the buildings are not conveniently located. 600,000 square feet of floor space rented for manufacturing purposes in the past eight months is a fair recommendation for our location.

ALL LEADERS EXPECT A RECORD VOTE HERE

Registration in City of 700,000 and Three-Cornered Contest Will Bring Out Most of Them.

LAST WORDS OF CHAIRMEN

McCombs Praises Wilson's Conduct of the Campaign—Plans for Receiving Returns.

With bright skies promised for to-day and a three-cornered fight for the Presidency of the United States to stir the voters, the local leaders of all parties said yesterday that they expected a record vote cast at the polls in this city to-day. More than 700,000 persons have registered in the five boroughs of the city. As a general rule about 10 per cent. of the registered voters stay away from the polls, but it was stated yesterday that the great interest in the outcome of the election which prevails in all the political camps may tend to cut down that percentage a great deal.

The polls will open at 6 o'clock this morning and will remain open until 5 o'clock in the evening. The leaders of all political parties yesterday sent word to their district workers to bend their utmost effort toward getting the vote out early, and it is fully expected that more than half of the vote in to-day's contest in this city will be cast before noon.

At the various political headquarters in this city preparations were being made yesterday to close up shop, now that the activities of the campaign are over and only the final and decisive battle at the polls remains. There was no let up on the part of the candidates, however. The three Gubernatorial nominees were making speeches up to a late hour last night. William Sulzer, the Democratic nominee, touring Long Island; Oscar S. Straus, the Bull Moose candidate, addressing a mass meeting at Carnegie Hall, and Job E. Hedges, the Republican candidate for Governor, addressing a series of meetings in the Bronx.

Nor were the three leaders in the National fight idle. They closed one of the most vigorous campaigns in the history of this country by speechmaking on the very eve of election. President Taft was addressing audiences from a train that carried him through his home State, Ohio, on his way to Cincinnati, where he is to vote to-day. Gov. Woodrow Wilson addressed Democratic meetings at Passaic and Paterson in his own State. Col. Roosevelt made a speech at Mineola, L. I., and wound up last night by addressing a mass meeting of his "neighbors" at Oyster Bay.

McComb's Praise of Wilson.

At Democratic National headquarters yesterday Chairman William F. McCombs made a few last remarks. He said:

"The argument is exhausted. We appeal with absolute confidence to the ballot. The Democratic Party richly deserves success. The people will see that it wins in overwhelming emphasis of approval. The campaign has been clean. Not a bitter word, not an abusive sentence has come from our candidate. Not a tainted dollar has been received. Not a doubtful dollar has been expended. No issue has been evaded. No question remains unanswered. The Democratic nominee has met the people face to face with open and frank expression. The people and the nominee have learned to know each other and to trust each other.

"Above all things, the campaign has been educative. Woodrow Wilson as he is would be the surest argument to induce his popular support.

A number of telegrams were received from State Chairmen from all over the country voicing the prediction that the Democratic ticket in their States would be successful. Here are a few:

G. D. McArthur of Fargo, N. D.: "My best judgment is that Wilson will carry North Dakota by 10,000 plurality."

R. B. Wyckoff, Webster City, Iowa: "Iowa safe. Watch out for New York."

James D. Phelan, San Francisco, Cal.: "Conditions satisfactory. Taft Republicans are coming over, apparently, in a body. Believe State will go for Wilson. Women only uncertain faction."

Thomas P. Rieley, Boston, Mass.: "Massachusetts will go for Wilson by 45,000."

J. S. P. Wilson, Lewiston, Me.: "The fight in Maine is between Wilson and Roosevelt, with probable vote of Wilson 55,000, Roosevelt 45,000, and Taft 20,000. We are confident of victory."

Leaders' Plans for Returns.

Chairman William F. McCombs of the Democratic National Committee will receive election returns at a private suite in the Waldorf which will be connected with Gov. Wilson's home in Princeton by private wire.

Mrs. Taft will receive election returns as the guest of Chairman Hilles of the Republican National Committee and Mrs. Hilles at the Hotel Manhattan.

Under the same roof will be gathered the Bull Moose leaders, who will receive their election returns in the state apartment at the Manhattan. Senator Joseph M. Dixon, National Bull Moose Chairman; George W. Perkins, head of the Progressive Executive Committee, and Gov. Hiram W. Johnson of California, Vice Presidential nominee on the Progressive ticket, will be at the Bull Moose headquarters there. State Chairman William H. Hotchkiss of the Progressives will receive the returns at Progressive State headquarters, 16 East Twenty-eighth Street.

Returns will be received also at Democratic State headquarters and at Tammany Hall by the Democratic leaders, while the Republican leaders in State and city will receive the election news at their respective headquarters.

All the campaign managers expressed themselves as confident of victory. Senator Dixon said last night that a fatal error on the part of the Republicans was their failure to name a Vice Presidential candidate prior to election. He said it would cost them thousands of votes.

"The people of this country are not going to subscribe to a blind pool in the matter of the Presidential succession," said Senator Dixon. "I again repeat it, that the avalanche of votes for Roosevelt and Johnson to-morrow will stagger the old-time politician."

"It's all over but the shouting," said George W. Perkins at Progressive headquarters in the Manhattan. "We have organized a party and put our cause before the people in three months, and the reports we have received show that the people to-morrow intend to accept the kind of government the Progressive Party offers them. Roosevelt and Johnson will be elected."

William Barnes, Jr., Chairman of the Republican State Committee, departed last night for Albany, in order to vote. Before starting he had this to say regarding the election:

"The last few days of the campaign have indicated a strong drift toward Taft and Hedges. I have no hesitancy in predicting that the sound common sense of the people of this State will assert itself to-day and that the candidates of the old, conservative, and reasoning Republican Party will have a plurality ranging from 40,000 to 50,000 and that the Legislature will be Republican in both branches."

Election returns are to be announced at the Hotel Astor in a new manner. Announcers, such as are used in the Pennsylvania Terminal, are to be installed in all five dining rooms. In addition to this, there will be a system of "telautographs," so that those in far corners may hear.

One of the latest innovations in receiving election returns will be provided at the Young Men's Hebrew Association, at Ninety-second Street and Lexington Avenue. The returns will be received by direct wire and read to the young men and women in the auditorium, where there will be a musical entertainment by a band of fifty pieces. After the entertainment there will be a dance in the gymnasium.

COURTS READY FOR FRAUDS.

District Attorney's Office to be Open To-day—Few Indictments So Far.

District Attorney Whitman and the Magistrates are making elaborate preparations against election frauds to-day. Besides having his office open all day, Mr. Whitman will assign an Assistant District Attorney to each of the Magistrate's Courts to prosecute the cases brought in.

William J. Burns of the Burns Detective Agency was closeted with Mr. Whitman for a long time yesterday and gave him a list of persons who, he was informed, had registered illegally. After Mr. Burns had left, Mr. Whitman said:

"Conditions as to registration are better than I have ever seen them. Only seven indictments have been found by the Grand Jury."

Mr. Whitman would make no statement as to the business Mr. Burns had with him, but it was learned that many of the cases the detective presented were found to have already been investigated and to be either due to clerical errors or groundless.

Assistant District Attorney Medalie, who has been handling most of the cases brought to the District Attorney's office so far, said yesterday that a peculiar situation had arisen with regard to the police. By order of Mayor Gaynor they are not to approach within 100 feet of the polls. This has caused the Police Captains to wonder how they are to serve the warrants sent to them. The order says that the police may either serve the warrant before the man named in it votes, or may wait until he has voted.

Forty-five warrants were sent to Police Headquarters by Mr. Medalie yesterday, but they were immediately returned, with a request that he tell the police how to serve them. Mr. Medalie sent them back with the information that they were to serve the warrants if the men mentioned appeared at the polls.

The Honest Voters' Association informed Mr. Medalie yesterday that they would have men at all the polls to arrest those for whom warrants have been issued. They will be assisted by the watchers assigned to polling places by the political parties.

Judge Foster, in swearing in the Grand Jurors for the November term of General Sessions yesterday, warned them to be very careful in their handling of election cases.

Judge Foster is going to sit to-day to hear any political cases that may arise, and will accept bail in all cases, so that the man arrested cannot be deprived of his liberty until it is shown that he voted illegally.

HEDGES WARNS TAMMANY.

"I'll Be Elected and Make 'Em Go to Work," He Says.

Job E. Hedges, Republican candidate for Governor, was well received last night at Abingdon Square, where he spoke to 400 persons. Mr. Hedges was interrupted frequently by applause, particularly when he referred to Tammany Hall.

"When I get up to Albany," Mr. Hedges told the crowd, 'I'm going to send some of those Tammany Hall men back to New York and let them go to work. Real work, I mean."

Mr. Hedges was very hoarse, and could not be heard by those standing at the outer edge of the crowd. He said he wanted everybody to get acquainted with him, as he was going to be the next Governor of the State.

Charles P. Robinson was the Chairman of the meeting, and the speakers, in addition to Mr. Hedges, were William H. Wadhams, Fred C. Tanner, E. Crosby Kindelberger, Francis R. Stoddard, Henry B. Ketchum, and Alderman Henry Curran.

Mr. Hedges had intended to speak at several other meetings in the upper part of the city, but his automobile broke down and he was unable to keep those engagements.

beams from Twenty-third to Fiftieth Street, resting in turn on Uncle Sam, the little children in the donkey cart, the G. O. P. elephant, and the can-tailed Bull Moose.

The parade was joined by a contingent of the Wilson Italian Club in Times Square, and moved to Fifty-seventh Street, where it dispersed eastward and westward. Not a surface car moved on Broadway throughout the two hours that it required the procession to reach its northern terminus.

In the confusion of disbanding the parade several men who had been hired to attend the lights on the floats said they were unable to find the men who had promised to pay them for their services. Frank Taylor, a machinist; James Paul, a painter, and Alfred Purkis, a laborer, who live in the Mills Hotel at Bleecker Street, said thirty men had been hired at the hotel and promised $1 for their services for the evening. Forty others had been engaged at Coney Island, they said, and promised $1.50 each to assist at the floats.

Some of the men called up the State and National Democratic Headquarters, and were advised to present their claims to-day to the men who were responsible for operating the floats.

ENDS CAMPAIGN IN PASSAIC.

Wilson in His Closing Speech Talks on State Issues.

"Justice will be lifted high in New Jersey as in the rest of the Nation. We shall have a reign of fairness and equity and peace at Trenton as at Washington." These were Gov. Wilson's final words last night in the closing speech of his campaign in Passaic, N. J., after another speech in Paterson.

In Paterson he dined at the Hamilton Club and was taken through streets lined deep with enthusiastic people. It was an old-fashioned rally, with brass bands, a parade, and red fire. In both his addresses the Governor expressed the utmost confidence in the outcome, so far as he personally was concerned.

The Governor said he was not thinking of the Presidency but of what New Jersey was going to do for herself. He advocated the election of a full Democratic ticket and paid his respects to "Tom" McCran, Speaker of the House of Assembly last year, by saying that while he personally admired and liked him, still he was not a believer in progressive policies and was not the man to send to the Senate. He said he knew the force behind McCran and that they were the ones that had brought the State into disrepute.

Gov. Wilson praised Congressman "Billy" Hughes, who received the popular vote at the primaries for United States Senator. "Bob" Bremner, a candidate for Congress, received great applause when the Governor advocated his election.

He said the people of the United States would be safer under a Democratic Administration than any other. He said all the panics since the civil war had been brought about under Republican Administrations as a result of our antiquated and outworn currency and banking system.

"The question is, who shall be permitted to carry on these reforms, who is ready to do this work for the people," he started to say, and was interrupted by cries of "Wilson."

"No, no, that isn't the moral, that's not it," replied the Governor. "No one man can do this job. It can be done only with the backing of all good men of the United States. And to stand still is an absolute surrender to the special interests which we shall destroy. I must have your support. You must back me up. To defeat the Democratic Party is to postpone the day of reform."

Gov. Wilson took issue with those who have blamed the Democratic Party for panics.

"I have not heard any Democrat propose," he declared, "to touch any honest or legitimate thing in business at any point. And I tell you that the people of this country will be just as safe in their business under a Democratic Administration."

Many persons wanted to shake hands with Governor Wilson, and whenever one slipped by the police the Governor was ready with a cordial greeting. One little girl who wore a button on which were the words "Votes for Women," stepped up to the Governor:

"You are going to be highly honored to-morrow, Governor," she said, "and when you get to the White House please don't forget the women, will you?"

The Governor smiled and shook her hands, then as she walked away he turned to Capt. McDonald and said:

"Captain, I guess we can't escape from an unexpected assault like that."

While he was dining at the Hamilton Club, the Governor's former secretary, Joseph Tumulty, came into the room, smiling broadly.

"A boy this time," he announced. "He was born at 4 o'clock."

The Governor was at the other end of the long table, but he jumped up and hurried down the room to shake hands with Tumulty and congratulate him.

Gov. Wilson reached his home in Princeton at midnight and retired immediately.

FIND A BIG COLONY BROUGHT ON TO VOTE

Cry Is Out That 5,000 Men Are Here for Fraud at the Polls—Detective Burns Rebuked.

HIS ADVERTISEMENT WRONG

Four Months, Not Six, Residence in County Required of Voters—Bull Moose Watchers Have Orders.

John R. Voorhis, State Superintendent of Elections; J. D. Britt, President of the Board of Elections, and the various political managers were stirred up yesterday over the announcement made by Detective William J. Burns in offering a reward for the arrest of persons accused of illegal voting that a residence of six months in a county is required before a person can vote. It was pointed out that Detective Burns had made a mistake inasmuch as a residence of only four months in a county is required, and Supt. Voorhis called upon the detective to correct this statement. This is Supt. Voorhis's letter:

William J. Burns, Park Row Building, New York City.

Sir: I observe in the newspapers of this day an advertisement over your name, wherein it is stated that no person can vote at the impending election unless he has lived in the county for six months. As the election laws of this State require four months' residence in the county as a qualification for voters, the above publication is incorrect, very misleading, and liable to cause legal voters to refrain from exercising their rights as citizens.

I, therefore, hereby notify you to desist immediately from the further publication of such erroneous statement, and cause the said error to be at once corrected in all of the publications wherein the same has appeared, to the end that no person entitled to vote who has resided in the county for four months shall be intimidated or led to refrain from voting because of such false statement.

JOHN R. VOORHIS,
State Superintendent of Elections.

Detective Burns called upon District Attorney Whitman yesterday and discussed what should be done at the polls to-day.

"I'll have the crooked ones so scared that few of them are going to vote to-morrow," he told Mr. Whitman.

About seventy warrants charging illegal registration were signed yesterday by Chief Magistrate William McAdoo at the request of District Attorney Whitman, who remarked that never before in his experience had so few warrants been applied for up to the day before election. Edward R. Finch, acting President of the Honest Ballot Association, gave a statement in which he said:

One of the recent reports received by the Honest Ballot Association, from William J. Burns indicates that 5,000 men have been brought to this city by various political bosses for the purpose of voting fraudulently at the polls to-day. These imported voters, known as "tin soldiers" are "planted" in a row of furnished room houses along Stuyvesant Street, also along East Eighteenth Street, West Eleventh, West Thirty-seventh, and West Thirty-sixth Streets. A good many of the houses in which they have been placed are known to be disorderly houses and gambling places, which have been many times raided, and which in the past have been used for purposes of election fraud. There is a particularly large colony along Fourth, Ninth, Tenth, and Eleventh Streets, east of Third Avenue.

A prize fighter and his gang have been employed to start fights in the vicinity of Fifteenth Street and Eighth Avenue, with the understanding that if they are successful in this bellicose purpose, each member of the gang is to receive $10, whereas if peace reigns they are to get only $3. The prize fighter himself is to receive $25 in any case.

Both the "quick and the dead" are eligible as voters in the opinion of a certain class of political leaders.

Thomas F. Devine, Fusion candidate for State Senator in the Fifteenth Senatorial District, was arraigned before Magistrate Breen in the West Side Court yesterday charged with false registration. He was released in $1,000 bail for trial in General Sessions. He was arrested Sunday night in front of 327 West Eighty-fifth Street, where his wife and family live, by John Smith, Deputy Superintendent of the State Bureau of Elections, on a warrant issued on Saturday by Chief Magistrate William McAdoo.

Devine registered at 101 West Sixty-third Street, which is in the Sixteenth Election District of the Thirteenth Assembly, one of the three Assembly Districts composing the Fifteenth Senatorial. The Eighty-fifth Street address is in the Seventeenth Senatorial District.

George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Progressive Party, announced yesterday that Progressive watchers would call policemen and have any fraudulent voters arrested. Mr. Perkins gave out a statement in which he said:

"Mr. Waldo told us that the police should be on duty at all polling places for the purpose of performing full police duty on Election Day, and that anybody, inspector, watcher, or private citizen, had the right to summon a policeman for the purpose of performing such full duty, and that the police would, of course, promptly respond to such a call."

The Oldest New Yorker Cannot Remember A Floor-Covering Event of Equal Importance with This

Sale of JOHN & JAMES DOBSON'S Retail Stock of $175,000 Worth of Rugs, Carpets and Linoleums

It needs but a moment's reflection to realize that $175,000 worth of Floor-coverings means a very considerable stock.

This is precisely the point that we wish to emphasize about this Dobson Sale.

Many a fine old business has dried up and blown away, and its stock, when it came to a final disposal, was only a ghost of its former self.

An Extraordinarily Varied Stock

But here is a retail Carpet and Rug Store which for more than a third of a century has been a household word with New Yorkers, which we bought out completely, as much to its own surprise as anybody else's, when its business was in full swing and its stock maintained at the top notch.

As a result, it is just like walking into a Rug and Carpet Store noted for its fine stocks and being able to select any sort of carpet or any make of rug you want at a very handsome saving instead of paying the full price for it.

Preparations for Rapid Service

We have made remarkable preparations to have this event achieve the success it deserves—to display the splendid goods adequately and to serve properly the tremendous crowds that we know will respond to the announcement.

More than 800 feet of aisle space—four city blocks—is devoted to the display on the Sixth floor and in the Subway Store.

Many Rugs in Notable Makes

The roster of famous makes of Floor-coverings represented in this sale is complete. You will find among the Rugs—

Superb Royal Wiltons from the Bigelow Carpet Company
Royal Kashan and Savalan Rugs from Thos. Develon & Sons
Splendid Selkirk Wilton Rugs from Schofield, Mason & Company
As well as the Products of Many Other Well-known Mills

Many Carpets in Plain Colors

A notable feature in the collection of Carpets is the quantity in plain colors, for which the demand is so great, in every grade, from Royal Wilton to Ingrain. So many varieties of floor-coverings, in their different qualities, are involved, that it is an impossibility to quote prices for the Sixth Floor Display.

Remarkable Prices in the Subway Store

We have assembled in the Subway Store the most extraordinary groups of Rugs and Carpets that have ever been known at their prices, and although we cannot tell at this writing, in view of the certain enormous demand, exactly what will be here today, you are quite safe in expecting fine choosing among the following:

Carpet Remnants at 25c and 50c a Yard
Carpets in Short Lengths for Rugs, 15c and 25c Each

ROOT AND OTHERS ASSAIL ROOSEVELT

Milburn and Marshall with Him in Saying Colonel Misrepresented Court Decisions.

QUOTE FROM HIS SPEECHES

And Accuse Him of Misleading Voters About New York Cases That Aroused Progressive Leader.

Such eminent legal authorities as Elihu Root, Louis Marshall, John G. Milburn, and William D. Guthrie in a point statement made public yesterday, took issue with Col. Roosevelt in his attack on certain decisions of the Court of Appeals in his speech at Madison Square Garden on Friday night. The four lawyers accused Col. Roosevelt of glaring inaccuracies, made by him with a view of misleading the voters. Here is the statement in full:

"The criticism of the New York Court of Appeals in Mr. Roosevelt's speech at Madison Square Garden Friday evening contains so many inaccurate statements calculated to mislead voters that it is fit and proper and we deem it our duty to state the true facts in regard to the decisions he assails.

"The first case that Mr. Roosevelt criticises is the Tenement House case, (98 N. Y. 98,) in which a man named Jacobs was prosecuted criminally under an act of the Legislature for attempting to carry on his trade of cigarmaking in his own home. He lived in the City of New York with his wife and two children in an apartment of seven rooms in a building in which there were three other apartments of equal size. He made cigars in rooms of this apartment wholly separated from the sleeping and cooking rooms, and the undisputed testimony showed that there was no odor of tobacco in any of the sleeping or cooking rooms, and that the surrounding conditions were entirely sanitary. In fact, Jacobs was carrying on his trade in his home for the support of himself and his family under conditions much healthier than if he had been compelled to work in a crowded factory, particularly in 1884 and 1885, when there were no such sanitary regulations as now prevail in factories under the operation of our present Public Health and Labor laws. The Board of Health of the City of New York officially declared in speaking of this act 'that the health of the tenement house population is not jeopardized by the manufacture of cigars in those houses, that this bill is not a sanitary measure, and that it has not been approved by this board.'

Big Cigar Men Prompted Law.

"The statute, as was well known at the time, was passed in the interest and at the request of the owners of large tobacco factories in the cities of New York and Brooklyn, who sought thereby to suppress the competition of cigar manufacturers at home. It was not an honest health measure at all; it was not designed to protect the health of tobacco workers or to secure cleanliness in connection with the manufacture of tobacco, and it did not contain a single provision tending in any degree to improve conditions of living. The act would have crushed the competition of home workers with the tobacco factories; and, if constitutional, then similar statutes could have been passed with respect to all kinds of home work, and artisans, whether men or women, could have been driven into factories at the dictation of factory owners who had sufficient political influence to secure the necessary legislation.

"Mr. Roosevelt practically asserted Friday evening that the Court of Appeals had declared it unconstitutional for the Legislature to prevent the manufacture of tobacco in 'a home of but one room about 16 feet square, in which there lived two families, one with a boarder.' As a matter of fact, the plain truth is that there was nothing in the decision of the court which in the remotest degree questioned the full power of the Legislature to pass and enforce a statute prohibiting the manufacture of tobacco in sleeping or cooking rooms or under any unhealthy conditions whatever. Since that decision, and without any constitutional amendment whatever, as is well known, the Legislature of the State of New York has repeatedly dealt with the subject of tenement house reform, and has prevented any such conditions as Mr. Roosevelt mentioned.

"The next decision of the Court of Appeals, which Mr. Roosevelt criticised, is that of an adult woman named Knisley, (148 N. Y., 372,) who, while working in a hardware factory in Buffalo, was injured by having her hand crushed in a machine, which had unguarded cog wheels contrary to the statute. As the danger was proved to have been visible and plainly known to her, the court held that, under the long-settled rules of the common law as to contributory negligence and assumption of risks, it was constrained to hold that the plaintiff could not recover, notwithstanding its sympathy for her. In this respect it followed the decisions of the courts of Massachusetts and England under similar statutes. Of course, the court was bound to enforce the law as it conceived it to be.

Col. Roosevelt's Criticism.

"In speaking of this case Mr. Roosevelt on Friday evening said as follows: 'The Court of Appeals threw out the case and declared the law unconstitutional on this ground, that the Legislature could not interfere with the liberty of that girl in losing her arm. * * * The trouble was that they knew law, but didn't know right, and still more, as I have stated, they had arrogated to themselves the right that the people should have—the right to decide what the common sense and justice of the people demand.' Yet there was not one word in the opinion of the Court of Appeals which suggested that the act was unconstitutional, or that the Legislature did not have power to change the common law rule in such cases and to make the employer liable to his injured employes for failure to comply with such a statute. The court has never declared that such a statute would be unconstitutional.

"The next case which Mr. Roosevelt criticised Friday evening is known as the Williams case, (189 N. Y. 131,) in which an act of the Legislature was held unconstitutional, which, in its effect, prevented a woman from working at her trade after 9 o'clock at night, entirely irrespective of the number of hours that she might work or the few occasions upon which she might be so called upon to work at night. In other words, it was made criminal for the employer to permit an adult woman to work at a skilled trade for even one hour a week at night.

"Mr. Roosevelt criticised this decision in the following language: 'Again we passed a law in this State. We found by investigation that in certain factories and sweat shops women are working twelve, and fourteen, and fifteen hours a day and up until after midnight * * * But the Court of Appeals in New York decided that we could not pass that type of law.'

"As matter of fact, the Court of Appeals decided nothing of the kind. It did not hold, or even intimate—and it has never held or intimated—that the Legislature could not limit the number of hours which a woman may work. It had previously decided that the Legislature could limit the hours of labor. The only question before the court was whether an adult female, who had learned the trade of a binder, could be prevented by statute from working at that trade after 9 o'clock at night under perfectly sanitary conditions, even though she might not have worked an hour before night or might only need to work an hour or two at night in emergencies. The underlying or fundamental question was whether women could be driven out of that trade and compelled to seek a livelihood in other occupations for which they were less fitted, for smaller pay, and under infinitely worse conditions.

"Speaking of this same case, Mr. Roosevelt stated in The Saturday Evening Post, published a week ago, under the head of 'The Deceitful Red Herring,' as follows: 'Our platform demands an eight-hour law for women in industries. * * * But the Court of Appeals of New York has said that the ten millions of people of my State have not got that right if they wish to exercise it. In New York the people did not ask for an eight-hour day—asked only for a ten-hour day for women. Then the Court of Appeals said that under their interpretation of the Constitution the small sweatshop keeper or the big factory owner may work haggard women twelve, fourteen, and sixteen hours a day, if he chooses, and we cannot stop it.'

"As a matter of fact, however, which the slightest investigation would have shown, the Court of Appeals has never decided or intimated anything of the kind, and there is to-day a statute of New York limiting the hours of labor of women to 9 hours per day and 54 hours per week. (See Labor Law, Sec. 77.)

"This statute is being enforced daily, and its validity has never been questioned.

Takes Issue on Ives Case.

"The fourth case criticised by Mr. Roosevelt is the Ives case, (201 N. Y. 27,) concerning which he said:

"'Perhaps, friends, the most striking example of the kind of decision against which we are in revolt was rendered in connection with the Workmen's Compensation act, when we passed a law for workmen's compensation practically identical with it in principle, the Federal law that had been declared constitutional by the Supreme Court of the Nation, and which had been declared constitutional by the State courts of Iowa, Oregon, Washington, and other States, and yet on the same language in the Constitution the Court of Appeals declared that the Supreme Court of the Nation was in error, and that the 10,000,000 people of the State of New York have not the power to say that when a brakeman or a switchman was crippled for life, or killed in the discharge of his duty, he should receive compensation for the crippling, or his widow and children should be compensated for his death, if he was killed.

"As matter of fact, neither the Supreme Court of the United States nor the State courts of Iowa or Oregon have passed on any workmen's compensation act, nor has any other State passed an act in its provisions equivalent to the statute which was declared to be unconstitutional by our Court of Appeals. That statute declared the employer bound absolutely to pay his employe certain fixed damages in case of injury, even where the injury is due solely to the employe's own inexcusable negligence, when the employer is entirely blameless and has violated no duty or obligation, and has exercised every degree of diligence and foresight that is conceivable.

"Although the court declared this act unconstitutional, because it arbitrarily took the property of the employer and gave it to the employe, it nevertheless emphatically declared that it was within the power of the Legislature to require of an employer the exercise of the highest degree of diligence for the protection of his employes, to compel the adoption of every possible safeguard that human ingenuity could devise that would tend to the prevention of accidents that it might abrogate the fellow-servants rule, as well as the doctrine of assumed risks, and modify the principle of contributary negligence, to the end that the safety of our workingmen might be promoted.

"The act which the court was called upon to adjudicate contained none of these features. It absolutely ignored the element of fault both on the part of the employer and of the employe, and while the latter was still permitted to bring his common law action to recover damages, the employer was bound, in any event, to pay the statutory compensation. Speaking of this very decision, the National Commission appointed by Congress and the President of the United States, in its recent report, said: 'It may well be argued that legislation which puts upon the employer this naked burden, irrespective of fault, without the compensating circumstance of being relieved in any other direction, is as arbitrary and unreasonable as to fall within the inhibition of the Fifth Amendment against the deprivation of property without due process of law.'"

IN COURT FOR ANNOYING GIRL.

Benjamin Kahn Arrested on the Complaint of Miss Sophie Rosen.

While Sophie Rosen, who is twenty years old and lives at 175 North Fourth Street, Brooklyn, was waiting on the corner of Whipple Street and Broadway Sunday evening for a car, she was annoyed by a young man. Miss Rosen struck the fellow several times, and when Patrolman Mooney of the Clymer Street Station took him to the police station Miss Rosen went with them to enter a complaint.

The youth said he was Benjamin Kahn, a clerk, 18 years old. He was arraigned yesterday morning in the Manhattan Avenue court, and asked for an adjournment, which was granted.

Bridge Foreman Killed by Fall.

Peter Banta, foreman of the ironworkers doing the riveting on the Williamsburg Bridge, fell from one of the suspension cables yesterday afternoon to the roadway, forty feet below. He died before the arrival of an ambulance. Banta was 42 years old and lived at 76 Seventy-second Street, Bay Ridge. He had been in the Department of Bridges for twelve years

COLONEL'S LAST WORD AN ATTACK ON ROOT

Warren, in which the court refers to the Knisely case, and says it has been largely qualified, if not virtually overruled, by a subsequent decision, and then proceeds to render a decision flatly against it. In the course of this decision Chief Justice Cullen says:

"'Speaking of decisions such as that in the Knisely case, there seems at the present day to be an effort by constitutional amendments to render the master liable to his employe for injury received in his employment, although the master has been guilty of no fault whatever, and I feel that such effort is in no small measure due to the tendency evinced at times in the court to relieve the master, although concededly at fault, from liability to his employe, on the theory that the latter assumed the risk of master's fault.'

"The next time Mr. Root rushes to the defense of the Court of Appeals he had better find out where the Court of Appeals stands. The big lawyers who are employed by the very corporations that are at fault come to the front and assail our movement, and say they are defending the courts, and that they are defending the law. Defending the law? They are defending a perversion of the law, and they themselves have been responsible for the perversion, and now they are defending the courts for the perversion of justice for which they themselves are responsible, they, the counsel hired by these great corporations, they are the attorneys of the very privilege which we are seeking to cut out of our industrial life; they stand for precisely that perversion of justice, that substitution of legalism for justice against which we protest."

Woman Moves Crowd to Tears.

The meeting was one of the most fervent of this fervent campaign. All the talk before the Colonel came in was of social reform, of the wrongs inflicted on industrial workers, and of the need for a new spirit in public life. Alice Carpenter of Boston, who is a speaker of force and eloquence, got the crowd into such a mood that many of them had tears in their eyes, yet she confined herself almost entirely to statistics on the mortality due to defective laws. W. Bourke Cockran, catching the temper of the crowd, devoted his speech wholly to the question of social and industrial welfare. The Rev. George E. Farrar of the Presbyterian Church, presided over the meeting, which opened with the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." After this Dr. Whitman of the Baptist Church returned thanks to God for Roosevelt's recovery. Everybody stood with bowed heads, while the pastor with the affectionate and neighborly note that is observable in the meetings down here, thanked God that the Colonel would soon be able to see that the old comradeship and affection was his again the same as ever.

Miss Carpenter struck up a lighter note at the beginning. She offered a conundrum, she had heard, "What is the difference between Buffalo Bill and Taft?" "Buffalo Bill has a show," was her answer, but in a moment she swung into the serious vein which characterized the whole meeting and from that time on she had the audience as never Bourke Cockran could hold it. Most of the time there was a breathless silence in the house. You could hear a pin drop. When the tension was relaxed for a moment the cheering was wild.

She wound up her speech as Senator Beveridge did when he nominated Roosevelt at the Bull Moose Convention in Chicago:

> He has sounded forth the trumpet
> That shall never call retreat,
> He is sifting out the hearts of men,
> Beneath His judgment seat
> Oh, be swift, my soul, to answer Him,
> Be jubilant, my feet,
> For God is marching on.

Other speakers were Alexander Blue, the candidate for the State Senate, and Bainbridge Colby.

Ice Water on the Colonel.

The platform at Mineola collapsed just as Col. Roosevelt appeared on it this afternoon and upset a good many people, but no one was hurt. The Colonel was thrown slightly off his balance, and was splashed by the water pitcher, which distributed itself in so many different directions that it dampened a dozen people. The episode did not interrupt the cheering, which went right on for a minute or more before the Colonel could get a chance to shout: "I assure you that the Progressive platform won't break down."

The Colonel had promised to devote this last day of the campaign to his Long Island neighbors, and he spoke at Mineola in the afternoon and here in the evening. At both meetings Bourke Cockran, who is a candidate for Congress in this district, accompanied him.

He motored over to Mineola at the rate of forty-five miles an hour, and the reception he got was one in which the enthusiasm was mixed with neighborly interest. An automobile parade which circled Nassau County had been arranged, and more than 100 automobiles were in line. They included those of various organizations from different towns, and one belonged to the "Flying Squadron," an organization of stump speakers who have been darting around the country in a machine.

At the head of this procession was Roland Lamb of Freeport, who stood up in his machine and led the rest in the singing of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." The machines were all decorated and draped with the National colors, and some were full of Autumn leaves, and as this seemingly endless procession wound its way around the country roads and through the towns and villages, singing the old Sunday School hymn, it looked stranger than anything ever before seen in politics.

The whole parade was lined up to greet the Colonel when he came dashing into Mineola. He was to speak in a great tent, which held more than 1,000 persons. Before he came several speakers had made short talks, one coming from California and another from Alaska. The latter, Frederick M. Chase, had an entirely new version of the origin of the break between Roosevelt and Taft. It was that Taft had betrayed Roosevelt's conservation policies, and he instanced the appointment of Ballinger, the Controller Bay incident, the withdrawal of the coalfields of Alaska from the forest reserve, and other incidents. W. Bourke Cockran followed and lambasted the press.

"Wherever," he said, "the newspaper press is overwhelmingly one way, the ballot boxes are overwhelmingly the other. I admit, however, that they have some influence. Whenever a crime occurs that shocks the world that can be explained in no other way, you will find on searching the culprit's clothes an extract from one of these papers that is found to be the guiding influence that led him to the perpetration of his infamy. But the consequences it produces are in the main so beneficial that I am not sure I would want to punish the editor too severely. The opposition of the press is the surest passport to the confidence of the community."

Col. Roosevelt arrived while Cockran was speaking, and got the usual wild, ear-splitting yell of greeting. In this case, as mentioned before, the political frenzy was mixed with a personal friendliness for Neighbor Roosevelt. He waved his hand, nodded and smiled, and turned to speak to Cockran, when the platform suddenly sagged down in the middle and hit the ground.

Many were thrown off their feet, among them the Colonel, but quick as lightning he caught a chair and saved himself. The table at which he was to speak was hurled down, and the pitcher of ice water upon it broke and splashed all over the Colonel and those near him. It was due, as such accidents invariably are, to the lack of judgment displayed by the local authorities. They build a stand capable of accommodating a certain number of people, and then think their duty is accomplished; they never take any measures to prevent other persons from crowding upon it in large numbers.

Very few people left the platform after the accident, and the place of those who did was immediately taken by others. The middle of the platform now rested upon the ground, while the back and front sloped up into the air, so that the Colonel had to make his speech from an inclined plane. He has recovered the full use of his right arm, and he did all his gesticulating with it. There was little in what he said that he has not repeated many times in this campaign, but there was one new and striking phrase. It came when he was making his familiar argument that the reforms he advocates must come or the reactionaries will have more stringent ones to fear.

"I warn the reactionaries," he cried, "that this is a case of the Sybilline books. If they will let me I will go to work gradually. If they will not a few years from now we will go to work a good deal faster than they will like"

Col. Roosevelt received a visit to-day which pleased him immensely. He used to have at Sagamore Hill a gardener and general superintendent named William Gardner. This man was with him for five years, and then went to Manitoba, Canada, and bought a farm. He has been out there for several months. To-day he arrived in Oyster Bay, having traveled all the way from Manitoba that he might be able to cast his vote for the Colonel. The Colonel was greatly touched when Gardner arrived at Sagamore Hill and told him about it.

SULZER APPEALS TO SUFFOLK

Ends Campaign Trying to Win Strong Republican County.

From 9 o'clock yesterday morning until 10 o'clock last night William Sulzer, the Democratic candidate for Governor, talked to welcoming crowds at twenty places on Long Island. Then Mr. Sulzer came to this borough and addressed three big open-air meetings. It was after midnight when he reached his home as fresh and strong, apparently, as when he left it in the early morning for the last day of campaigning. The greater number of the speeches on Long Island were made in Suffolk County, which is normally so strongly Republican as to insure the election of Republican candidates even when there are dissensions in the Republican ranks.

But the Democratic candidates in the county this year are so sure of winning that they begged Mr. Sulzer to give them a hand in a fight which they think will make a new page in the political history of the State. It was said that, while there used to be three Republican votes to one Democratic vote in the county, the Bull Moosers have disrupted the county organization. On the other hand, the Democratic Party is working in harmony for the first time in nearly two years. The old quarrel as to which were the regular and which the irregular Democrats passed away when Mr. Sulzer was nominated.

Every one of the speeches made by Mr. Sulzer was listened to by all of the male population of the various towns and villages. There were many women at some of the meetings, and when this occurred Mr. Sulzer talked mainly to the women. At Mineola there were about sixty women in the crowd. Mr. Sulzer made an earnest appeal to them. He said the women realized the hardships of trying to make a 50 per cent. increase in wages cover a 200 per cent. increase in the cost of living.

At Southold, Greenport, Freehold, Jamaica, and Riverhead big crowds came to greet Mr. Sulzer and to assure him that Suffolk County would vote for him.

Held for Buying a Vote.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 4.—On the charge of bribing a carpenter to vote for him at the recent primaries, Charles Kessler of Absecon, a candidate for Freeholder on the Republican ticket, was held under $1,000 bail for the Grand Jury tonight. He pleaded not guilty.

Pack 15 Suits and Overcoat

In an Indestructo Wardrobe Trunk

They Will Travel Safely and Uncrushed

For seven years the Indestructo people have apparently ignored the insistent demands of both dealers and travelers.

Immediately after the general acceptance of the Indestructo trunk all over the country, calls began to come in from all quarters for an Indestructo Wardrobe Trunk.

It was found that much thought and study would be necessary to adapt the Indestructo principle to such a trunk.

Success crowned their efforts after much careful experimenting, and today the Indestructo Wardrobe Trunk offers wider attractiveness and convenience than any other similar trunk on the market.

The Indestructo Wardrobe Trunk is made in all styles and sizes, including the Steamer Wardrobe.

In the standard size—45 inches high—it is possible to pack 15 men's suits and an overcoat, in addition to collars, shirts, hat and other accessories.

The exclusive feature which has attracted considerable attention is the automatic locking device, which permits of securing both the drawer and wardrobe sections without closing the heavy compartments of the trunk.

You should really see this remarkable trunk. It is the most complete wardrobe trunk ever offered to the trade.

WILSON IS FAVORITE IN FINAL BETTING

Mostly Small Wagers Here at 3 and 4 to 1—Little Taft or Roosevelt Money.

SULZER FAVORED IN STATE

Some of His Backers Give 4 to 1—Wisconsin Betting Turns to Wilson in Last Hours.

There was little election betting yesterday either in the financial district or about the cafés. For the most part small sums were wagered, and in every case the odds favored Gov. Wilson generally at 3 to 1, although some bets of 4 to 1 were made. In the financial district there was more betting excitement on the Curb than anywhere else; in fact, there was more activity on the Curb yesterday than there had been at any time during the campaign. Most of the money wagered was on the chance that Taft would not be elected, and the odds against his election were quoted at 1 to 5. One bet of $2,000 to $100 was made that the President would not be re-elected.

As a result of the day's activities on the Curb one man stands to win $20,000 if Wilson is elected, having made a number of bets at an average of 3 to 1. One of the biggest bets of the day was a wager of $2,000 to $1,000 that Roosevelt would carry eight States. The men with Roosevelt money wanted to bet 1 to 5 that their candidate would be successful. In Fred Schumm's café, where a few desultory bets have been made from day to day, one man had $15,000 which he wanted to wager at odds of 1 to 5 that Taft would be elected. There were no takers.

Betting on the State situation fluctuated considerably. As a rule the odds quoted on the street and in the cafés were 3½ to 1 that Sulzer would win. In a few cases, for small amounts, the Sulzer men gave odds as high as 4 to 1.

There were several even money bets that Taft's popular vote in the State would be equal to Roosevelt's. The men with Hedges money wanted odds of 1 to 4 and in a few cases got it. The betting on Straus to win was 1 to 3. There were also a few even money bets that Straus would beat Hedges. One man in Schumm's Café bet $500 even that Sulzer would carry the State by over 50,000 plurality. Another bet of $500, even money, was made that Straus would receive more votes than Hedges. There was one bet of $1,000, even money, that Taft's popular vote in the State would be greater than Roosevelt's.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 4.—With Election Eve came an unexpected change in the betting in Milwaukee. The sentiment, which had apparently been turning toward Taft, and was practically universal at even terms on the Wisconsin result, suddenly changed to odds in favor of Wilson, 5 to 4 being the rule, with some large bets placed at 4 to 3. The same condition was shown in the betting on the State result, Karel, the Democratic Gubernatorial candidate, having the same odds in his favor as those offered for Wilson.

This change in sentiment was reflected in the political headquarters, for the Taft managers, while issuing statements predicting that this State would go for Taft, made no pretense of producing figures, saying the result would be close. The Democratic headquarters, however, claim the State for the party's Presidential and Gubernatorial ticket at 30,000 majority. One bet was recorded giving odds that Karel, for Governor, would show a gain of 75,000 votes over the Democratic vote two years ago.

The Progressive Party's claims are that Roosevelt will carry the State, but the other headquarters do not appear to consider Roosevelt a more serious competitor, as far as Wisconsin is concerned, than Debs.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 4.—Advices received here to-day announce that betting odds in Los Angeles have dropped over night, and that now Wilson and Roosevelt are at even money to carry California.

With Roosevelt the only even money chance is south of Tehachapi. A Wilson victory seems a foregone conclusion, as at no time has there been any question that Wilson would not carry the central and northern portions of the State.

Wilson rules a strong 10 to 6 favorite to carry San Francisco, those being the odds posted at Corbett's to-day, with much more Wilson than Roosevelt money in sight.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 4.—Money was to be had on Wilson and on Roosevelt at downtown betting centres tonight, but not a cent was offered on Taft, either on the Pennsylvania vote or on general results.

Late in the evening, however, it developed that Taft money was being used another way. Betting for three days here on the general result has been 5 to 1 on Wilson, but this evening unexpectedly came a lot of offerings around Newell's and other downtown centres of odds of 2 to 1 on Wilson. This money was traced to Taft sources, the object evidently being to create the impression that Wilson had been losing ground. The offerings were gradually withdrawn, and the odds drifted back to 4 to 1 that Wilson would have a majority of the Electoral College.

Roosevelt offerings were practically all on the Pennsylvania result, the favorite odds being 100 to 80 that Roosevelt would carry the State and 2 to 1 that Roosevelt would carry this city and county.

SEATTLE, Nov. 4.—Even money was offered to-night on Roosevelt, and on Ernest Lister, Democratic candidate for Governor, carrying the State against the field.

The ballot is 40 by 30 inches in size, and will be difficult to count. The polls will be open to-morrow from 8 to 8 in incorporated cities, and from 9 to 7 in unincorporated territory.

REINHARDT PLAY UNDER BAN.

English Censor Refuses to License "A Venetian Night."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Lord Chamberlain officially barred the production of Prof. Max Reinhardt's spectacular wordless play, "A Venetian Night," which was to have been performed at the Palace Theatre to-night. The production has been in preparation in Germany for three months past, and has been rehearsed at the Palace for the last two weeks. The Chamberlain's Secretary attended the final rehearsal on Sunday, and, acting on his report, the Chamberlain this afternoon announced that he was unable to license the performance.

The news created consternation at the Palace Theatre, half the audience demanding their money back.

Prof. Reinhardt when interviewed, said that he could not suggest any reason why the license was refused, as the Lord Chamberlain did not tell why he objected to the production. He continued:

"It is an absolutely inoffensive, artistic, and clean play. I have never been connected with anything but artistic stage productions, and would not put my name to any that were not artistic and clean. I am heartbroken about it and willing to pledge my reputation that the production is quite inoffensive."

According to the Palace Theatre management, "A Venetian Night" is a pantomime, partly comedy and partly tragedy. The author is Herr Vollmöller, who is also the author of "The Miracle Pantomime." It tells the story of a young bride, with no affection for her husband, who visits her lover while the bridegroom is celebrating his wedding over the wine cup.

To produce it in London a large company was brought from Berlin.

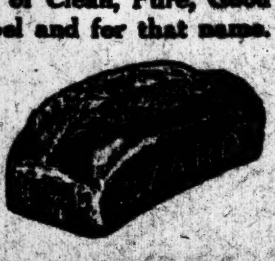
ORDER BLIND BOY DEPORTED.

Father Appeals to Washington and Offers to Put Up a Bond.

Cecil Morris, the blind Irish boy who was brought here on the Cameronia from Glasgow on Sunday morning, was ordered to be deported yesterday by the Special Board of Inquiry at Ellis Island. The boy was escorted by Mrs. Christopher McSweeney, a friend of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Morris, who live at Akron, Ohio, and she will have to go back to Glasgow with him unless the immigration authorities permit Mrs. Morris to take her place.

An appeal has been made to Washington to admit the boy on a bond furnished by his father, who is in the rubber business at Akron, to guarantee that he will not become a public charge.



WARD'S BREAD IS BEST

The Imitation Imp "Plays the Devil"

A good many people have eaten imitation Tip-Top Bread—loaves made to look like Ward's Tip-Top Bread—and they now think that Tip-Top is not so good as it was.

Naturally the imitation loaf is a very poor thing. That is always true of imitations.

100% Pure WARD'S TIP-TOP BREAD 5 and 10c Loaves

Things are not always what they seem. Learn to discriminate. Look closely at the bread you buy. It is important that you get the best. The real Tip-Top now has the name, WARD, baked in on the side of the loaf itself. In justice to yourself, in the name of Clean, Pure, Good Bread, look for our label and for that name.

The Ward Bakeries are open to the public.

Come and see how we make clean, wholesome bread for you.

STRAUS RAPS BARNES IN HIS LAST SPEECH

The Boss Had Said He Would Make a Failure—He Would, for Barnes,

AND LIKEWISE FOR MURPHY

Youth in Audience Interrupts and Asks a Puzzle Question and He Is Answered.

On his final speech-making tour of the city last night, Oscar S. Straus, the Progressive candidate for Governor, addressed a gathering of more than 2,000 persons.

Mr. Straus had outlined something of what the Bull Moose Party proposed to accomplish in effecting more human relations between employer and employe, and in establishing workmen's compensation and minimum wage, when he was interrupted by a youthful voice from the audience.

"May I ask a question?"

Immediately the big audience was thrown into an uproar, and there were cries of "Put him out!" as all eyes were turned in the direction of a youth of apparently 18 or 19 years standing at the head of a column of men filling one of the aisles half way down to the platform.

Mr. Straus pleaded with the audience to let the boy ask his question, but several ushers rushed toward him, caught him by the arm, and tried unsuccessfully to hustle him through the tightly wedged crowd.

The youth stood calmly with his arms folded on his chest, while the ushers struggled and the audience howled. Failing in their attempt to oust the disturber, the ushers and their helpers finally heeded the voice of Mr. Straus, calling to the young man to come forward.

The boy approached the platform amid a din. Mr. Straus called again and again for quiet, and the storm finally melted away into hisses.

"What is your name, young man?" asked the Progressive candidate.

The boy hesitated a moment, and when Mr. Straus told him he would not answer any question from a person who refused to give his name, the young fellow said that his name was Roth. He was then asked where he worked, and he replied that he was in the employ of The Morning Telegraph. He was then told to go on with his question.

With perfect deliberation as he faced Mr. Straus he said in ringing tones:

"My question is this: If Roosevelt had been regularly nominated by the Republican Convention at Chicago, would his declaration of the faith as regards the workmen's compensation and the minimum wage have been incorporated in his present platform?"

Mr. Straus regarded his young questioner a moment and then, somewhat puzzled, answered:

"It certainly would have been incorporated."

Mr. Straus did not arrive at Cooper Union until 10 o'clock. Meanwhile the audience had listened to speeches by Dean George W. Kirchway of the Law School of Columbia University, Arthur Brisbane, Controller Prendergast, and others. When the Progressive candidate at last appeared on the platform he was greeted with a demonstration that was hushed only when word was passed around that Mr. Straus had still another meeting to address. Chairman Josiah Strong somewhat impatiently asked the gathering if they would not prefer hearing Mr. Straus speak to listening to themselves shout.

"I thank you from the bottom of my heart," began Mr. Straus, "for this inspiring reception you have given to me, which betokens the fact that I am to serve you two years at Albany. Well, with modesty, I think I can carry on the duties of the office up there as well as either or both of my opponents.

"Barnes has said that if I am elected I shall make a failure in the office. The fact is that I will make it a failure for Barnes. And I will make it a failure for Murphy, too. But I will not make it a failure for my bosses," added Mr. Straus, only to elicit from some one in the audience:

"You haven't got any bosses."

"Oh, yes, I have," replied Mr. Straus.

"Teddy?" asked the voice in the audience.

In the confusion that followed, Mr. Straus had difficulty in explaining that his bosses were the people of the great Empire State.

Before concluding his address, Mr. Straus said that a false rumor had been circulated by "Tammany henchmen" to the effect that he had withdrawn from the race. His explanation of this was:

"Well, I shall withdraw to-morrow."

He then read to the gathering a telegram from up-State with information of his sweeping gains from the old parties.

TIFFANYS SUE EQUITABLE.

Jewelers' Paris Branch Gets Damages as Tenant for Flood Losses.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—The Equitable Life Assurance Society, which owns a large building in the Place de l'Opéra, was the defendant to-day in a remarkable court suit brought by Tiffany & Co., its tenants on the ground floor.

The suit was for the recovery of damages for loss of business during the great floods of January, 1910, when, it was asserted, the basement of the building was filled with water and the pavement in front was displaced, making it impossible for the plaintiffs to open their new premises for some time.

The suit was of special interest as showing the enormous value of real estate in the centre of Paris. It was revealed that the Tiffany concern pays $200 daily rent. As the shut-down extended over a month, $6,000 damages were asked.

The court fixed the damages at $5,000.

LOSES GEMS WORTH $10,000.

Bag Mrs. Sutherland Drops in Paris Also Contains $3,500 Draft.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Mrs. A. Sutherland, an American visiting Paris, has lost a handbag on the Champs Elysées containing jewels and curiosities worth $10,000. The gems include five rings and a diamond sapphire bracelet. In the handbag was also a letter of credit for $3,500 on the American Express Company.

Mrs. Sutherland was carrying a muff at the time and thinks she may have let the bag slip without noticing its loss.

SUFFRAGISTS ROUT McKENNA.

Stop Speech by British Home Secretary, Who Flees by Side Door.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna, was prevented from making a speech to-night in Holborn Town Hall because of the uproar created by suffragettes.

The Home Secretary escaped a mauling by fleeing with his wife through a side door.

MONTE CRISTI BESIEGED.

Rebels Attack Santo Domingan Port —The Fighting Desperate.

CAPE HAITIEN, Nov. 4.—Monte Cristi, a seaport on the North Coast of Santo Domingo, has been attacked by revolutionists. The defenders put up a stout resistance, and the fighting was of a desperate nature.

The news regarding the attack was brought to this city by a small Santo Dominican detachment which was accompanied by the Director of Customs and several women who fled from the besieged town.

NO AMATEUR LIVING CAN BEAT SNYDER

Andy Smith Thought His Squirrel Story Would Do It, but Bill Came Right Back.

HIDALGO PETE SAVED THE DAY

If Snyder Hadn't Seen Him Teach Sanchez Hoolihoo to Waltz, the Keeper Might Have Been Bested.

Andy Smith, the veteran policeman at the Zoo in Central Park, ran into the hay-house back of the elephant inclosure yesterday afternoon in a state of breathless excitement. Bill Snyder, the headkeeper, and Bob Hurton, his assistant, were getting hay ready for Hattie, the elephant. Pat Keenan, the keeper of the monkey house, was cracking nuts for his charges, and Cunningham was telling the others of the latest doings of Dewey, the father or grandfather of most of the lions in the lion house.

"Snyder," said Smith, as he threw open the door, "I have heard you tell of remarkable happenings that you as a student of animal life have observed, but I have just come across something that is stranger than anything I have ever heard you relate."

Hurton, remembering that Smith had scoffed at Snyder's story of the lioness who made herself ridiculous to amuse her lonesome cub, laughed outright. Smith squelched him with a look, and as Snyder with a show of deep interest told him he would like to hear the story as an addition to his store of animal lore, the policeman gave this account of his experience.

For some days, Smith said, he had missed "Old Top," a squirrel which lived by the lake side and was his particular pet. When duty took him to the path near the squirrel's tree the old fellow would always scamper across the lawn to meet him. The policeman wondered what had become of his little friend and several times he called his name, but Old Top did not show up.

"Bill," announced the policeman, solemnly, "I have found out where Old Top has gone and that brings me to the point of the story."

"Go ahead," said his listeners, with the exception of Hurton, who laughed again.

"I know I have been doubtful of some of Snyder's stories," Smith said, "but now I am converted. This story is just as wonderful as any Snyder ever told and, moreover, it is true. Don't you laugh again, Hurton."

"Yesterday morning," the policeman began, "I crossed down by the lake, near Fifty-ninth Street, and just ahead of me, going across the lawn, was Top. I called to him, but he kept on going and paid no attention to me. This aroused my curiosity, and so I followed him. I found the squirrel at the water edge, apparently conferring with a muskrat. Then I knew why Top had left his old haunts. He had made friends with that muskrat, and every day he had been going down to the lake to be with his new acquaintance. It is the strangest friendship that I ever heard tell of. There they were like two old chums, sitting just where the water lapped the pebbles.

"I was thinking how strange such a friendship was, when the incident occurred which converted me to a belief in all the things Snyder ever told about animals. The squirrel and muskrat talked for a time, and then the muskrat turned to the squirrel as though to say: 'Just see how easy it is.' Then with a graceful little hop the muskrat jumped into the water and swam a short distance.

"He returned to the shore, and then followed what was apparently an argument, and the muskrat went into the water and swam again. This time when he came up on the bank Old Top went down to the water's edge, and after putting one paw into the lake gradually worked his way forward until half his body was under water. The old rat went along beside him, and was apparently trying to show him how to swim. I was so interested that I moved too far forward and the old rat saw me and took to the water in a flash. Old Top saw me, too, and he looked pretty cheap as he shook himself and then made off home without exchanging the compliments of the day with me. Just think, that muskrat was trying to teach Top to swim. That's pretty hard to beat."

And Smith looked at Snyder with a smile.

"It is a strange thing," said Snyder gravely when Andy had concluded, "but by a strange coincidence I came across an instance of animal sagacity to-day which transcends anything even I have ever encountered before. The policeman heaved a sigh, but sat down to listen.

Snyder's story had to do with Hidalgo Pete, the waltzing crane, and Sanchez Hoolihoo, the staid pelican, "both members of this club," as Keenan interjected. Pete is a very graceful bird, while Sanchez is heavy set and ungainly. Pete is much given to executing a graceful dance about the open air bird cage, which wins for him the admiration of thousands of visitors. Sanchez rarely moves faster than a walk.

"I came along by the bird house this morning," said Snyder, "when I saw the strange sight which I am about to narrate. There on the edge of the pool was Hidalgo Pete evidently scolding a pelican As I came in the crane began to waltz gracefully about the enclosure. The pelican watched Hidalgo with the closest attention. Then I saw the crane stop waltzing and go over and give Sanchez a prod with its bill, Then to my surprise, the pelican started to waltz in imitation of the crane."

"Bill," said Andy as he started for the door, "I'm thirsty."

As the door slammed shut Snyder started to mix elephant food and Keenan went back to cracking nuts for the monkeys.

RECLUSE FOUND DEAD.

Chicerlli's Benefactor Discovers Him Lifeless After Heart Attack.

Chicerlli, the "mystery of Frog's Hollow," was found dead from heart disease at 230 East 151st Street, yesterday by George Wall, a dealer in second hand bottles. He was known as "Count" Chicerlli, although no one was able to say whether that was his real name. Little is known about him other than that he was an Italian about 60 years old, spoke English perfectly and seemed to be well educated.

Five years ago Wall gave him shelter during the Winter and since that time he has been living on the charity of Wall. Wall was in the habit of visiting him in the morning and giving him food for the day. Yesterday, however, he found the door locked. He climbed in by a second story window and found Chicerlli's body lifeless on the floor.

On discovering the body, Wall notified Patrolman Moellers, who sent for Dr. Kaiden of the Lebanon Hospital. The doctor said Chicerlli had been dead for at least eight hours and had him removed to the Morgue.

BECKER UNSETTLED ON NEW COUNSEL

Lawyers Disagree Radically on Who Is to Succeed to Hart's Position.

McINTYRE RETURNS TO WORK

Plans to Move Appeal To-morrow—Mrs. Becker Visits Husband at Sing Sing.

The question who is counsel of record for former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker now in Sing Sing prison awaiting death for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, had not been settled last night. The report from Mrs. Becker through Louis J. Grant of 99 Nassau Street was that Mrs. Becker had dismissed Joseph A. Shay, who had been named as the successor to Mr. Hart.

Mrs. Becker went to Sing Sing to visit her husband yesterday. She returned to this city in the evening and was met at the Grand Central Station by Lieut. John Becker, a brother of the convicted police official, and Mr. Grant.

Mr. Hart, who was the attornery of record in the Becker case from the time of the arrest until the conviction. was not willing to discuss the case, and he would not say that he was entirely out of it. John F. McIntyre, Becker's senior counsel, returned yesterday from Atlantic City, where he went soon after his client's conviction to rest up. He was in conference with Mr. Hart in the afternoon, ording to the latter, who added that both had agreed not to make public any matters regarding that conference.

"I have been retained to fight for an appeal for Becker," said Mr. McIntyre, "and so far as I know now I am the only lawyer retained in this case. I expect to meet Mrs. Becker on Wednesday and we will then go into the case. As soon as Becker makes known his wishes in the selection of a counsel of record the work of preparing the case for appeal will be begun. There will be no let-up in the fight for the freedom of my cleint. There is a great amount of work, for some 40,000 pages of record have to be gone over. Counsel of record will pick out the points upon which the appeal is to be taken.

"I will probably serve notice of appeal on Wednesday. There is not the slightest intention of deserting Becker at this critical point in his case, and I have so assured Mrs. Becker. I have not seen Mr. Shay since the announcement was made that he was to come into the case in the place of Mr. Hart. I know nothing of Mr. Grant having been retained. Becker must have been alarmed when physical exhaustion, incident to fighting the case, made it necessary for me to take a few days' rest. As I figure it out, this is indicated by the reports that come out now regarding counsel. I will say this, that I have been retained to argue the case before the Court of Appeals."

Mr. Shay said that he had not seen Mr. McIntyre, but he expected to see him soon. Mr. Shay was seen in his office, 25 Broad Street. and as he sat at his desk talking he was not more than forty feet from Mr. McIntyre's office. Mr. Shay declared that he was retained by Mrs. Becker to fight the case of her husband on appeal.

"What the relations may be between Mrs. Becker, her husband, Mr. Hart, and Mr. Grant I do not know, and I could not discuss them if I did know," he said.

"There is no question in my mind that Mr. Grant honestly thought he was in this case. Mr. Hart was the first attorney of record. Becker had consulted Mr. Grant, and later, I understand, he told his wife to tell Mr. Grant that he was not in the case."

Mr Shay showed his note book of cases which showed that Mrs. Becker had consulted him for five hours on Oct. 29, and asked him to come into the case as attorney of record. She told him then that Mr. McIntyre was to remain in the case. On the next day, Mr. Shay accepted. Mr. Shay saw Becker on Saturday and brought back a message to Mrs. Becker.

District Attorney Whitman said: "I received a litter from Mr. Shay a few days ago saying he had been retained as counsel of record in the Becker case, but that did not constitute a notice of substitution. Until such a notice is served and filed John W. Hart, as counsel of record, is not witdrawn.

Mr. Grant, it is said, will go to Sing Sing some time to-day to visit Becker.

"GYP THE BLOOD" PUZZLES.

Becker Informers Get 'Pigs in Clover' Variation Through the Sheriff.

Sheriff Julius Harburger received a weighty package wrapped in brown paper and accompanied by this letter yesterday:

> Dear Sheriff: Noticing by the newspapers that you have received eight copies of the Holy Bible to be delivered to the witnesses and the accused in connection with the Rosenthal case, for their moral and spiritual uplift, I wish to contribute somewhat toward their amusement, and I therefore send you herewith eight Gyp the Blood puzzles, which I trust you will kindly deliver.

The package disclosed eight little boxes, each containing a puzzle, a variation of the "Pigs in Clover" brainsplitter. On the boxes were painted portraits of "Gyp the Blood," "Lefty Louie," an automobile, the Hotel Metropole, and a large question mark, with the caption, "The Man Higher Up." The directions for playing the puzzle are these:

> The object is to prove the alleged murderers guilty and to send them to the electric chair. Two red balls represent "Gyp" and "Lefty Louie." A black ball stands for "The Man Higher Up." A white ball indicates District Attorney Whitman. Starting with all the balls in the outer circle you are so to manipulate the puzzle as to land the red and black balls into the inner circle, which represents the electric chair. Then proceed to get the white ball, standing for Mr. Whitman, in the groove facing the inner circle, thus representing him on guard near the chair of retribution. If you accomplish this, you will have done a great public service.

The Sheriff pondered long over the propriety of sending the puzzles to "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie."

"I guess Webber, Vallon, Rose, and Shapiro over at the West Side Prison will understand and enjoy this game more than the gunmen," he declared at last

And to these men the puzzles were sent.

MME. ARRAL'S RECITAL.

A Programme of Varied Character Given in Aeolian Hall.

Mme. Blanche Arral, who is not unknown to the New York concert stage, gave a song recital yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall that was heard by a large and friendly audience. She is a soprano of French extraction, and her voice is of the kind that comes from France. It has power and it is not lacking in flexibility and brilliancy of a sort, though these qualities are paired with a certain hardness, especially in its upper ranges. Its most agreeable tones are in the middle. She sang a varied programme of songs by Italian, French, English, and German composers, as well as the Brazilian Gomez. Not unnaturally her best results were obtained in the French music, and especially in operatic airs, such as "Il est doux," from Massenet's "Hérodiade." She is apparently more at home in music of the operatic sort than in songs, and her singing of Grieg's "Ich liebe dich," with a violoncello obbligato which it had not occurred to Grieg to compose, left something to be desired in the matter of style and phrasing. She also had the accompaniment of a flute in some of her songs.

Mme. Arral had the assistance of E. Bronstein, 'cellist, and Leonardo Stagliano, flutist, and Maurice Lafarge played her accompaniments. She received a large quantity of flowers in the course of her recital.

BUMPER POTATO CROP CANNOT FIND CARS

Thousands of Bushels in Danger of Freezing Because They Cannot Be Moved.

COMMERCE COMMISSION ACTS

Urges Adequate Equipment of Northwestern Roads—C. & O. Raises Coal Car Embargo.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Thousands of bushels of potatoes are in danger of destruction as a result of the car shortage. An exchange of telegrams between the Inter-State Commerce Commission and the principal roads carrying the enormous potato crop of Minnesota and Wisconsin shows that the railroads are doing everything in their power to handle the bumper crop, but that they haven't enough cars.

Although many new cars have been built for the lines affected within the past year, the storehouses of Wisconsin and Minnesota are bulging with potatoes, and thousands of bushels are freezing in the fields because there are no cars to move them and no room for them in the warehouses. The potato crop this year is the greatest in the history of the United States. It aggregates 401,000,000 bushels for white potaotces alone. Last year the crop amounted to only 293,000,000 bushels, and in 1910 it measured 349,000,000 bushels. It is estimated that approximately 36,000,000 bushels of this year's crop are furnished by Michigan, 28,000,000 bushels by Minnesota, and 32,000,000 bushels by Wisconsin.

R. E. Sevey, Secretary of the Minnesota Potato Growers and Shippers' Association, yesterday telegraphed to the commission, asking that the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, and the Soo Railroads be required to furnish sufficient refrigerator cars. Mr. Sevey said that he was confident that discrimination was being shown in the matter. The commission at once telegraphed to the interested railroads.

For the Great Northern Railway Company, its General Manager, J. M. Gruber, telegraphed to the commission from St. Paul in part as follows:

"This year's potato crop is the heaviest in the history of the Northern Pacific line; likewise the fruit crop. The former was practically all shipped in box cars, the latter in refrigerator cars. The prospects for furnishing refrigerators for potatoes are very discouraging. Seventy per cent. of the entire potato loading originates in territory which gives our line an average of less than a 100-mile haul. A very small percentage of the refrigerator cars put into the fruit and potato business in the Fall get back in time for a second trip. This company owned about 1,100 refrigerator cars until this season; 750 new ones were added this year. Connecting lines that get the long haul on this business have been called upon repeatedly for assistance, but apparently the reason for not getting more assistance is caused by unusually heavy crops in other sections of the country requiring that class of cars."

George T. Slade of Minneapolis, Vice President of the Northern Pacific Railway system, to-day telegraphed the commission in part as follows:

"Potatoes from this territory are largely shipped to points south and southwest, 400 or more miles off our line. Should we place our own equipment in this service we should soon be drained of cars to take care of our local business. Despite this, we have permitted approximately 300 of our cars to go through to far distant points on other lines and have placed orders weeks ahead with connecting lines to furnish equipment for potato loading; but orders have been only partly filled. We are permitting shippers to use our cars for the movement of potatoes between points on our line, but must depend upon our connections to furnish the refrigerator cars now required on account of cold weather for off-line loading."

The only encouraging report came from H. M. Pearce, freight traffic manager of the Northwestern line. He telegraphed to the commission to-day from St. Paul as follows:

"We are doing exceedingly well for this season of the year in furnishing refrigerator equipment for the movement of potatoes from points on our line to any point on the Northwestern system. We are using our very best efforts to obtain the necessary equipment for the movement of business to points beyond the Northwestern road."

G. R. Huntington, General Manager of the Soo Line, telegraphed from Minneapolis that his road had put practically all available refrigerator cars to hauling potatoes, and was making every effort to get cars from connecting lines.

The embargo which has been maintained by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company upon the loading of coal equipment for points beyong Toledo has been lifted by that company for a period of one week. This embargo was imposed because of the difficulty which the road was experiencing in having its coal cars returned by the Michigan connecting lines, ever which they were being shipped. The Inter-State Commerce Commission was to-day advised by General Freight Agent E. D. Hotchkiss of the Chesapeake & Ohio of the temporary lifting of the embargo because the Michigan connections were now returning the cars more freely, and it is hoped that the free return movement of empty coal cars will continue and make the relief permanent.

The commission is taking an active interest in the freight car shortage situation and has advised various roads to tighten up their rules for enforcing the prompt return of cars, pointing out that unless this is done there will be a serious car famine which may seriously affect business. The free movement of coal cars is regarded by the commission as absolutely essential, as a shortage of these cars at this time of the year would send up the price of coal and deprive a number of industrial establishments of fuel.

Bryan to Lay Cornerstone.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Mrs. Marion Butler, President of the Arlington Confederate Monument Association, received a telegram to-day from William Jennings Bryan accepting an invitation to deliver the address at the laying of the cornerstone of the monument for the Confederate dead at Arlington on Nov. 12. The annual convention of the Daughters of the Confederacy will be held at the same time, and Mr. Bryan is expected to address that association.

BALTIMORE IS DISABLED.

Cruiser Puts Into Norfolk on Account of Boiler Room Accident.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The cruiser Baltimore has turned in at Norfolk for repairs, which will probably make it necessary to substitute another vessel to make the cruise to Santo Domingo, whither she was bound. Early this morning, while off Hampton Roads, six of the eight blowers in the boiler rooms of the Baltimore were disabled. The details of the accident are not known at the Navy Department.

Commander Phelps made known the fact of the mishap in a wireless message to the department and went at once to the Norfolk yard. The cause of the breakdown is not understood, unless it is due to some mismanagement on the part of the crew, which was a new and raw one recently made up at Philadelphia, whence the Baltimore sailed last Saturday. The blowers that went wrong have been in use for fifteen years and have functioned well. Without them it was absolutely impossible for the vessel to continue on her way; and to-morrow, if practicable, another ship will be designated to take her place.

The Baltimore was on the way to Santo Domingo to assist the Prairie and Wheeling under the direction of Brig. Gen. McIntyre and W. S. T. Doyle of the State Department, who as a special commission are in the Dominican Republic, trying to adjust the differences between political factions and restore the custom houses to the control of United States officials. The Baltimore was expected to join the Prairie at Puerto Plata and take from her a company of marines and then continue her voyage to Samana Bay.

FIGHT FOR BIG TRUNKS.

Commerce Commission to Hear Protests Against 40-Inch Limit.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Protests against the regulation restricting the size of trunks and other baggage handled by the railroads of the United States will be heard at a meeting of the Inter-State Commerce Commission on Nov. 7.

Following an investigation of the question of trunks of unusual size, the commission held that a penalty on all that exceed forty inches in length was reasonable. Theatrical and other interests objected, and the order was temporarily suspended.

MINISTERS HAMMER MAYOR.

One Says He Ought to be Hit on the Head—Resolutions Assail Him.

Mayor Gaynor, as man and Mayor, was not gently handled by the Methodist ministers yesterday at their Monday meeting in the Book Concern headquarters. The Rev. Dr. Wallace McMullen gave an address in the regular programme that was soothing in effect, but that effect was dissipated in a twinkling, when the Rev. Dr. F. C. Iglehart arose and presented this and more:

> In this time of riot and vice and crime in New York City we rejoice that we have in District Attorney Whitman a man of such ability and moral courage in the discharge of duty and as assistant in the District Attorney's office a man like Mr. Moss, so able, efficient, and true.
> We call upon Mayor Gaynor, who is the responsible head of the city, to enforce the excise law, especially the Sunday closing feature of the same, and to take a stronger grip on all institutions that breed vice and crime, and to bring speedily to trial and punishment the malefactors who are so bold in the pillage of property and in the destruction of life, and for such energetic and efficient enforcement of the law we pledge the Mayor our sincere support and cordial co-operation.

The Rev. A. F. Campbell said: "We ought to hit Mayor Gaynor once in a while on the head. At least, somebody ought to. He likes to talk to congregations in the churches. He says platitudes mostly, and then he lets the city go to the bow wows."

The venerable Rev. Dr. A. B. Leonard agreed with the Rev. Mr. Campbell, but wanted the description of the place the city is going to under Mayor Gaynor to be described in stronger terms.

The Rev. Dr. J. E. Price of Washington Heights said he had private information that Police Commissioner Waldo was asked to resign, but that before he had complied there was a conference and the affair was patched up. He said the report given out by Mayor Gaynor of the visit to him of ministers of all bodies last week was not true, and intimated that the Mayor didn't intend to make it right.

"The present Police Commissioner may be doing the best he can," said the Rev. Dr. Price, "but the law is poorly enforced. The traffic in 'white slaves' continues, gambling thrives, and the underworld has become bold. The Mayor is responsible."

After some further debate the resolutions were adopted unanimously.

MARRIAGE HER DEFENSE.

Girl Brought Before Court by Father Shows Her Certificate.

Mary Ellen Flaherty, 17 years old, when charged by her father, Patrick Flaherty, with being an ungovernable child, produced her marriage certificate before Magistrate Fitch in the Flushing Court yesterday. Flaherty told the court that his daughter had been away from her home since Oct. 26.

"Yes," replied Mary Ellen, "and the reason is that I have been living with my husband, Frank Callahan, in Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn."

The certificate showed that the couple had been married by Alderman Smith on Thursday of last week, with the girl's uncle, John Sayse, as witness.

"I think your daughter has the better of you, Mr. Flaherty," said the Magistrate. "She has a new guardian, and is no longer under your care. Complaint dismissed."

Leniency for Chinese Opium Dealers.

Sentencing yesterday Wah Chu, a Chinese merchant of 18 Mott Street, to two months' imprisonment and a fine of $100 for making smoking opium, Judge Hough in the District Court declared that in future white men selling smoking opium to white men might expect no clemency, but that he realized that the case of Chinamen was different. The profits are large and the temptation great, and they consider the traffic in opium no worse than the illicit sale of spirts.

Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton Smith Ill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Much concern is felt here for the condition of the Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton Smith, rector of the fashionable St. John's Episcopal Church. Dr. Smith is at the Summer home of his family in New England recovering from a nervous breakdown and is not expected to resume his charge here until after Christmas.

CHEAPER LITIGATION BY NEW COURT RULES

Supreme Tribunal Makes Revisions Also Simplifying and Expediting Federal Equity Cases.

A CHECK ON INJUNCTIONS

Temporary Orders Won't Be Issued Without Notice to Other Side and Without Sufficient Evidence.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—After an investigation that has occupied a committee of the Supreme Court for seventeen months, the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court announced to-day from the Supreme bench a sweeping revision of the procedure in equity cases in Federal courts throughout the United States. As explained by Chief Justice White, the new rules will greatly simplify, expedite, and cheapen the conduct of equity cases. The new rules will take effect on Feb. 1, 1913, and will apply not only to the Supreme Court itself, but all inferior Federal tribunals.

The committee that has investigated the subject consisted of Chief Justice White and Associate Justices Lurton and Vandeventer. They realized that equity procedure in this country was based on an English tradition which had long since been abandoned in the old country. The Lord Chancellor of England was appealed to for suggestions, and in his explanation from the bench to-day the Chief Justice warmly thanked the British jurist for the suggestions he had made. Every Federal Judge in the United States was asked to get expressions from local bar associations. Judges also were asked to make suggestions. The voluminous briefs that came in to the committee as a result were digested by W. J. Hughes of the Department of Justice, for the committee.

The changes instituted by the new rules were broadly divided to-day by the Chief Justice under four heads. The exercise of power by the Federal courts in equitable cases was the first. The second great change, directed particularly at the modes of pleading, eliminates unnecessary preliminary steps and brings the parties quickly to issue. This change is modeled after the simplified forms now obtaining in New York and in the Chancery Courts of England. The modes of taking testimony, particularly in patent and copyright cases, where expert witnesses are necessary, is modified in the third reform. The intention of the court here, said the Chief Justice, was to make the taking of this kind of testimony more simple and less expensive. The fourth reform also dealt with the taking of testimony. It greatly limits the power of masters in equity and is expected to bring cases more directly before the courts. In the same connection the new rules will compel the reduction of the size of records sent to a superior court, requiring them to be transposed into narrative form instead of the bulky and cumbersome question and answer.

Still another change included in the new rules is restriction in the use of preliminary injunctions without notice to the party enjoined, and controls the issue of temporary restraining orders. In his summary of the rules the Chief Justice did not explain this change, and its scope is not yet fully understood.

The text of the new rule on injunctions reads:

> No preliminary injunction shall be granted without notice to the opposite party, nor shall any temporary restraining order be granted without notice to the opposite party unless it shall clearly appear from specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified bill that immediate and irreparable loss or damage will result to the applicant before the matter can be heard on notice.
>
> In case a temporary restraining order shall be granted without notice in the contingency specified, the matter shall be made returnable at the earliest possible time, and in no event later than ten days from the date of the order and shall take precedence of all matters, except older matters of the same character. When the matter comes up for hearing the party who obtained the temporary restraining order shall proceed with his application for a preliminary injunction, and if he does not do so the court shall dissolve his temporary restraining order.
>
> Upon two days' notice to the party obtaining such temporary restraining order, the opposite party may appear and move the dissolution and modification of the order, and in that event the court or Judge shall proceed to hear and determine the motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice may require. Every temporary restraining order shall be forthwith filed in the clerk's office.

The new anti-injunction rule incorporates into practice several demands of labor leaders, which they sought to have recognized by the enactment of the so-called Clayton anti-injunction bill. The new rule follows in a general way the rules of the Federal Court in the Ninth Circuit, which comprises the Pacific Coast States.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, had this to say about the new anti-injunction rule: "It is a step in the right direction and one of the things labor has long been fighting for."

WON'T OPPOSE GERMANY.

She May Have Christmas Island if She Wants Coaling Station There.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—There is nothing in the Lodge resolution, recently passed by the Senate, under which the United States Government could object to a foreign country establishing a commercial coaling station on Christmas Island, in the mid-Pacific, as, it is rumored, Germany is planning to do. The Lodge resolution declares only that the United States would look with grave concern on the possession of any "harbor or other place on the American continents so situated that its occupation for naval or military purposes might threaten the communications or the safety of the United States."

Christmas Island, which lies just north of the equator and nearly a thousand miles south of Hawaii, is claimed by Great Britain, and has been leased for ninety-nine years to an English trading company. Charts of the island show that it would be practically impossible to establish a serviceable harbor there without going to immense expense for dredging. Naval officials here say this would make it virtually impossible to use the island. It is pointed out also that there are strong and dangerous currents around the island, especially along the northern and western sides, that have sent many vessels to destruction on the rocks.

Furthermore, the fact that Great Britain owns the island makes it seem almost certain to officials here that no German company would get full possession or even a lease of the island.

RATIFIES INCOME TAX.

Louisiana Votes for Amendment—Only Two More States Needed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Formal notice of the ratification by the State of Louisiana of the income tax constitutional amendment reached the State Department to-day. Thirty-three States have given notice of their approval of this amendment, and the department is daily expecting notice from the State of Ohio, whose Legislature has already acted favorably.

The affirmative votes of only two States are now necessary to make the three-fourths required by the Constitution for the adoption of the amendment. It is not doubted here that the necessary votes will be forthcoming during the coming Winter sessions of the Legislatures of the following ten States which have not yet acted upon the amendment: Delaware, Florida, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wyoming.

Only Minnesota and Massachusetts have so far acted upon the amendments submitted to them by Congress providing for the election of Senators by popular vote.

VERBECK TO RETIRE WITH GOVERNOR DIX

Adjutant General Says He Is Not a Candidate for Gen. O'Ryan's Post, Either.

WELCH'S NAME SUGGESTED

Gen. Verbeck's Long Record as National Guardsman—His Differences with Roe and O'Ryan.

ALBANY, Nov. 4.—"I am not a candidate for Major General, as has been reported," says Adjt. Gen. Verbeck in a statement given out to-night, "or for reappointment as Adjutant General. I expect to retire from office with Gov. Dix on Jan. 1 next."

The name of Gen. Samuel M. Welch of Buffalo, commander of the Fourth Brigade, has been mentioned for appointment as the new Adjutant General. Gen. Welch assisted materially in drafting the new military law and the new regulations governing the National Guard. He was among the candidates considered at the time Gov. Dix reappointed Gen. Verbeck.

Adjt. Gen. Verbeck has been particularly prominent in the public eye since his appointment by Gov. Dix on Oct. 4, as Chief of Staff, a newly created office. When, on Oct. 25, Gov. Dix ordered Major Gen. O'Ryan, commanding the National Guard forces of the State, relieved from active duty, the order gave Adjut. Gen. Verbeck control of the entire State Guard. The validity of this order is to be tested in the courts by Gen. O'Ryan.

Gen. Verbeck has been actively identified with the National Guard almost continuously since 1880, when he enlisted in the Fifth California Infantry. His connection with the militia of this State dates back to 1895. During his early years of service he filled several minor positions, and was breveted Colonel in 1908. He has been a member of the military staffs of Govs. Black, Morton, and Hughes, and was also a member of the Militia Council.

He was appointed Adjutant General of the State to complete the unexpired term of Gen. Nelson H. Henry, resigned, by Gov. Charles E. Hughes, on June 1, 1910. He was reappointed by Gov. Horace White on Oct. 6, 1910, and, although a Republican, by Gov. Dix on Jan. 1, 1911.

After the retirement of Major Gen. Roe under legislative act, Gen. Verbeck, while in New York last January, unexpectedly announced his intention to resign his position. It was said at that time that this announcement was due to differences of opinion between himself and Gen. Roe. Since the appointment by Gov. Dix of Gen. O'Ryan as Gen. Roe's successor, there has been marked differences of opinion between Gens. Verbeck and O'Ryan regarding their respective duties.

Gov. Dix had no comment to make to-day on the action to be instituted by Major Gen. John F. O'Ryan to secure his reinstatement as active military head of the National Guard forces of this State.

GREAT INDUSTRIAL SUCCESS WON IN SPITE OF THE TARIFF

W. L. Saunders Shows That We Need Have No Fear of "Cheap Foreign Labor."

By W. L. SAUNDERS.

Frederick A. Geier of Cincinnati, an acknowledged expert on the subject of manufacturing costs, said in one of his addresses:

> I know of no subject so misunderstood or about which there are so many varying and widely diverging opinions as the subject of costs.

And again:

> If a manufacturer states that he can make an engine for $100, and everybody else's figures show a cost of $150, you can be pretty sure that there is something wrong with the bookkeeping.

Congressman Redfield, a manufacturer of large experience, says that labor cost is "enormously modified by the progress of invention"; that the difference in the cost of two American concerns in the same line is greater than the difference in cost between a foreign and domestic concern in the same line. He also states, and I think proves, that few American manufacturers really know the cost of their goods. One of President Taft's Tariff Board experts told him that in sixteen shops that he visited they did not know what their goods cost.

If we build a barn, the question of cost is easily determined. It is so much labor, so much lumber, and so many pounds of nails. The largest item in this cost is labor. American carpenters are well paid because they have limited the supply of men through the strength of their union. Workmen in building trades, who really get the highest wages, are not protected in any way by the tariff.

Now, a manufacturer has a great many things to contend with besides labor when he seeks to ascertain honestly the cost of his product. The item of labor is one of a large number of items. It is not a fixed figure, but it is an elastic investment which he is capable of making productive or otherwise. The controlling factor is the rate of output; then we have the burden charge, the cost of material, the cost of power, light, heat, insurance; interest on capital invested, depreciation, selling expense, transportation, experiments, bad debts, accidents, interest and discounts, legal expenses, &c. These things in ordinary manufacturing run from four to six times higher than the actual labor cost.

High Wages go With Low Cost.

Tariffmakers have always alleged that the chief purpose of a high protective duty is to enable American highly paid workmen to compete with the cheap labor of other countries. This statement, on the face of it, appeals to a great many people who have not had experience in manufacturing and who do not study the question sufficiently to understand what it really means. As a matter of fact, the statement is a pure and simple fallacy. It is "blessed with one virtue and a thousand crimes." It is really difficult to find industries existing to-day in America where the tariff has any effect whatever in saving a manufacturer against lower labor costs abroad, and in those cases it usually appears that an old plant, inefficient, backward, fossilized, with worn-out machinery or lax management, is, through high prices, influenced by a high tariff, enabled to keep its wheels moving.

High labor cost is in no sense inconsistent with low cost of output. On the contrary, they usually go hand in hand together. Capital does not seek localities where labor is low in price when locating its works. The whole history of the industrial progress of the world shows this. Capital usually locates where material and labor are plentiful, and always with the view of getting cheap material, not cheap labor. The Steel Corporation went west to Gary because the cheapest iron ores come from the Lake Superior mines. Pittsburgh grew up as our great centre in the iron and steel industry because the coal and iron mines are at the doors of the works and because of the large supply of good, not cheap, labor which Pennsylvania affords. The Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railway Company proved a valuable acquisition to the Steel Corporation because at these plants one may stand at the mouth of an iron mine and throw a stone to the coal mine and another to the limestone quarry; in fact, some of the ores on this property have enough limestone in them to do their own fluxing.

If cheap labor were the controlling concern in manufacturing we should see all our mills located in the South, for it is a matter of record that several years ago the price of a day's labor in the Southern mills was less than in the mills of Lancashire, England. Mr. Helm, a cotton producer of Great Britain, writing on the cotton industry in 1908, says:

> The hours in the Southern factories are much longer than in England and the piece-rate wages in the South for weaving a particular description of cloth are not much more than one-quarter of those paid at Fall River, Mass., or at Lancashire, England.

Mr. T. M. Young, reporting on the American cotton companies' industry in 1902, said:

> American weavers turn out nearly twice as much work a day as their English competitors, and their wages per piece are considerably less.

Why We Win Markets.

Transportation by ships is not a serious item in the cost of manufacturing and delivery. Labor in Cuba is cheaper than that in the United States. Labor in Japan and in China is from five to ten times less than it is in the United States. Does anybody question the intelligence of the Japanese, yet why does not capital go there and why are not large manufacturing industries located in such low-priced labor countries? The answer is simply this: that it does not pay to seek cheap labor in manufacturing. Skill, energy, resourcefulness, pluck, manhood, these are the qualities that the American possesses to a high degree, and a man possessing them, whether he be a workman with his hands or with his brains, will out-distance the inert, laggard, dopey, cheap man in any country.

I am personally interested in a factory in Canada. It has been there more than twenty-five years. We are making exactly the same thing there that we make in New Jersey, and I know from experience that while the price of labor is lower in Canada the cost of the same product is lower in New Jersey.

Mr. Schwab, who is undoubtedly an expert, testified on Aug. 4, 1911, before the Ways and Means Committee:

> The steel companies of this country can manufacture iron and steel products cheaper than can those of any other country in the world.

President Taft's Tariff Board has reported (page 11:)

> Wages are in themselves no necessary indication of relative cost of production. Frequently it is found that high wages and low labor cost go together. The question at once arises, whether labor in American woolen and worsted manufacturing is more efficient than such labor abroad, or whether by more efficient management or greater speed of machinery the American manufacturer is able to get a larger product per operative in proportion to the difference in wages.

Again on page 19 it says:

> The lowest labor costs per pound were in mills paying the highest wages.

James G. Blaine, when Secretary of State, reported (State Document, June 25, 1882, pages 98 and 99:)

> Undoubtedly the inequalities in the wages of English and American operatives are more than equalized by greater efficiency, &c.

Thomas F. Bayard, also Secretary of State, writing of the Schoenhof report, said:

> Your deductions are irresistibly established, that low wages do not mean cheap production and that the best instructed and the best paid labor proves itself to be the most productive. The command of every market follows the workman who can produce what is best and at the lowest cost.

Again referring to President Taft's Tariff Board, it has reported on Schedule I (page 9) of the synopsis:

> As is well known, wages and earnings are not necessarily an index of the labor cost of any particular process of manufacture. The labor cost per yard depends on the relation between labor and output.

Our Greater Efficiency.

The old fetish of having to cut wages to keep down cost is dead or dying—even President Taft's Tariff Board admits that. Let us instance this Tariff Board's report on the difference in the cost of making yarn between England and the United States. The board states that the difference in labor cost is 100 per cent.; that is, the actual labor cost is twice as high in the United States as in England.

Let us see what this means. It is an extreme case, and I will accept it for the sake of argument, though I do not believe for a moment that a thorough and proper investigation of all the elements that go to make up the cost would show any such difference, but let us accept it. The same report shows that the total proportion of labor cost in making yarn to all other costs is but 9¼ per cent. of the whole cost, hence this great 100 per cent. difference is brought down to a difference of but 4⅝ per cent. of the total cost of the yarn. Here we have an industry where the great difference of 100 per cent. in labor cost is brought down on the statement of President Taft's board to a difference of less than 5 per cent., which is a mere bagatelle and which is easily made up or offset or overcome by increased efficiency.

There are in Japan over seven hundred American made locomotives and a great many others made by Japanese labor in the Japanese works. On one occasion when a large order for locomotives, involving several millions of dollars, was pending, the Japanese engineer made the statement to the American, that as they had the exact plans of American locomotives and as wages in Japan were only one-fifth the wages in the United States, they could make these locomotives cheaper in Japan. The American negotiator challenged the statement and agreed to compare records of cost. An impartial and thorough examination of the books proved that on the same specifications the cost of building a locomotive in Japan was three and a half times greater than in the United States. America got this order.

An American manufacturer visiting Birmingham, England, and seeing the sterility of their work offered to take a contract to manufacture in America a standard line of product, characteristic of the Birmingham works, and to deliver that product in quantities at Manchester at a figure giving the English manufacturer a clear 10 per cent. profit. The offer was declined because of British pride.

Representative Hill of Connecticut said in the House last August:

> The wages of the weavers in the Japanese mills are only 18½ cents per day, as against $1.59 in the American mills, but it requires 700 weavers to do the work in the Japanese mill as against only 53 in an American mill, hence one American for $1.59 does as much work as 13 Japanese weavers at a cost of $2.40.

Need Is Cheaper Materials.

American wheat is sold in the markets of Europe in competition with Russia, India and other countries. Farm labor in the northwest is $3 per day compared with 25 and 30 cents in Russia.

The iron and steel products of the United States are steadily capturing the markets of the world, as shown by the enormous increase in our steel exports. The export trade of the United States, in manufactured products, to-day is over one billion of dollars per year, and yet this is only 5 per cent. of our total product of manufactures. What an opportunity to enlarge American business throughout the world! An opportunity which can only come in its fulness when we have lower material costs, reduced overhead charges and lower living costs through lower tariffs. It does injustice to the great natural advantages of America and to the unequaled enterprise of her people to say that the marvelous development that has taken place in this country is due to the tariff. It has gone on in spite of the tariff, and because of our great natural advantages, for as the figures show, we have sold 95 per cent. of our manufactures within our own borders.

In New York City, according to Bradstreets, average prices rose between 1896 and 1910 nearly 62 per cent. and since 1910 the rise has gone on at a rate of between 6 and 10 per cent. I have before me a table taken from a report made by Senator Lodge, which shows a striking difference in the rise of prices between the United States and Great Britain. In many items there is an actual fall of prices in Great Britain. In the necessities of life, such as clothing and food products, the difference in these price levels is from 40 to 70 per cent. lower in England than in the United States. It is a matter of common knowledge that the price of beef has risen in America from 30 to 40 per cent. during the last decade and that it has been but slightly affected in England. There is a duty of 27½ per cent. on cattle here and no duty in England. We may have a shortage, and we know we have a beef trust, but this 27½ per cent. keeps the Argentine and Australian cattle away from us and helps increase our cost of living.

The interest of the workman lies with his employer and in selling his labor to those who are progressive enough to so cut down burden and overhead expenses that his skill and capacity in output will justify his employer in paying him the American rate of wages, which he is intelligent enough to know is not the controlling factor in costs. He cannot longer be made to play the goat in a system where his work is only about one-fifth that of the whole, for he is now beginning to see that lower material costs, reduced overhead charges, enlarged markets and lowered cost of living should enable him at least to defy the soph'stries of the Republican tariff makers who have heretofore sought to lay the whole burden of the cost of production upon his shoulders.

DEATH IN BATHTUB PUZZLES THE POLICE

Autopsy Shows Anna Van Auken Died of Gas Poisoning, but the Case Is Unexplained.

SOME BRUISES ON BODY

Liquor and Torn Clothing Also Enter Into Coroner's Calculations—Jury to Investigate.

An investigation yesterday of the death of Miss Anna M. Van Auken, whose body was found in the bathtub in an apartment at 521 West 134th Street, failed to clear up the mysterious circumstances to the satisfaction of the police and the Coroner. The autopsy at the Morgue in East Twenty-sixth Street yesterday afternoon showed that the young woman had been killed by gas poisoning, but whether by suicide, accident, or murder Coroner James E. Winterbottom was unable to decide. He said he would present the facts to a Coroner's jury. W. J. Van Auken, a stationer of 185 Main Street, Passaic, N. J., brother of the dead woman, declared his sister did not take her life. He thinks she turned on the gas by accident.

The police last night were trying to trace some of the visitors believed to have been in the apartment of Miss Van Auken late Saturday night or Sunday morning. Six glasses that had contained beer and whisky were found, with six beer bottles and half of a bottle of whisky. Two of the glasses were broken and on the floor. The bottles and other glasses were on the dining table.

That Miss Van Auken did not join her guests in drinking was proved by the autopsy.

Miss Van Auken had lived in the flat with her father for a month. Last Wednesday her father, who is 70 years old, went to Schenectady for a visit. He read of the finding of his daughter's body and telegraphed his son in Passaic to take charge of it. He ordered the remains sent to Schenectady for burial. Another brother, C. H. Van Auken, lives on Eastern Avenue in that city.

When the Coroner sent the body to the Morgue he was positive the woman had not died from asphyxiation. The body, when it was found, was disrobed and in the bathtub, which was half filled with water. The head and mouth were clear of the water. There was one or two slight bruises on the limbs. A bottle of ink had been overturned on a table, and a kimono worn by the dead woman had been torn. Aside from this and the table on which the bottles were found, there was no evidence of disorder in the apartment. A half-consumed cigar and several burned cigarettes were on the table with the bottles.

"I cannot account for the death of my sister in any way except that she turned on the gas accidentally," said W. J. Van Auken.

He declared he had no idea who the persons were who had been in the apartment before her death. Miss Van Auken left no letters addressed to her relatives, and none was found in her rooms that could aid in explaining the cause of her death.

Miss Van Auken had been empolyed as a stenographer by Joseph J. O'Donohue, a real estate operator at 347 Fifth Avenue. Until she removed to the apartment in 134th Street she had resided with her mother and father in Hackensack, N. J. She moved to Manhattan, according to the statement of a friend, Miss Helen Freeh, of 527 West 134th Street, to be nearer her work. Her mother's illness, said Miss Freeh, broke up the Van Auken home in Hackensack, and Mrs. Van Auken was sent to an institution on Ward's Island.

WARNS AGAINST MUCKRAKERS

Robert Underwood Johnson Talks to Students of Journalism.

Robert Underwood Johnson, editor of The Century Magazine, addressed the students of the Pulitzer School of Journalism yesterday afternoon on "The Magazine and Its Equipment." Mr. Johnson attacked the present desire for realism in magazine articles.

"There are magazines, and prosperous ones," he said, "that under the plea of realism seduce the good writer by dirty money and inflict upon the public an unwholesome view of society."

Mr. Johnson compared the responsibilities of the magazine to those of a public life, declaring "they are a public trust demanding accuracy, impartiality, and tone, which divides itself into style, taste, and moral influence."

The united judgment or the united conscience of the American newspapers, according to Mr. Johnson, can carry any cause to victory, although fortunately, he said, there can be no 'editorial trust.' As an example of newspaper conscience, he cited the bill enacted by Congress exempting the coastwise traffic of the United States from tolls in the Panama Canal.

"The leading political parties were in favor of such a plan," he said, "but the press instinctively declared against this exemption, which was contrary to our contract with the powers."

FREE PULMOTOR SERVICE.

Gas Company Equips Ambulances and Notifies All Hospitals.

The Consolidated Gas Company of New York notified all the hospitals of Manhattan and the Bronx yesterday that its emergency automobiles, equipped with pulmotors, for resuscitating persons overcome by gases, smoke, or electric shock, were at the disposal of physicians who wish to use them, and that any call received at a station where the apparatus is kept would be answered immediately.

Such stations with their telephone numbers are as follows: Hester and Elizabeth Streets—Spring 1756; West End Avenue and Sixty-third Street—Columbus 2212; 410 East 111th Street—Harlem 1843; 474 West 159th Street—Audubon 2728.

The pulmotor as an appliance for saving life in cases of asphixiation has proven successful, and hospitals in many large cities have it as part of their regular equipment. Fire departments in foreign cities also make use of the apparatus to resuscitate members of the force and victims overcome by smoke.

An Acknowledgment.

FOUND DEAD BY SERVANT.

Watertown Physician Succumbs to Heart Disease in Hotel.

When Bessie Connelly, a maid at the Hotel Marlborough, Broadway and 36th Street, went to Room 121 yesterday morning about 9 o'clock, she discovered the body of Dr. Louis J. Davis, 45 years old, a physician of Watertown, N. Y., who came to the hotel on Oct. 30.

A bottle which had contained morphine tablets, found at the side of the bed, led to the suspicion that the physician was a suicide, but Dr. Walter C. Gilday, of 44 West Thirty-seventh Street, declared that Dr. Davis had died of natural causes. After learning that Dr. Davis had been consulting a specialist on heart diseases for the past two years, Coroner's Physician Ray also said that death was due to natural causes. The body was sent last night to Watertown.

YALE CLOSES GATE AT FOOTBALL PRACTICE

Public and Undergraduates Excluded from Field Probably for Rest of Season.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 4.—A new dispensation went into effect to-day in Yale football training. Secret practice extending through the entire period of afternoon work was ordered. The gates of Yale Field were closed to the public and the Yale undergraduates during the afternoon, and it was announced by the coaches to-night that this plan will be followed throughout the week.

As the Brown game Saturday will be unusually exacting, only two days of light scrimmaging will be held the following week, before the Princeton game, and the order means a virtual closing of the gates of the university field for the season on practice afternoons.

The first scrimmaging held since last Wednesday was ordered, and for thirty minutes the squad realized that the march down the field was at double-quick time. Every regular was in the signal drill except Philbin, and Gallauer dropped out for recitations before scrimmaging started. Sheldon took Gallauer's berth, and Pumpelly displaced Philbin. The playing orders brought the freshmen instead of the scrubs against the regulars, and the 1916 players fought their way for a forty-yard gain at one time, reaching the 'Varsity forty-yard line before they fumbled and lost the ball on a big pass from quarterback over Fullback Guernsey's head.

The freshmen did their most effective work in intercepting forward passes. The regulars tried four and the freshies gobbled up three of them, completely upsetting the 'Varsity attack. As Guernsey, the freshman Captain, punted beautifully and drove the 'Varsity back after every intercepted pass, the freshmen held the regulars back to two solitary touchdowns for the afternoon, despite the fact that Capt. Spalding and "Lefty" Flynn ground outside tackle for several ten-yard gains. Spalding scored one gain of twenty yards.

Each scored a touchdown, Capt. Spalding making the first after the ball had been checked by the freshmen at their one-foot line, and Flynn the second on a six-yard crush through tackle. Pumpelly kicked the first goal. The kick-out for the second failed. The solitary forward pass which the 'Varsity worked, Capt. Spalding to Avery, netted fifteen yards.

Tommy Cornell started the game at quarterback, but his handling of the feather was slow. He was relieved by Wheeler after fifteen minutes. Wheeler showed improvment and ran a punt back for thirty yards.

Toward the close of practice several substitutes were thrown into the game, Carter and Gillett at end, "Bunny" Warren at tackle, Arnold and Madden at guard, Read at centre, and Markle, Dietz, and Wiser in the backfield.

The coaches began an unexpected experiment in attempting to relieve the shortage of material for guard. They transferred Pendleton to the position. Pendleton has played tackle, but is the heaviest reserve on the squad.

Tom Shevlin drilled the team in the latest wing shifts, and said that some of them, if given full swing, would increase the strength of the Yale attack 50 per cent.

"Heinie" Hobbs, the Amherst coach, and Walter Camp, the veteran adviser, were the visiting coaches.

AL SHARPE'S NEW POLICY.

Cornell Coach to Develop Football Team Through the Freshmen.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 4.—Backed up against the wall, with an overwhelming defeat at the hands of Dartmouth next Saturday staring them in the face, the Cornell football team received an hour's blackboard instruction and outline of the week's work from Dr. Albert H. Sharpe, head coach of the eleven, this afternoon, and the players heard some of the plainest talking they have heard this Fall. Mr. Sharpe told them just what was in store for them at the hands of the big Green team, and then announced that for three days this week the 'Varsity and freshman teams, the latter a very likely combination, would clash in scrimmages.

Sharpe is firm in the opinion that the average freshman team at Cornell never gets enough practice and never plays a hard enough schedule, so he has determined to begin giving the freshman candidates real football chances now, instead of waiting until next Fall, hoping that both freshmen and 'Varsity will benefit by the work.

Changes in the backfield and in the left side of the line are regarded as highly probable. It is obvious that the left side, composed of Larrowe, Munns, and Eyrich, is not nearly as strong as the right side, composed of Champaign, Williamson, and O'Hearne, and the efforts of Sharpe, Reed, and Van Orman this week will be directed toward bolstering up the defense of this combination.

It is probable that Munns will be sent back to left guard, where he played last Fall with much greater credit than he has at left tackle this year, and that Mallory, a fighting scrub tackle, will be worked in at left tackle. What will be done at left end the coaches don't know. They are hoping that Eyrich will show up in good form this week.

Although Butler was hurt in the Williams game, he is expected to play against Dartmouth, but, fearing that he may be compelled to get out again before the game is over, Sharpe is casting around for another quarter back. The team apparently refuses to play behind Taber, Trainer, and Smith with the same confidence and dash that it does behind Butler, and a more experienced and capable player is required. Who this man will be Sharpe has not yet decided.

On account of Hill's ragged defensive work Saturday, it is probable that Miller will supplant him at full back, although if Underhill, last year's veteran, gets into condition he will be given the position, on account of his great defensive ability.

Students are chagrined at the showing of the team, and instead of sympathizing with it they are criticising it.

Wrestling Starts at Columbia.

Thirty men reported yesterday afternoon in the Columbia gymnasium for wrestling practice. The Blue and White, which has made rapid strides in this sport the last few years, following a bad slump, expect to be able to place a strong team on the mat this year, and several coaches will put in a great deal of time between now and the first dual meet and training the candidates. Several of last year's team will be back, and this will make a strong nucleus for the coming season. The schedule has not been definitely arranged, and will not be given out until the dates of the meets are finally determined upon. Columbia's card will include dual meets with Yale, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Cornell, and Lehigh. It is also possible that the Morningside Heights grapplers will hold a dual meet with the Navy at the Annapolis gymnasium.

HOMECOMING OF TIGERS.

Princeton Team Will Resume Practice in Secret To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 4.—All was as quiet in Princeton this afternoon in respect to football as it was before college opened. It was the lull before the storm. To-morrow morning the squad of varsity men, with coaches who have been recuperating in Atlantic City since Sunday afternoon, come back to work again, and in the afternoon they will jump immediately into secret practice. The students will not get a glimpse of the men again until the New York University game on Saturday, because the powers have decreed that every bit of work from now on will be entirely secret, even more so than it was before the Harvard game.

What tactics the coaches will adopt in this final spurt in preparation for the Yale game is still a matter of guess work to the students, and the only comment volunteered is that it will be strenuous enough for the most particular.

Applications for tickets to the Yale game closed this afternoon, with the seating capacity just about exhausted. The new stands are now completed, with the exception of the erection of the seats on the platform at the south end. Preparations are being made for a record crowd, and the early applications indicate that the management will be justified in making them as large as possible.

During the lull the students are turning their attention to things political and are planning to have a giant combination meeting to-morrow evening in Alexander Hall to receive the election returns, with "movies" to fill up the intervals between messages. The election came at a very opportune time to brighten up the aftermath of the Harvard defeat, and in the heat of the political arguments incident to the closing of the campaign the sting has been greatly mitigated.

HARVARD TAKES A REST.

Brickley Will Join Squad When It Resumes Practice To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 4.—Head Coach Percy Haughton gave the Harvard 'Varsity candidates a day off to-day because of the hard game it experienced Saturday with the Princeton Tigers. Work will start to-morrow in preparing for the Vanderbilt game next Saturday.

Harvard is not underestimating the Southern collegians, and it expects that the latter will have a light and snappy eleven. Just how Harvard will prepare to withstand the Southerners is not known because very little is known of its style of play.

Trumbell, guard of the 'Varsity eleven, who was on the injured list, came out of the infirmary to-day, and he will join the squad to-morrow. Charles Brickley, the drop kicker and half-back, was in fairly good condition to-day, and says that he will join the candidates to-morrow.

The Harvard '16 eleven, coached by Tudor Gardiner, had a rest to-day after the hard game with the Tiger cubs on Saturday. Starting this afternoon it will prepare for the Worcester Academy game on Saturday at Worcester.

FORDHAM PLAYS STEVENS.

Bronx and Hoboken Elevens to Clash on Fordham Field To-day.

A long signal rehearsal formed the chief part of yesterday's drill in preparation for the game with Stevens Institute this afternoon at Fordham Field. Coach Thorpe had Schaffmeister practice drop kicking for a half hour and, to judge from his accuracy in kicking goals from the 30 and 40-yard lines, Stevens will have to watch sharply to prevent him from scoring to-day.

The Hoboken collegians are confident of victory, because they have now reached their best form, trimphing over Johns Hopkins University on Saturday. Having a very heavy line, they will undoubtedly resort to the old style plunging game, varied with a few shift formations.

The Fordham coaches have been developing the open game at the Bronx institution, and feel certain that the speed of their charges will offset the beef of the visitors. The Maroon eleven is determined to make its strongest bid to be again recognized in the football world. Several changes have been made in the line-up and the team is now believed to have attained its maximum strength.

Viviano will start at left end to-day in place of Elliffe, and Mulvey will take his place at centre. Hinchliffe will cover the other wing position with V. Kane, Finnegan and McCarthy as tackles, Sarrubbi and Simonetti as guards. The back field will be composed of Schaffmeister, Kane, L. Hinchliffe, and McNally.

N. Y. U. Has Final Workout.

New York University lines up against the eleven of Trinity College this afternoon at Ohio Field in a game which promises to give local football lovers a fine exhibition of the new game. The Hartford boys are coming down with the intention of bettering last year's 0-0 score, and the locals are just as determined that the Violet shall register a victory before the Princeton game on Saturday.

"Bo" Olcott gave the New York eleven no rest yesterday, and until dark the scrubs, under the direction of Herman Henneberger, '12 were driven at full speed against the regular line. The backfield was off at another corner of the field practicing forward passes and trick plays, with the third string men playing on the line. Up to the present time the Violet has had no long forward passes, and work the last week has centred on the development of this play.

The line-up for to-day is uncertain as regards the backfield. In all probability the team will start the game as follows: Right end, Dutcher; right tackle, Vesely; right guard, Bristol; centre, Torrence, left guard, Dressler; left tackle, Wiener; left end, Wheeler; quarter back, Hurtley; right half, Brown; left half, Thompson; full back, McDermott.

BILLIARDS AND POOL.

Dave Lauderbach, the crack amateur player of Brooklyn, won his sixth victory in the amateur handicap three-cushion carrom billiard tournament at Keeney's Academy in Brooklyn last night, when he defeated Thomas Bickert by the score of 40 to 30 in fifty-five innings. The winner is a scratch man and was playing at 40 points, while his opponent had only to make 36 to win. Lauderbach in the twenty-second inning made a run of 8 points. This is the second best run of the tournament, the record being 14 points, which was made by Charles Otis. Lauderbach also made a high run of 5 points. Bickert's high runs were 6 and 5, the highest he has made in the tournament.

Koji Yamada, the Japanese expert billiard player, began practice at George Slosson's Billiard Academy, Thirty-first Street and Broadway, last night in preparation for the coming championship 18.2 balk line billiard tournament. The young Jap's opponent was Mr. Katow, also of the Japanese Billiard Club, who is accompanying Yamada in his visit here in quest of the American title, which is now held by Willie Hoppe. Yamada defeated his opponent by the score of 400 to 48. The diminutive player—he is the smallest billiardist that ever took part in a championship tournament—made his 400 points in eighteen innings, which gives him an average of 22 4-18 points. Inasmuch as this is Yamada's first attempt at mastering the art of American billiards, which is vastly different from that played on the other side, his average is very good. A large crowd witnessed the contest, and they continually applauded the young Japanese for his remarkable work with the cue. His masse shots, at which he is most proficient, drew long rounds of applause from the spectators. Yamada executed fifteen difficult masse shots with apparent ease and did not hesitate unnecessarily before deciding upon what stroke to make. His highest runs were 88, 79, and 74.

AMERICANS EXCEL IN FOOTBALL PLAY

Coach Warner Says College Teams Have Nothing to Learn from Canadian Methods.

BY GLENN S. WARNER.

Coach of Carlisle Indian Football Team

CARLISLE, Pa., Nov. 4.—The game between the Carlisle Indians and a combination of Canadian stars which was played at Toronto last Monday was arranged upon the spur of the moment, and the Canadians, who agreed to play the Indians under the American Intercollegiate rules, had only one week in which to prepare for the contest.

The Canadians figured that their open-style of game, their long passing, clever open-field running and their punting, would so bewilder a team from the States that they would have little difficulty in running over their opponents at will. This opinion, however, was not shared by me, as I have always contended, together with a great many other coaches of the American Inter-collegiate game, that the experts at Rugby would not be able to pull off their long passes and open-field runs against the sharp tackling and defensive aggressiveness of the players from the States.

Many football critics have contended that many of the good points of the Canadian game, could be utilized by the coaches of our college teams, especially the clever passing of the English Rugby players. If such critics only realized how quickly American coaches would be to adopt anything which would give their teams an advantage over their opponents, they would know that if there had been any advantage to be gained by adopting these Canadian features, all of the American coaches would have been falling all over themselves to adopt them. But, as a matter of fact, not only myself, but a great many others of our coaches have experimented with the passing game and if there had been any advantage to be gained by such tactics, they would have been utilized long ago.

In the Canadian game, the difficulty of gaining ground consistently is so great that possession of the ball is not at all important and consequently the Canadian players can take all sorts of chances to pull off a long run, since they are sure that if they lose the ball it will be only a matter of a few plays until they again have possession of it, whereas, in the American intercollegiate game, possession of the ball is so important that the tendency is to adopt only such methods in advancing the ball as are reasonably sure not to lose any ground and on which there is little danger of fumbling. The game between Carlisle and the Canadians proved conclusively that tackling and defensive tactics have been more highly developed in the States than in Canada, since the Canadians were unable to gain ground consistently against the American defense. It is true that occasionally they pulled off runs of from fifteen to thirty yards by means of their long slide passes, but it is also true that the tactics resulted in a loss of ground to the Canadians more often than they succeeded, and therefore, it was proved that such plays although played by masters of the art of passing and handling the ball, are too uncertain and dangerous to be of any advantage to our own college teams.

One great fault of the Canadians was their failure to cover punts. Their habit is to punt the ball from a position very close to the scrimmage line and the punts are made so quickly that their ends are unable to get down the field in time to cover them and consequently Arcasa and Thorpe were able to run back the Canadians' punts many yards nearly every time they caught the ball. The Indians, on the other hand, gave their ends more time to get down the field, and the ends were much faster in covering Thorpe's punts than the Canadians were those of their own backs, and consequently the Canadians were not able to get away for long runs after catching the ball.

The Canadian back usually punted from the side, and, although they had been advertised as being superior to our own players in punting, they did not show near the ability of Thorpe, either in direction or distance, and they know practically nothing about kicking the spiral, which is so common among our good punters.

In open field running the Canadian backs are very proficient and the whole are more clever at this style of game than the Americans, and this is easily explainable from the fact that in the Canadian game no players are allowed to proceed and interfere for the runner, and consequently the men carrying the ball have to rely upon their own individual efforts in eluding tacklers and therefore they can get much more practice in dodging and using the stiff arm, than do our American backs who are taught to rely upon their interference. However, even at open-field running, the Canadians had nothing on Thorpe and Arcasa and there are many American college backs who are just as good as the Canadians at this department of the game.

In the Canadian Rugby game any kicked ball which goes over the opponents' goal line and is downed there, and which would be called a touch back in our game, is called a "rouge," and counts one point. This method of scoring might have been adopted with advantage to our game last year, when there was such a complaint against the difficulty of gaining ground and consequently so many scoreless games, instead of increasing the number of downs to four in order to obviate this difficulty. Such a change would have added to the scoring ability of our teams without increasing the number of downs in which to gain ten yards and also would have tended to keep the game more open than it is proving to be this year under the four-down rule.

MEADOW BROOK'S GOOD CARD

Six Events Scheduled for First Race Meet of Association.

The card announced by the Meadow Brook Steeplechase Association for its race meeting to-day promises to be one of interest. In the Syosset hurdle event, the first of a programme of six races, Norbitt and Faultless will again measure strides, and as the former has greatly improved with each race, his chance of graduating from the maiden ranks of the jumpers is exceptionally good.

The race for the Retribution Trophy will probably call to the post the best field of hunters that have been seen this Fall. On the race Herculoid ran on Saturday, he should give Gold Plate a good argument, as he is in receipt of ten pounds in weight. Another horse that ran on Saturday, but which fell after running about two miles and a half, is Duke of Duluth. Both he and Web Carter, running in Mrs. Whitney's colors, should give Gold Plate and Herculoid a good argument for the purse.

The absence of Highbridge for the Tonkaway Steeplechase leaves this race a very open affair, and the entries should furnish a good contest from start to finish. Nosegay will have another chance to duplicate his performance of Wednesday, in the Richard Peters Challenge Cup, when he will again compete against his old foe, Speculator. The race for Piping Rock subscription ponies will include the best that have run in pony races. The first race will be run at 2 o'clock. A special train will leave the Pennsylvania Station at 1 o'clock, returning immediately after the last race. The entries:

MIKE DONOVAN'S BOUT.

Son of Old Boxing Instructor Rather Mediocre in the Ring.

Mike Donovan, son of the former instructor of pugilism at the New York Athletic Club, and Col. Roosevelt's old sparring partner, failed to show any of the boxing characteristics of his parent last night when he plugged through a slow ten-round bout at the Olympic Athletic Club with Harry Corbett of Brooklyn. It was the reopening of the well-known Harlem Club by the McMahon Brothers, and the New York debut for Donovan, with the result that much was expected of the bout.

Donovan, had he possessed the average experience and ability of the rank and file of professional boxers, would have ended the contest in the sixth round, but after dropping his man for two counts of nine, he permitted him to go the full route.

Corbett was handicapped by height and reach, but in the up-hill contest, after being on the losing end all the way, showed that he was courageous.

Both men tipped the beam at the same figure, 148 pounds with fighting togs on, but when they came together in the ring Donovan appeared to be heavier with his height and muscular appearance.

The first five rounds of the bout were much below par, for although Donovan was willing and anxious to score, he missed by large margins, and Corbett appeared to be very cautious.

The verdict in the first five chapters went to Mike solely for his willingness to score, which he did at times. In the sixth Donovan showed his best work of the entire bout, and with a right swing to the jaw floored Harry for the count of nine. After regaining his feet Donovan rushed him, and by pumping both hands hard to the stomach again dropped Corbett for the count of nine. One well-directed blow at this stage would have finished the affair there and then, but Donovan, try as he would, could not score the necessary punch. Corbett hung on until the end of the round, and in the following periods was entirely on the defensive until the end. He stood up with both hands over his face, trying only a few times to land, while Donovan, who had lost his stamina, pounded away. Both men were tired at the end, but the only cut Corbett showed was a split lip, which he received in the sixth round.

The club is being remodeled and now affords a better place for the entertainment of its patrons than in the past. The ceiling has been raised and made fireproof and electric lights placed to much better advantage.

WOLGAST-MANDOT FIGHT A DRAW

Grueling Contest in New Orleans in Which Both Boys Were Punished Severely.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 2.—Ad Wolgast, lightweight champion of the world, and Joe Mandot, the fistic pride of New Orleans, fought ten grueling rounds at the local baseball park to-night with honors about even when they climbed from the ring at the finish. Both were badly punished and plainly showed their weakened condition in a desperate effort to make a strong finish in the tenth round. No decision was rendered by Referee Eddie Smith of Chicago, according to an agreement which Wolgast forced Mandot to accept before he would sign for the bout.

The terms for the bout bore every aspect of a championship struggle, excepting that Mandot was compelled to knock out the champion to win the title. The weight was 133 pounds ringside. The attendance was about 7,500 and the receipts $26,000.

The opening round was marked by considerable hard infighting. The usual feeling-out tactics were dispensed with, and as soon as the timer's bell started the pair on their way Mandot tore after the champion with an aggressiveness that sent the crowd wild. The champion was cool, however, and the local boy did no great damage. In the infighting Wolgast had a shade the better of the mixing, but Mandot evened matters with his continual left jabbing at long range, and the round ended with honors about even.

Wolgast began to force matters at the beginning of the second round and soon forced Mandot to clinch. Mandot's peculiar high guard enabled him to throw off the champion's attack for his jaw, but Ad got in some heavy punches with both hands to the stomach. Before the bell sounded Mandot was again tearing after the champion, and he made the champion give ground. The round ended with honors even, just as the first round had showed.

In the third round the entire three minutes was taken up practically with infighting. Wolgast sent in two hard lefts to Mandot's body before the latter got in an effective punch, but the latter more than made up for his poor start by forcing the champion to the ropes under his rapid fire of terrific punches to the stomach. Mandot tossed caution to the winds in this round while trying to get in effective blows to the champion's stomach, and as a result he took several stiff lefts to the face, but at the close of the round the honors belonged to him.

A terrific uppercut by Wolgast to Mandot's jaw sent the New Orleans boy back to the ropes at the beginning of the fourth round, and the champion followed up this advantage by staggering Mandot with a left to the jaw. Hard infighting followed, and Wolgast was entitled to the honors at the bell.

The champion's strong infighting again carried him to the front in the fifth round. He forced the fighting all the way and got over many telling blows to Mandot's head and stomach. The latter landed a hard right to the chin and followed with a straight left to the nose just before the bell sounded, but the round belonged to Wolgast. In the sixth, also, the champion set the pace, and Mandot was forced to give ground under the relentless attack of Wolgast. Infighting made up the greater part of the round, which belonged to Wolgast by a shade.

In the seventh, after Wolgast had driven a hard right to Mandot's stomach, the latter landed a left to the champion's jaw as he slipped in one of the wet corners. He went to the floor, but was up quickly and resumed fighting. The champion was working hard for Mandot's stomach in the clinches. Before the bell sounded Mandot had forced Wolgast to the ropes with hard rights and lefts to the body. The champion was bleeding from the mouth when the round ended in favor of Mandot.

Blood flowed freely from the champion's mouth and nose during the eighth round. In the early part of the round the local boy did the forcing and had the champion backing up, but Ad made a strong rally near the middle of the round. Both were showing signs of the hard pace. Wolgast received a straight right to the head as the round ended in Mandot's favor.

Early in the ninth round Wolgast brought blood from Mandot's nose with a straight right, and a few seconds later the same kind of a punch sent the champion to his knees. But it failed to daze him, and he was up quickly, forcing Mandot to the ropes. The local boy was showing fine generalship, and Wolgast clinched to save himself. The round belonged to Mandot.

Both boys seemed weak at the beginning of the final round, but they managed to show strongly before the last bell sounded. Desperate fighting on both sides featured the round, which ended with honors about even.

FRENCH BOXER WANTS BOUTS

Charles Ledoux, Bantamweight, on Trail of Johnny Coulon.

Charles Ledoux, the French bantamweight, who has scored victories over Digger Stanley and Joey Bowker of England the past year, has arrived in New York to arrange bouts. Ledoux, accompanied by his manager, E. Guiller, arrived on the French liner Rochambault on Sunday last. He expects to take up quarters with Louis De Ponthieu, the French lightweight, at Bordentown, N. J., during the next few days to fit himself for any bouts that he may obtain with American bantamweights, and he will stay here as long as the engagements warrant.

Ledoux is easily the best bantamweight that France has turned out, and on the other side of the Atlantic he is called the bantamweight champion of the world. The title was conferred on him by the National Sporting Club of London after he had knocked out Digger Stanley, the English champion. Ledoux can make 115 pounds ringside, but prefers to box at the American bantamweight limit, 116 pounds.

The principal object of the Frenchman's visit to America is to obtain a match with Johnny Coulon, holder of the American title. On his arrival he was told that Kid Williams of Baltimore had recently outpointed Coulon, so he immediately made the Baltimore boy the target of a challenge. His manager expects to arrange a match within the next few days with either Coulon or Williams, the former preferred, because he is the title-holder. It is expected that the bout will be staged at either the Fairmont A. C. or the Forty-fourth Street Sporting Club, the two leading boxing clubs of New York at the present time. Ledoux declared last night that he would accept any fair proposition for a bout with either boy, and would be ready after a short course of training.

Ledoux has made a remarkable record during the three years that he has been boxing. He is credited with fifty-four knockouts, his most notable victims being Digger Stanley in eight rounds and Joey Bowker in seven rounds. He has conclusively proved himself the best of the European bantamweights, and expects to have a clear title to the world's championship of his class before returning home.

LYNCH SEEKS EVIDENCE.

National League President in Pittsburgh on Fogel Case Mission.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 4.—Thomas J. Lynch, President of the National League, arrived in Pittsburgh from Chicago this morning and spent most of the day closeted with President Dreyfuss of the Pittsburgh Club. During the day Lynch obtained statements and affidavits from Pittsburghers as to the assertions made by Horace Fogel of the Philadelphia Club during the season. It was assumed that Lynch was here principally to look after evidence that had been offered on the Fogel case, regarding statements Fogel is said to have made affecting the management of some of the Western clubs. The evidence was offered as strengthening the case now pending against Fogel.

The league President had nothing to say as to the result of his visit.

"I am here on National League business," was the only explanation Lynch would make. Callers flitted in and out of the Pittsburgh Club's office all day to see him, but the callers were as noncommittal as he. President Lynch left for the East to-night.

Connecticut League Changes Name.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 4.—At the adjourned annual meeting of the Connecticut Baseball League to-day the name of the league was changed to the Eastern Association, and Pittsfield, Mass., and New London, Conn., were admitted to membership. The league is now composed of eight clubs, the others being New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, Springfield, and Holyoke. James H. O'Rourke of Bridgeport was re-elected President, Secretary, and Treasurer.

OPPOSES BROTHER'S DRIVING

Ralph de Palma Sends Protests to Brighton Auto Race Officials.

Ralph De Palma, winner of the recent Vanderbilt Cup race at Milwaukee and many other races, who was badly injured in a smash-up in the International Grand Prix three days after the Vanderbilt, is opposed to his brother John driving in the automobile races to be held at Brighton Beach to-day. John De Palma has contracted to drive a 110 horse power racer owned by a Philadelphian in the 100-mile race and free-for-all handicap.

Ralph spent Sunday sending telegrams from Milwaukee, where he is preparing to leave the hospital, begging officials of the race not to permit his brother to start in the events, as he has a wife and four little children. Wires were sent to Fred J. Wagner, George Robertson, and others connected with the meet. Mrs. Ralph De Palma is also anxious for her brother-in-law not to drive. As he is in good standing and a competent driver, it may be difficult for the officials to bar him. There is no rule in the American Automobile Association's contest rules covering the case.

Forty-five star entries have been made for the four Brighton Beach speed events, and some of the fastest cars ever built will compete, especially in the 100-mile "Election Day Derby," which may see the world's record for this distance broken. The cars will be piloted by drivers of big reputation, among them being Ralph Mulford, winner of the 1911 Vanderbilt Cup race; Spencer F. Wishart, Leland Mitchell, a veteran of many big races; Neil Whalen, who shared honors with Wishart at the last Brighton meet; John De Palma, Dave Lewis, Armour Ferguson, and others.

The 100-mile event, in which all of the above-mentioned drivers are entered, promises to be a sizzling event. Spencer Wishart holds the world's record for the distance, 1:40:52, made in a Mercer car. In as much as the race is to be a free-for-all, it means that there is no limit placed on the size of the cars which may be entered. There will be five and ten mile sprint events.

Every effort has been made to put the course in fine condition, and it is harder and smoother than ever before. The races will start at 2 o'clock.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, NOV. 5, 1912.

WILSON FIRST, TAFT SECOND.

The first and vital object to be accomplished to-day is the election of Woodrow Wilson. It is next in importance that Mr. Taft should lead Mr. Roosevelt in the Electoral and the popular vote. It has for many years been desirable that political power in the Nation should be transferred from the Republicans to the Democrats. The desired transfer has been postponed because the Democratic Party has wandered in strange places, has committed itself to unsafe doctrines under distrusted leaders. That has been cured. The Democracy has returned from its wanderings, it is again a united party, and its candidate, passing in triumph all the tests and challenges of the campaign, stands before the country as a man of high equipment for the office, worthy of the full confidence of the people. Without misgiving, with entire safety, and to the advantage of the Nation, the Democrats may now be returned to power. The country has made up its mind upon that point. Mr. Wilson will be elected to-day.

It is to the interest of the Nation that the Republican Party should be preserved as an organized, coherent opposition. The public welfare is not served by the collapse of a great party, by the rise of discordant factions in place of a compact organization. It is of great moment, it is of urgent need, that the Republican candidate should come out second in the poll, second, not third, in the Electoral College and in the popular vote. The party will then be in a position to rebuild, to free itself from the influences that have diminished its estate, to hold again the place in the politics and in the affairs of the Nation to which it is entitled by its historic achievements.

More urgent yet is the need that the Progressive Party and its candidates should be put in third place. It would be of ill omen, it would be a disquieting indication of unsound popular judgment, of unsteadiness, and of want of sense and responsibility in the electorate, if so large a part of the people should yield to the appeals of Mr. Roosevelt as to put him second in the polling. The essential part of his programme is the crippling and overthrow of institutions of which we are with good reason most proud, of established parts of our Governmental system which we cannot without the gravest danger permit to be effaced. That Mr. Roosevelt is unsafe in counsel and in policy is proved again by the authoritative review of his Madison Square Garden speech in which Elihu Root, John G. Milburn, Louis Marshall, and William D. Guthrie show that in his attack upon the courts of this State Mr. Roosevelt totally misapprehended the law and absolutely misstated the facts of the cases, very important cases, upon which he based his arguments. His misstatements were not of negligible detail, but of the very substance of the litigations. Sober-minded men do not need to be warned that a man who blunders in this way with respect to decisions of courts of record, whose appeals for votes rest upon the grossest misapprehension of law and fact, cannot with safety be vested with the highest powers under our Government of laws. We are accustomed to feel and to believe that the American people are enlightened, that their collective judgment is sound. It would be a cause not merely for chagrin but for apprehension if the larger part of the great party that has so long held power should now yield to the persuasions of a man whom in their wisdom and their calmness they should reject.

INVESTIGATING THE SCHOOLS.

It is unfortunate that there should have arisen the confusion that exists in regard to a portion of the report of Prof. Hanus on the schools of New York. The document prepared by Dr. E. C. Moore of Yale relates to the "Organization and Methods of the Board of Education and the Functions of the Local Boards." Prof. Hanus has long desired its publication, on the ground that it is an essential part of his general report. Mr. Mitchel, Chairman of the Inquiry Committee, opposes this on the ground that the report does not give facts, but only allegations.

On the face of it, the case seems to us to require the publication of the report. Prof. Hanus is a man of high reputation and an expert in precisely the subject matter of his investigation. He has employed aids whom he trusts and has devoted much time and labor to his task. To have a part of his report which he regards as valuable condemned in advance by one who is not an authority on the subject is not pleasant for him, and we cannot see how it is advantageous for the city. Our school system needs reform. Reform requires careful inquiry. Such inquiry demands expert knowledge and training. The work having been intrusted to Prof. Hanus, he seems to us to be entitled to have his opinion as to publication respected.

BRONX COUNTY—VOTE "NO."

The voters of Bronx Borough must to-day pass upon the referendum proposal to create a county coterminous with the borough. They should note on Page 3 of the circular issued by the Secretary of State, and to be found in the polling places, the things they will have to pay for if the referendum is carried.

There are fifty-four offices, ranging from $1,500 to $10,000, which will net fifty-four very anxious and eager politicians $193,000 yearly. New court houses, jails, poorhouses, and other county buildings will make fine jobs for another set of contractors. In addition staffs of clerks, stenographers, laborers, keepers, chauffeurs, and so on will be made up from the ranks of "heelers" who have been stirring up the voters on the score of "home rule," "taxation without representation," and so on. The provisions for pay are mandatory. That was seen to by the politicians in the Legislature after the public hearing on the bill, and without consulting the committee of deluded citizens who advocated a countyship.

All the counties within this city should be abolished. They are survivals of government, needed, perhaps, before the city embraced them and outstripped their bounds, but now hampering its proper administration—so far as their powers have not been curtailed. They are not real counties, they are vermiform appendixes. In them politicians grow and fester. The Citizens' Union recommended early this year that they be cut out altogether. The voters in the Bronx who want the luxury of a new county would find it costly.

THE TURKISH PROGRESSIVES AND OTHERS.

Turkey's collapse follows fast upon the regeneration of Turkey by the Young Turks, the Progressives of Turkey. It is not right to say that the one event caused the other, any more than it is possible to argue that the Young Turks were wrong in their position and ought not to have succeeded. The one sure thing is that, however they may have reformed Turkey's domestic affairs, they have been unequal to the task which they assumed. Their ambitions, however honest, their promises, however fervent, have failed under a test which they did not foresee.

Is there not here a warning for ourselves? Our Progressives, after all, are men like the rest of us. They can neither foresee nor control events, and the important events of the future may be hidden from them as completely as from the rest of us. If they proposed to proceed with their reforms in the manner proved good by a century's experience it might be that they could do little harm before they were checked by the country. But they are proposing the removal of accustomed checks and balances provided as wholesome restraint upon any faction. They are proposing to alter the Constitution at the will of the majority, and to intrust the interpretation of the Constitution not to the courts but to the common people. This is something apart from the general need of social justice, and would be sure to precipitate other issues as fatal as those which have overwhelmed the Turkish Progressives.

There should be no step backward in betterment of social and industrial conditions, but steps forward ought to be made with safeguards against missteps. Votes for the Progressives are rather votes against the Constitution than in favor of social justice. Inasmuch as there is no party standing for social injustice, there is no reason for not voting to sustain our institutions, and to advance the proposed progressive reforms by constitutional procedure. As between Wilson and Taft, voters may make their choice without danger. A vote for Roosevelt is a vote for stormy politics for an indefinite future. This threat to our domestic quiet should be buried so deep that it never could be heard of again.

WHO PAYS TARIFF DUTIES?

With the end of the building season the remission of duties on cement into Canada ceases, and the result is now available. The imports, chiefly from the United States, rose from 327,439 barrels to 793,656. This is sufficiently striking, but less so than the increase of the imports into the prairie provinces from 3,191 barrels to 302,450, almost a hundredfold increase. The duty was remitted to stimulate building in those provinces, and it is beyond doubt that it succeeded. In proportion that the duty would have kept out that cement it would have checked the building done with it, and the amount of the duty collected would have been far from measuring the burden on industry.

Protectionists argue that the foreigners pay the duty in order to gain admission to the market. It is sure that our cement makers did not pay the duty which excluded their product from the Dominion, and it is sure that the remission of the duty provided employment which would not have been available if the Dominion had continued to collect the customs that depressed the building trade so long as it was paid.

The same issue is at stake in our election to-day. It is argued that reduction of duties will cause unemployment. It is more likely to stimulate employment by reviving industries checked by the customs burden. Canada would have been more benefited if she had accepted the reciprocity tendered her, and the benefit would have been mutual. It is remarkable that the remission of duties was the voluntary act of the Government, by an executive order in council, which had declared that trade with the United States was treason to England. It was not treason to England to stimulate imports from the United States by a gift of the business to Americans for the benefit of Canadian buyers. It was only treason when the Laurier Government sold such concessions for equivalent concessions by the United States. If the Borden arrangement was beneficial to Canada, the Laurier arrangement was more so by whatever was gained for Canadian sellers through bargain with us. The effect of the cement concessions is proof that the opposition to reciprocity was humbug, and there is much humbug about the fears of the results of tariff reductions as proposed in our election.

IDEALISM, BUT NOT PARTISANSHIP.

The Times owes an apology to the Rev. Dr. John Haynes Holmes of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, which is herewith proffered. In a report of Dr. Holmes's sermon last Sunday, when President Taft was in the congregation, The Times said that the clergyman had carefully prepared "a Bull Moose sermon," which he delivered, in spite of the President's presence, of which he was not aware until he mounted the pulpit. He also said to the reporters, after the service, that if he had known the President would attend he might have had something entirely different to say. Old-fashioned folks who look for adaptiveness as a clerical quality may be emboldened to say that Dr. Holmes might easily have changed the tenor of his discourse after he had mounted the pulpit, as it was not doctrinal. But it appears that it was not a Bull Moose sermon. Dr. Holmes explains in a letter to The Times:

> I desire to dissent most emphatically from this interpretation. The sermon was one of political idealism of a radical character; but it had no more to do with the Progressives than with the Socialists or Prohibitionists, or any other party. Indeed, I stated frankly, as one of the brightest promises of the hour, (that "the new politics" for which I was pleading, were not monopolized by one party, but shared to a greater or less extent by all. That a sermon advocating the general principles of social justice and righteousness, and the ideal of a new and better Nation, should be interpreted by the reporters as a plea for the "Bull Moosers," is, to my mind, one of the greatest tributes to the Progressive cause that I have ever seen.
> I desire to make this public correction of your report because, while I have always insisted upon my right to preach politics, I have laid it down as a rule of my ministry never to advocate the election of any candidate, and never to serve the cause of any party. I have never broken this rule; I did not do so on Sunday; and I pray that I never shall do so in the future.

Expressions in the sermon, however, inevitably conveyed an impression of Bull Moosishness. He spoke of "new politics," under which the people shall govern, as if the people had not been governing this country since its foundation. He spoke of a "new political and progressive era" and a "new sense of nationality," also of a "dawn of social justice." Naturally the reporters did not connect this sort of phraseology with Socialism or Prohibition, as Dr. Holmes says he insists on his right to "preach politics," and it did not seem likely that he would waste good ammunition in the eleventh hour of the conflict. Bull Moosey his sermon assuredly seemed to the uninitiated, and it certainly struck his most distinguished hearer that way. The phraseology was that of the avowed Progressives, who insist that they are chock full of new ideas, but it must be admitted that Dr. Holmes avoided the few real ideas they have which, while they are not new, are destructive. We cheerfully accept the reverend doctor's explanation that the sermon was not Bull Moose, but was "one of political idealism of a radical character," but we are sorry he did not see fit to adapt his sermon to the occasion, and when honored by the attention of the Chief Magistrate of the United States to omit a few of these empty but well-sounding phrases the meaning of which must elude every serious student of our political history.

NO AFTERNOON TEA.

Whoever suggested the adoption in our bracing atmosphere of the English custom of 4 o'clock tea in business offices deserves rebuke. No New Yorkers, no Americans in this degree of latitude or hereabout, need to stop work in the busiest hours of the day to drink tea. If we are wise we breakfast lightly, lunch moderately and briefly, and in the evening dine intelligently and without excess. We need nothing more to eat. The London atmosphere is oppressive. Along in the afternoon one who is working there feels the need of some sort of stimulative sustenance, and tea is better than whisky and soda. Sensible Americans, we like to think, have got over the habit of drinking whisky in the daytime, most Americans drink very little at any time. The increased internal revenue receipts indicate the larger wealth of the vastly increased population.

Afternoon tea in New York business houses is not desired, and if it were its introduction would be impossible. We are all hard at work at the British tea time, except our few men of leisure who are frequently hard put to it to find playmates. If we like tea we take it at breakfast instead of coffee. It is a good substitute, but probably the American who uses either or both very moderately is wise. We may continue to ape the British fashions in men's dress, but let us avoid the British custom of mixing up tea and business. "Concentration" for the few hours of the working day, as one of our readers declared in a letter printed on this page yesterday, is essential. The lunch "hour" takes an hour and a half out of the day. The tea would take another hour. We are not rich enough yet for that sort of wastefulness.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Driver and Makers at Fault. With the ancestry he has, of course Gov. Wilson will not give many or serious thoughts to the wound he received when his rapidly moving automobile ran over a hole in the road and threw him up against one of the braces supporting its cover. But though the results of the accident were fortunately slight, its possibilities were large. People have been severely injured in just that way, and several have been killed.

Happening when and to whom it did, the incident deserves and will doubtless get a good deal of attention. None who gives it any thought can fail to see that the responsibility for the damage done, and for the greater risk narrowly escaped, is divided between the man who drove the Governor's car and those who made it.

The chauffeur was obviously careless. He was not going very fast, according to the reports, but the fifteen miles an hour mentioned as the speed was more probably twenty or twenty-five, and though he saw and was warned of danger by a red light, he cannot have slowed down much, else his passengers would not have been as violently thrown about as they were. The chauffeur's excuse that a telegraph pole threw a shadow across the road just there, so that he didn't see that repairs were in progress, emphasizes his recklessness rather than palliates it, for if he could see only the red light he was under a special obligation to be cautious.

As for the manufacturers of the car, their negligence lay in making it without provision for accidents of as frequent occurrence as this one. They could at least have padded the overhead bars. Few people have ridden much in covered automobiles without having one or more experiences of this sort, for there are few American roads without what Down East they call "thank-ye-marms," and even the most cautious of chauffeurs occasionally goes over one of them at a speed that sends his passengers up into the air without any preparatory houseling or annealing. Usually they escape with nothing worse than a loss of temper and dignity, but when there are, a few inches above their heads, iron rods with sharp corners only slightly protected, the chances of bad hurts are unnecessarily numerous.

Preparing to Help the Papers. That the doctors have seen a light recently and are utilizing it in a way that a few years ago most of them would have condemned as a lowering of professional dignity, is clearly evidenced by the careful preparations made to supply the newspapers with full and accurate information in regard to the Clinical Congress of Surgeons of America, to be held in this city next week.

The gathering will be large, important, and full of interest, outside of medical circles as well as in them, and the surgeons, recognizing either the legitimacy of this outside interest or the inevitability of some sort of newspaper reports of their proceedings, have appointed from their number a committee the duty of whose members shall be to tell the representatives of the press what is said and done by the eminent men who are to hold the various clinics. Unless it should turn out that this is an oblique method of exercising a censorship—of limiting the papers to the publication of what the committee thinks ought to be printed—the course taken is an admirable one.

It is a fact that the newspapers not infrequently display amazing ignorance in dealing with medical matters. A recent collection of their errors included references to "pleurisy of the brain," "pulmonary peritonitis," "ankersteleal nephortis," "ossification of the tissues of the bone," and "stopplococus, an affection of the throat." Such blunders as these, however, are more amusing than harmful, and they will tend to disappear from newspaper columns in exact ratio with the abandonment by one doctor after another of the old disdainful attitude toward the layman—of the old pretense that medicine is incomprehensible to others than themselves, and that in regard to it is a little knowledge an especially dangerous thing.

With some lamentable exceptions, the newspapers aim at accuracy in presenting the achievements of physicians and surgeons—which, when unexaggerated and undistorted, are sufficiently sensational, nowadays, to satisfy all but morbid tastes—and when they go really wrong in their descriptions it is commonly because a veil of hierarchic secrecy has been thrown about something that with perfect propriety, and often with great advantage to the public, could be fully disclosed. This mistake the Congress of Surgeons is not going to make, and they will have their reward. The papers that count will report their proceedings intelligently and accurately, with full appreciation of their importance.

Teaching Law to a Lawyer. Miss Inez Milholland, in the letter we printed yesterday, must have made her instructors in the law tremble for their reputation when she laid down the fine-large principle that "no one should be called upon to submit to laws who is without the opportunity of determining what those laws shall be."

That sounds well—or would had the amiable author of the sentence used a little more care in its construction—but as a statement of fact it would not stand a moment's examination outside of suffrage circles—or in them, either, it is to be hoped.

The truth is, of course, that very many people are and should be forced as well as expected to obey laws in the making of which they had no voice. Miss Milholland would contend that women are and shouldn't be, but what sort of a case could she make out for persons voluntarily living in a country not their own or for native minors? Those are only two of many classes who must obey laws in the making of which they had no hand or voice, or be prepared to take the provided consequences.

To this argument it would be a sort of answer to say that the refusal to hear the minor or the alien is temporary and remediable, but not thus can the lady satisfactorily sustain her rash pronouncement. In defending the militant suffragists she had better stick to the great truth that the right of rebellion is inherent and irrevocable. There's no denying that, especially in a Nation that began with a rebellion and is proud of it. But she should also remember that rebels risk their necks and must be prepared to take the stretching thereof as the natural punishment for failure.

CURE FOR MONEY STRINGENCY.

Change in Emergency Currency Law Is Urged.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Times's editorial article entitled "Nine Per Cent." is on the line of your constant efforts to help educate the public to the necessity of remedying our defective currency system. Under the present circumstances the large and strong business concerns, through their strength and connections, readily obtain money, but the smaller concerns and business men, although sound and in good standing, are the ones who really feel the severe pressure. During the whole year business men realize that each Fall they are liable to have just such strains as we are now experiencing, and therefore cannot afford to risk borrowing proper amounts even when money is easy. As a chain is no stronger than its weakest link, so the credit of the ordinary business concern is practically limited to what it may be when financial pressure is upon us.

The remedy I propose is that the present Emergency Currency law be extanted and amended so that the tax for the first month's issue of currency under it be at 3 per cent. instead of 5 per cent., as now provided. It will be recalled that the law as it now stands places the tax at 5 per cent. for the first month's issue and increases the rate 1 per cent. a month until 10 per cent. is reached. The Secretary of the Treasury by diligent effort has induced the banks of a number of large cities to organize currency associations, but, notwithstanding the machinery is all provided, not one bank, as far as I can learn, has availed itself of the privilege. The reason is not far to seek. Any bank paying 5 per cent. for circulation, and being obliged to pay 1 per cent. more for each succeeding month, would advertise itself as in trouble, and would thus invite a run on the part of its depositors. If the rate was 3 per cent. for the first month, it is probable that at this time from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 would now be outstanding and at the service of the country. The increase of the rate tax and the return of the crop-moving money would result in an early and proper retirement of the issue.

Why cannot a little common sense be applied to the situation? ROBERT D. KENT.

"FANNY'S FIRST PLAY"

One Example in Many of Dramatic "Cribbing."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial in to-day's Times on the scarcity of dramatic situations and the consequent cribbing in plays finds corroboration in addition to the instances cited in "Fanny's First Play." In 1797, Johann Ludwig Tieck, the chief poet of the old Berlin-Jena romantic school, published his "Der gestiefelte Kater," or "Puss in Boots." Shaw's play within the play, the appearance of the author and the critics, the play's wide divergence from what was expected under the circumstances, the disagreement among the critics as to its merits, the satire on modern theatrical tendencies, the calling out of the actors—Tieck called out also the scenery—the outcome of the "play" itself, in short, everything that is original from the standpoint of "situation" even down to "bless my kittens," is found in Tieck's comedy. That Shaw knows his German well is well known to those who know Shaw. And if he knew Tieck's comedy, it must have required but little time and less talent to write "Fanny's First Play." It is, of course, entirely possible that Shaw has read nothing by Tieck or everything but "Puss in Boots." If so, it is only an added proof that dramatic "situations" are scarce.

ALLEN WILSON PORTERFIELD.

New York, Nov. 2, 1912.

[But why cite only Tieck's play? What about the Duke of Buckingham's "Rehearsal" and Sheridan's "Critic"? Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew" is also a play within a play, and Middleton contributed another to the English stage.—Editor The Times.]

Office Tea Popular.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The interesting letter from "Office Worker" prompts me to say for the benefit of your readers that the serving of tea is not unknown; it has already "reached New York."

More than a year ago one of our members presented us with an electric samovar, and the Civic Federation purchased the balance of the equipment necessary to serve in dainty and acceptable fashion hot tea from 4:30 to 5 P. M. to the employes and executive staff of our organization.

One of our fine young ladies volunteered to take charge of the matter, including not only making the tea but seeing that supplies were kept up. We have tasteful wafers of various types, lemon and rock candy, crystal sugar, and gold-band china.

It has been a matter of surprise to find how it has refreshed each one, and that after the long journey home at night the fatigue has been materially lessened. So great has been the change that it even has been commented upon by the mother of one of our young ladies.

Gas Stove Delays.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wonder how many of your readers have had the experience I have been enjoying during the past two weeks in negotiating with the Consolidated Gas Company for the delivery of a gas stove at my flat? Owing to the failure of the company to furnish a gas stove, for which they accepted an order, I am compelled to spend several dollars a day to obtain cooked food at restaurants, and I regret to say I am not at all certain that the Public Service Commission has the right to impose a fine for every such failure on the part of public service corporations to furnish the facilities which they are constantly urging the public to take advantage of.

Unable to Work.

A hard-working laborer is suffering from muscular rheumatism and should have rest and treatment for perhaps four months. He has, however, a wife and four children dependent on his weekly earnings, and the loss of his wages for so long a time has seemed to him to make necessary the breaking up of his home. One hundred dollars will enable the family to move from the damp tenement where they have been living and will pay rent and buy food, which the $3 that the woman can earn each week at laundry work cannot supply, while the man has his chance to get well. The Charity Organization Society asks for this necessary sum to help the mother to keep her children with her in a suitable home until the father is able to find work less heavy and better suited to his strength.

Gifts may be sent to the office of the society, 105 East Twenty-second Street, and will be acknowledged.

The society acknowledges with thanks the following gifts received in response to previous appeals: T. T. T., $1; G. F., $1; Anonymous, $5; E. M. K., $1; Miss Janet Miller, $1; From a Friend, $5; Cash, $1; F. & F., $2; M. J. L., $1; M. E. S., $3; Anonymous, $10; Mrs. G. L. Nichols, $10; Mrs. W. D. Morgan, $5; G. H. W., $2; A. M. F., $5; Anonymous, $10; Cash, $1; A. M. B., $1; K. B. L., $2; C. K. H., $3; Mrs. John Glass, $1; Mrs. H. F. Benjamin, $10; Mrs. H. S. Sutton, $5; L. H. S., $5; L. B. D., $1; B. M. R., $1.

THE METROPOLITAN.

Placing and Equipment of Museum Defended by Art Lovers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Dana's criticisms of "Art Museum Palaces" do not apply to our own Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, of which we are so justly proud. It is quite accessible to all who are desirous of visiting the collection of works of art, and from most sections of the city the Museum can be reached for a five-cent fare.

Since the late Sir C. Purdon Clarke took charge of the Museum, and up to the time of his death, he constantly strove to have the collection so arranged that it would be of great educational value to the community. Any one who will take the trouble to visit Wing "F," devoted to the arts of decoration, will find there a wonderful and beautiful collection of art treasures, which are "closely associated with the life of the community." Here one will find chairs, tables, mirror frames, mantelpieces, wood carvings, clocks, &c., all representative of the great periods of decorative art from the Gothic period down through the late Georgian furniture, which we sometimes call "Colonial" for the want of a better name. The collection is arranged in chronological sequence so that one can easily find any desired period or style without loss of time. Here draughtsmen, interior decorators, architects, and students come to sketch and seek inspiration from the great work of the past which they apply to their work of creating beautiful surroundings for the present generation. This wing of decorative art is a vital, living thing, and touches the homely articles with which we come in contact every day of our lives.

The Metropolitan Museum is open on Sundays, and also on Saturday evenings.

There is also a fine museum of decorative art in the downtown section of our city which does not seem to be as well known as it deserves. This is the Museum of the Arts of Decoration, at Cooper Union, Fourth Avenue and Eighth Street, (Cooper Square.) During the Winter it is open five nights a week, and here one will find a rich treasure-house of decorative art objects, including furniture, fabrics, old silver, panelings for rooms, &c., covering the great period of art known as the French Renaissance, Louis XIV., Louis XV., and Louis XVI. Any one is allowed to sketch or copy anything in the collection to use in the interior decoration of their homes.

At the Metropolitan Museum there is a fine reference library and thousands of photographs where one can look up any question pertaining to art matters, and the authorities there were most courteous in supplying me with photographs of pieces of furniture from their collection with which to illustrate a magazine article on antique furniture.

HARRY MARTIN YEOMANS.

New York, Nov. 1, 1912.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter from Mr. John Cotton Dana on "Art Museum Palaces" is interesting to those who have had much to do with art societies and buildings, and more or less with those devoted to archaeology. He is, of course, correct in stating that in Europe collections of fine art and archaeological treasures were naturally housed in the palaces of the Kings and nobles, who owned them; and I agree with him that "art museum objects" have by no means always been "chosen for their beauty or for the help they might give in developing good taste in the community." Nor can Mr. Dana be fairly gainsaid in intimating that "a delusion like that which everywhere possesses the art novice as to the relative value of real oil paintings, however atrocious," shows its mark in most of both European and American museums.

But when it comes to the question of the proper "location" for an art museum, I think his remarks are distinctly wide of the mark, and his suggestions quite inadmissible—though more or less applicable, perhaps, to a museum and attached school of any or all of the mainly industrial arts. The initiatory members of our Metropolitan Museum of Art, for instance, showed wisdom and foresight in their choice of site for its buildings—whatever the shortcomings of their successors, particularly with reference to a maximum success for its future. The "location" those early members acquired is perfect—that is, as far as even the best site can be called perfect in a great, noisy, narrow city, river-hemmed and skyscraper-darkened, like the commercial metropolis.

Nor does your correspondent's assertion, speaking of "American museums" in general, that "they are visited by few," at all apply to the Metropolitan Museum, whatever may be the case as regards the Newark one, with which, it is understood, he is connected. The attendance at the New York institution, at least on its free days—five out of the seven in the week, if I remember rightly—is very large; and I can hardly credit that it is strictly accurate, so far as not only the New York but the Boston, Cincinnati, and Buffalo museums are concerned, to announce that "vital suggestions" from "the objects displayed" are received "by but a very small number of persons and by them very rarely."

THE MANLY GAME.

The excitement in our household
Doesn't cease from morn till night—
Frenzied finance isn't in it
Or the latest birdman's flight.
These are problems unimportant—
Oh, how trivial they seem,
Since Our Youngest went to college,
And has made the football team.

Nowadays, our conversation
Savors of the "drop" and "punt,"
"Making touchdowns," "rushing centre,"
Or some other desperate stunt.
Avidly we snatch the papers,
Read with interest the news,
And when "our team" is defeated
Feel the regulation blues.

Erstwhile, Mother had a horror
Of the game's brutality,
Father used to sit in judgment
On each new casualty—
Spluttered over moments wasted,
Talked about time being money,
Stated that "No boy of mine should Play that game." Oh, it's too funny!

Circumstances alter cases!
Never was a truer word.
'Gainst the antics on the gridiron
Nary sound from us is heard!
Praise we loud the sport, on tickets
Squandering the family wad,
Just because our Youngest's playing
Half back on the football squad!

WAR FOR THE TURK.

The Only Arbitrament He Knows, Prof. Pupin Says.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In his letter to The Times my colleague, Prof. Gottheil of Columbia University, deplores the fact that The Hague tribunal is not heard from to-day, and that, in place of arbitration, we have in the Balkans a barbarous war. Knowing Prof. Gottheil's pro-Turkish smypathies as I do, I wonder what he would say if the unspeakable Turk had been more successful by the barbarous methods employed to-day in deciding the fate of some 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 Christians who have been enslaved for over 500 years.

Prof. Gottheil begs that you "enlighten his poor and failing mind," but I am afraid that his particular mental malady is hopeless, otherwise he could easily see that the Balkan revolution could not possibly be arbitrated out of existence. This revolution is a struggle for the inalienable rights of man, among which are life, liberty, and the pursuits of happiness.

Does Prof. Gottheil believe for one moment that these rights could be obtained from the unspeakable Turk by arbitration?

Who can compel the feudal Moslem lords to give their Christian tenants, the enslaved rayahs, the enjoyment of the inalienable rights of man? Certainly not The Hague tribunal, nor the decree of any conference of European powers, nor even the Sultan himself with all his Cabinets of pashas and grand viziers. The power of Turkey was always in its army, the only institution in which the Turk believes, and the army is in the hands of the privileged Moslem landowners. The sword and the barbarous methods of modern warfare, which Prof. Gottheil deplores, are the only means by which the feudal Moslem landlords in Turkey and their fanatical army can be destroyed.

Without their destruction there is no hope for the enslaved Christian rayah. This is the very task of the allied Balkan kingdoms, and everybody who believes in the inalienable rights of man wishes them success and will bless them for ridding Europe of a filthy pest which menaced the life of modern civilization for 500 years.

UNITE TO IMPROVE PORT.

Commercial Bodies Form a Board to Aid City Officials.

The new joint Water Front Board of the Port of New York, which is to cooperate with the Department of Docks and the city officials in matters pertaining to the water front, and is designed to express the voice of the people in such affairs, met yesterday in the Maritime Exchange Building in Broad Street to perfect organization and adopt rules.

The board is composed of members of important commercial organizations, but it is especially provided that these organizations are in no sense committed by any action of their representatives on the board. The new board is without official standing as far as the City Government is concerned, but it expects to act in an advisory capacity to the Dock Commissioner. Its members feel that their cooperation will not only be welcome, but that they will be in a position to give the city valuable advice on water-front problems:

The board is made up as follows:

Maritime Association—C. H. Callahan and C. R. Norman.
Merchants' Association—McDougall Hawkes and E. E. Olcott.
City Club—Russell Bleecker and Burcham Harding.
Allied Real Estate Interests—Bradish Johnson and Allan Robinson.
Chamber of Commerce—Eugene H. Outerbridge and Chester B. Lawrence.
Produce Exchange—Welding Ring and Henry B. Hebert.
Board of Trade and Transportation—William E. Cleary and S. V. Huntington.
North Side Board of Trade—Olin J. Stephens and Joseph A. Golden.
Manufacturers' Association of New York—Francis M. Sutton and George T. Moon.

Ex-Dock Commissioner McDougal Hawkes presided at yesterday's meeting and was elected Chairman of the Board. The other officers are Chester W. Lawrence and C. R. Norman, Vice Chairmen, C. R. Le Bernard, Secretary.

"All the men on the board are not only interested in affairs affecting the waterborne commerce of this port and are acquainted with the many perplexing problems now presented by the congestion, lack of proper facilities and other difficulties," said Mr. Hawkes, "but the Dock Commissioner is meeting the situation well, and in the formation of this board there is not the slightest wish to disparage or find fault.

"We intend to co-operate with the City Administration. It is time that the commerce of this port and the business men here should take an interest in water front affairs, for there seems to be a constant effort to take steamships and trade away. This board will be a means of giving them utterance."

The Board expects to give the city officials the benefit of the expert knowledge of its members and the results of such investigations as it may undertake. Mr. Hawkes made it plain yesterday that it was not organized to put forward any pet schemes. It has none, he said. The services of all members of the board are given gratis and they will bear the expense of any work it may perform.

Any citizen has the right to lay before the board a plan for the improvement of the water front and may ask for an investigation of any facts concerning it. A notice of such communication will be placed on the calendar of the board and be duly considered.

The next meeting of the Board will be on Wednesday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce, at 4 P. M. Two questions will be considered then, the situation at the west side of Manhattan, and the situation in South Brooklyn. Mr. Hawkes said that the board had not considered and had no opinion as to the advisability of the city purchasing the Bush Terminal.

It has been a long time since Broadway has seen anything as quaintly entertaining as "The Yellow Jacket," shown for the first time at the Fulton Theatre yesterday afternoon. The play aims to present the drama of the Chinese in a manner intelligible and attractive to our audiences and it succeeds most admirably in its purpose. For besides reflecting a very great deal of charm and sentiment it contains no end of good fun. In fact, the first audience alternated between loud laughter at its grotesquerie and hushed awe at those portions of the play which developed the more serious motives.

In effect this Chinese play which the Messrs. Benrimo and Hazelton have so excellently adapted from original sources is wholly foreign. For once that elusive thing—an Oriental atmosphere—is really created, the general result being attained by a blend of dress, music and acting, each in itself touched with some quality new and strange.

People familiar with the Chinese drama know that it is in many respects a reversal of our own. Where we seek always for action and climax the Celestial is contented to sit, childlike, listening to a story. And these authors have been especially successful in so fitting the two ideas together that the result, while suggestively Chinese, still contains those high spots, allowing for our laughter and applause.

To the former the characters of the Chorus (played with much humorous dignity by Signor Perugini) and Property Man, (delightfully funny as Arthur Shaw represents him) are large contributing factors. The Chorus explains the passages as they come, describes the scenes and the characters, and after each curtain announces that he himself is modestly responsible for the whole affair. The Property Man, calmly smoking his cigarette and ambling on and off as occasion requires, provides the small articles needed by the actors at various points in the play. Is murder to be done, the Property Man approaches with a weapon, and presently supplies a cushion of red stuff to represent the dissevered member. Would the hero hang himself from a weeping-willow tree, the functionary comes forward with a tall bamboo pole to which is attached a rope and noose all prepared for the act of self-murder. And so it goes throughout with our audiences convulsed in mirth where the Celestial beholder would sit silently impressed. All of which indicates perhaps that the Chinese theatregoer has more of imagination and reverence than our own.

Parts of three Chinese dramas are said to enter into the composition of "The Yellow Jacket," and the work of translation and adaptation has been exceedingly well done. The dialogue has the flavor and charm of poetic imagination, and expresses most colorfully the ideas and thoughts to be conveyed. The names of the characters are keys to the attributes of those who bear them. "The Heart of the Daffodil," for example, being the title of the wicked usurper, whose ascetic luxuriousness of thought and dress and action are contrasted with the more vigorous masculinity of Wu Hoo Git, who is to ascend the throne after he has trodden the flowery paths of pleasure, worsted temptations, known real love, and learned the lessons of life.

In the first act Wu Sin Yin, the elder, has designs on the life of this boy and his mother, preferring his other wife, Due Jung Fah, who is the daughter of Tai Fah Min. The two plot to kill the boy and his mother. But the honest farmer, who is to be the executioner, spares the lives of the pair, and the child, represented in this act by a gilded wooden image, is reserved for great adventures. Curiously enough, and an illustration of how potent theatrical illusion may be under the right treatment, the scene of the mother's farewell to this grotesque wooden image is one of the most affecting in the play.

Another illustration of the same effect of illusion is created shortly after in a scene in which the Wu Hoo Git, after having purchased a beautiful slave maiden, presumably goes sailing with her on a silvery river. The boat is represented by draperies thrown over the backs of chairs; the oars are bamboo poles held in the hands of the Chinese super persons, and up at the back of the stage, in the inclosure reserved for the musicians, a man rubs sandpaper to represent the plashing of the waves. With all this in plain view the illusion seems perfect, thanks largely to the charm of Miss Antoinette Walker's acting and the completely sympathetic way in which the whole passage is carried forward.

Another exquisite scene is that in the garden where the hero has wandered seeking for "ancestors," who are necessary to him if he is to have any position at all. He reads the inscriptions on the graves—carefully placed there by the Property Man—and selects Plum Blossom as a name which most appeals to him. Then he kneels and prays to her as his mother, whereupon enters a younger Plum Blossom, daughter of the dead woman. The pair have a delightful love scene together, which so moves the young man that he decides that he had better find another mother, as his adoption of the girl's parent would make marriage with her impossible. However, that is not to come anyhow until he has proved his fitness and gained the throne held by the usurper.

Before that has happened he has met fearful monsters, whose nostrils breathe forth fire, duly prepared and lighted on the spot; crossed huge mountains built up of tables and chairs, and nearly perished in the ice and snow carefully scattered over the prostrate body by the very busy property man.

The acting, while not uniformly colored, was, on the whole, creditable and effective. Miss Saxone Moreland was a most appealing Chee Moo, (Kind Mother,) and Miss Grace A. Barbour a sympathetic Suey Sin Fah (Lily Flower). Antoinette Walker was exquisitely light and airy as the flirtatious Chow Wan, (Autumn Cloud,) and her sisters of the market places were prettily represented by Betty Brewster, Grace Valentine, and Grace Halleck. Nor was it difficult to understand the lovely Moy Fah Loy's attractions as played by Juliette Day, a delicate little beauty, with an air of modesty and reserve most ingratiating. Signor Perugini was splendid as Chorus, and Arthur Shaw's Property Man a distinct delight. George Relph was a handsome, and, in some respects, grateful hero, but he should develop more spirit and variety.

The best acting achievement of all was that of Schuyler Ladd, as Daffodil, a creature of such rarefied culture and delicacy that he seemed almost too frailly flowerlike to be human.

Mr. Furst's music played no small part in the success, which in its general artistic completeness speaks highly for the skill and taste of Edgar Selwyn and William Harris, Jr., whose first managerial venture it represents.

NOTABLE PRODUCTION OF 'JULIUS CAESAR'

William Faversham's production of "Julius Caesar" represents a fine ambition and a notable achievement. And it is notable chiefly because it has been approached with an understanding of the fact that it is primarily a play to be acted rather than one upon which all the colors of the rainbow should be lavished.

Pictorial Shakespeare we have had in plenty. And this one in no sense lacks beauty of scene. But first and foremost its appeal will be a histrionic one.

Moreover, Mr. Faversham, electing to act the eloquent Antony himself, and acting the rôle eloquently, indeed, has made a valiant effort to find other players of real mettle to contend the honors with him. In respect to his Brutus he has made a particularly happy choice. For Mr. Tyrone Power acts "the noblest Roman of them all" in a manner to justify the phrase. His Brutus has nobility of bearing, is richly fluent in speech and movement and gesture, fluid in expression, and in practically every respect a reflection of the figure as the poet has revealed him. Which makes it a matter of some regret that in the Cassius of Mr. Frank Keenan he does not find a conspirator of quality to match his own.

Mr. Keenan's performance of Cassius is, in fact, a remarkable illustration of just how far wrong a very fine actor can go with material to which his personality and method are not suited. It is by no means the least worthy of the figures that people this Shakespearean stage, but its importance in the action is such that its faults seem most glaring. Ferocity, rather than craft, appears to be the keynote upon which the actor sought to play. And there are times when he seems to be rewriting Shakespeare in his reading with a view of bringing him down to a colloquial mood.

Mr. Keenan is not alone in this respect. But for the present it is a more grateful task to emphasize the many virtues of the performance rather than its few shortcomings. For one thing, there has been due respect for the traditions of the play. Novelty, for the mere sake of novelty, is seldom resorted to, and the action moves smoothly and easily and intelligibly through four acts. The continuation of Antony's scene following the climacteric cry of "Loose the Dogs of War!" is the one notable exception. We do not remember to have seen Calpurnia brought into this scene before, though perhaps it has been done. But her grief-stricken pose over the dead body of Caesar does not provide an effective picture and a climax.

That the wife of Caesar would have made her way unguarded and unattended through the streets of Rome and that she would have so appeared in the Capitol, seems hardly likely. So its justification, if any there is, must lie in the theatrical advantage.

Which suggests, by the way, that in such distinction as comes from scenic pictures the Faversham production has all that is required to please the crowd. The sets are admirably painted and constructed, form good backgrounds for the action, and are yet sufficiently unobtrusive. So, too, with the human element of spectacle—the gallery of senators and the surging street mobs—the selection is well made. The supernumeraries are dressed and made up with more than common care, and so drilled as to convey a sense of reality in the scenes to which they lend their aid. Of these, the scene in the Forum, with the assassination of Caesar, reproducing very vividly the famous canvas by Gérôme, pulsates with life and passion, as does that of the Street in Rome, where Antony delivers the famous oration wherewith actors from time immemorial have stolen the thunder of their stars.

In this case Mr. Faversham has nothing to fear for, to misapply Shakespeare, always he is Antony. A magnificent Antony, too—splendid in bearing, graceful in pose and movement, mellifluously varied in elocution, and consistently vigorous. It may be doubted whether his delivery of the speech over the dead Caesar's body has ever been excelled. There is certainly no actor on our stage to-day who could equal it. And, as we have it in the vernacular, it is some speech. Which fact serves to give point to the humor of a call for "Speech, speech," from the actor when the curtain fell. In fact, a more amazing exhibition of bad taste, combined with the desire to get a baker's dozen, has seldom been encountered. To Mr. Faversham's credit let it be said that he did not respond until after the play was over.

With the affairs of the later day Republicans demanding considerable attention in this morning's newspapers, it is impossible to go into many further details of this particularly critical political crisis as it was acted at the Lyric Theatre last night. Important as it was at the time, it is now somewhat lacking in "news value." But there must be a record, at least, of the excellence of Mr. Berton Churchill's Casca, of the moderate effectiveness of Mr. Mellish's Caesar, and of the especially able effort of Mr Somnes's "Servant of Antony." Mr. Belmore deserves a word for the vigor of his First Citizen and the spirit he succeeded in putting into the mob, but Mr. Eliott's Trebonius wants restraining. Miss Wheatley was a comely Calpurnia, and played the rôle discreetly, and Miss Opp a radiantly attractive Portia. Her scene in the garden was played with fine feeling, but the subsequent passage with the messenger seemed a trifle too light in its effect—too much inclined to the mood of ingenue. And Cato's daughter surely was not that.

On the whole, Mr. Faversham's production of "Julius Caesar" deserves hearty approbation, and it should be seen by all lovers of Shakespeare and those who still appreciate good acting in poetic drama.

"THE DOVE OF PEACE."

Good Comedy and Tunes Lacking in Damrosch-Irwin Opera.

"THE DOVE OF PEACE," a comic opera in three acts; book and lyrics by Wallace Irwin; music by Walter Damrosch. Broadway Theatre.

Hon. Terence Donnybrook	Arthur Deagon
Willie Petruchio Perkins	Frank Pollock
Hildegarde Tyler	Alice Yorke
Sir Hannibal Hobbs	Ernest Torrence
Capt. Paul Jones	Thomas Hardie
Arabella Smithson	Jessie Bradbury
Saffron Kid	William Welp
Juanita Mendoza	Henriette Wakefield
Don Ramon Casava	Fred Waelder
McGinnis	Jack Henderson
Gen. Cortez	William Welp
Hoppy Toddy	George Burke Scott

The new comic opera by Wallace Irwin and Walter Damrosch began so auspiciously last evening with a chorus in which the cackling of hens was imitated in the orchestra while the women chattered, that the audience hoped for very big things indeed. The finale of the first act, in which the chorus sings one melody against "The Star-Spangled Banner" played in the orchestra, thrilled the auditors to a high pitch, but after that it must be confessed that the interest dropped to a large degree. Two things "The Dove of Peace" needs more of are comedy and tunes.

The story, the scenes of which are laid in America and the Island of Guam at the time of the declaration of the Spanish war, is about a child born in Elizabeth, N. J., whose grandmother has declared that if he kisses a girl before he is 25 universal peace will be declared for man. The boy lives until almost the correct age without having done anything so foolhardy, but on the Island of Guam, with savages in pursuit and the whole party about to be killed, he kisses the lady just about five minutes before his time expires.

The scene changes to the Temple of Peace, and with a descending dove and a waltz the curtain falls. Peace has its charms, but it has its boring moments also, and in the next act we see that there is very little about it to please women, and it presently occurs to Willie Perkins, who is responsible for the state of affairs, that nothing was said in his good mother's will about women. These presently form themselves into a company, and, taking the men prisoners, return to Washington. The solution of the whole matter is reached when some one remembers that there is a great difference of time between New Jersey and Guam, and that Willie had actually kissed the girl after his twenty-fifth birthday had expired.

The plot has Gilbertian turns, it can be seen, but it moved with none of Gilbert's sprightliness of wit. There are many clever lines, and some of the lyrics—at least those which could be understood—are cleverly constructed, but the general effect was not mirth provoking.

Of Mr. Damrosch's share in the undertaking many more pleasant things may be said. That his music would be scholarly was a foregone conclusion, but perhaps no one was prepared for some of the lovely bits of orchestration, such as the dance of the natives in the third act. The cackling of hens has been imitated before in the orchestra; one heard it last Winter when "Le Donne Curiose" was performed at the opera house. But Mr. Damrosch has utilized the idea in a new way.

Musicianship, indeed, there was in every bar of the score, but melody was frequently lacking. In fact its most prominent moment was in the waltz, called "The Dove of Peace."

In speaking of the company one should mention first the chorus and the orchestra, both of which were exceptional. Victor Kolar, one of the first violins of the Symphony Orchestra, was at the concertmeister's desk, and there were several other faces familiar to concertgoers. As for the chorus, it sang some exceedingly difficult music extremely well. Frank Pollock's clear tenor was heard to advantage Henriette Wakefield, who has been a flower maiden and a Valkyrie at the Metropolitan, sang the part of a Spanish maiden who seemed to have nothing whatever to do with the plot. To her fell the pretty Spanish air, and she did justice to it.

Jessie Bradbury came nearer than anyone else to suggesting the idea of comedy. In fact in "The Cave Man" dance with Arthur Deagon, she succeeded in convulsing the house.

The production was a sumptuous one. No money has been spared. Mr. Damrosch conducted the orchestra last night.

'OUR WIVES' POINTS A LESSON

Wisdom for Prospective Bridegrooms in New Comedy at Wallack's.

OUR WIVES, a comedy in three acts, by Helen Kraft and Frank Mandel. Wallack's Theatre.

Frank Bowers	Henry Kolker
Sylvan Martin	William Roselle
Harry Lyon	Mark Smith
Melville Tatum	George Graham
Otto, Frank's man	John Findlay
Wilson	Pamela Gaythorne
Emily Martin	Vera Finlay
Margaret Lyon	Isabel MacGregor
Elizabeth Tatum	Gwendolyn Piers

Prospective bridegrooms and confirmed bachelors my learn a lesson apiece by paying attention to "Our Wives," the comedy by Helen Kraft and Frank Mandel, that had its first performance at Wallack's Theatre last night. The bridegrooms my learn what matrimony may bring forth and the bachelors that it cannot be escaped.

Frank Bowers is a librettist with fear of women, and he has three bachelor friends who disappoint him by becoming engaged and subsequently married. He hears a melody that enthralls him, and when he finds an opportunity to meet the composer he finds her to be a woman. They agree to forget sex and work in harmony. Only their harmony fails, and in the end, of course, they find out the trouble with their work and decide to forget that sex has been forgotten. But not without considerable pain on the part of both; on the woman's side because the man will not be manly, and on the man's part because she will be womanly.

Henry Kolker played the young writer who succumbs and Pamela Gaythorne had the rôle of the composer with a woman's heart and ability at pretense. The three married men were played by William Roselle, Mark Smith, and George Graham, and their diversified wives by Vera Finlay, Isabel McGregor, and Gwendolyn Piers. John Finlay was the circumspect and somewhat sophisticated butler, who finally succumbed to the cook and planned a restaurant in Brooklyn.

PAR VALUE.

The par value of a stock is often very misleading. Some with a par value of $10.00 a share are selling at $100 and over—others with $100 par value are selling at $1.00.

The real value of a property is not what is printed on the certificate, but what is shown from the assets, the earnings, and the dividend records.

Don't put your money in any stock or bond until you know the past and present history, as well as the future possibilities of the property. Let us look up this information. It is the service we offer you.

We make a specialty of Odd Lots.

Each week we issue a weekly letter dealing with one particular stock, which after careful study we believe a good investment yielding a good return, and also one which should increase in value.

Trading Quiet, Prices Firm on Eve of Election—Call Money Easier.

It was made pretty plain in yesterday's dealings on the Stock Exchange that the approach of the Presidential election has been but a minor factor in shaping stock market opinion. Had the approaching election been much of an influence in shaping prices during their recent decided movements, it would have been almost inevitable that the final day of trading, before the balloting which will decide the political complexion of the next Federal Administration, would have witnessed much sharper changes in prices than those which occurred yesterday. As it was, the expected results of the choice which the country is to make to-day were discussed without exerting much influence upon the market. Above all, the course of prices indicated no uneasiness over what the people of the country will decide to-day regarding the Federal Government of the next four years.

Dealings were a little more active than on Friday, when trading came so nearly to a standstill and prices as a whole were firm. The few exceptions to the advancing tendency among the leading issues were unimportant, but among some of the usually less active issues changes were broader, and these declines and advances were intermingled. A decline in Canadian Pacific was attributable to the weakness in the Berlin market, although in the list at large European operations were on an unimportant scale. Events are moving so rapidly in the war of the Balkan allies against Turkey that almost to a certainty a very short time will elapse before indications are had of the manner in which the problems arising from that war are to be solved. On this point the uncertainty on the European Bourses may have indicated some uneasiness, although the declines which occurred at Paris and Berlin and to a lesser extent at London may have been more directly due to continued liquidation of weak speculative positions in the market and the firmness in money, than to apprehension over the working out of the Balkan problem. In our own market interest rates were very firm early in the day, the prevailing renewal rate on call loans being 7 per cent., but in the afternoon the rate dropped sharply, and money on call was plentiful. This reaction in call rate was accepted as the forerunner of the lessened stringency which was expected to result as soon as the funds temporarily tied up in Nov. 1 requirements are again placed at the disposal of the money market.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned on Stock Exchange collateral at 3@7 per cent., with the last loan at 4 per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 7 per cent.

Time money rates were 6 per cent. bid for sixty and ninety days and four months, at 5½@5¾ per cent. for five and six months.

Commercial paper was quoted at 5½@6 per cent. for the best names.

New York Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $245,154,227; balances, $10,531,560; Sub-Treasury debit, balance, $711,042.

The local banks have lost $412,000 on their Sub-Treasury operations since Friday.

FOREIGN RATES.

Discount rates abroad yesterday were: London, 5 per cent. for short bills and 5 per cent. for three months' bills; Paris, 4 per cent., and Berlin 4¾ per cent. Money was 3@3½ per cent. in London and 4 per cent. in Berlin.

The Paris check rate on London was 25 francs 21½ centimes, and the Berlin check rate on London was 20 marks 53½ pfennigs.

Foreign exchange rates at the points noted were quoted as follows at the close of business yesterday:

CABLE AND SIGHT RATES.

London—Cable, $4.8630; demand, $4.8580.

Paris—Cable, 5.18¾ plus 1-32; check, 5.19⅜ plus 1-32.

Switzerland—Cable, 5.20 less 1-16; check, 5.20⅝ less 1-16.

SIXTY AND NINETY DAY BILLS.

London—Bankers', $4.8120; ninety days, 4.79¼.

London—Commercial, sixty days, $4.80⅞; ninety days, $4.78⅞.

Paris—Commercial, sixty days, 5.23¾ plus 1-32; ninety days, 5.25 less 1-32.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Our Invasion of Great Britain.

The President of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, addressing the members of the Chamber of Commerce at Hull recently, deprecated the placing of orders with American steel manufacturers for material needed by British municipalities which in some instances have found it advantageous to buy here instead of in their own market. He made the point that by placing these orders abroad people in Great Britain were advertising foreign goods, which was mischievous from the point of view of British manufacturers. Why so, it may be asked, unless the American goods were superior?

⁂

The "Day After," Last Year.

It is rarely that the day preceding election has been as quiet as yesterday, when only 317,000 shares changed hands. On the day preceding the election a year ago the total was 659,000, and, two years ago it was 403,000. Stock Exchange houses are hoping that history may repeat itself during the balance of the week. On the day after the election last year sales on the Exchange totaled 566,000 shares. The market that day was irregular, with weakness general among the leaders. On both the two days following sales passed the 1,000,000 share mark, and prices made a sharp upward turn.

⁂

Campaigning in Wall Street.

It would be interesting to know to what extent the campaign which was wound up last night benefited the Manhattan Transit Company, which operates the double-decked automobile 'buses which serve Fifth Avenue and Riverside Drive. An astute political manager discovered that the gasoline 'bus could be used to as much advantage in local campaigning as the private car in making the "swing round the circle." The sides of the 'buses served as traveling billboards, the top made a band wagon as convenient as that which heads a circus parade, and the interior, screened by the banners, furnished accommodations for the corps of speakers. A Wilson 'bus which traveled through the financial district yesterday afternoon, gathered a crowd wherever it stopped. When the band had finished playing "Everybody's Doing It" and the "Star-Spangled Banner" the speakers took turns in attempting to electrify the attending multitude.

⁂

St. Paul Picking Up.

The earnings of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul have been so satisfactory lately that there is already talk of an early resumption of the old 7 per cent. dividend rate. St. Paul was the strongest issue on the list yesterday, and in the early trading it was the centre of interest. It closed with a net gain of 1⅜. The improvement in St. Paul's condition was reflected in sympathetic strength in Northern Pacific and Great Northern, both of which companies are subject to much the same influences.

⁂

Ante-Election Prices.

If the room traders sought to bring about an election scare yesterday by selling two issues which are popularly supposed to have a great deal at stake in the event of the choice of the candidate pledged to a downward revision of the tariff, they failed in their efforts. At the opening of the session a spirited attack was made on American Sugar and American Beet Sugar. The latter sold down from 67 to 62½, at which point it had a loss of 4⅞, but it later rallied to 63¼, and closed with a net loss of 3¾ for the day. American Sugar sold down from 120½ to 118¾, from which it afterward rallied to 122. It closed at 121⅞, with a loss of only ⅝. Somewhat to the surprise of brokers who had maintained that the market was in a weak technical position, the rest of the list did not follow the lead set by the Sugar issues, and the decline in those stocks was checked as soon as it was seen that their movements were having no effect on the general list. Beet Sugar touched its lowest point on the sale of 3,500 shares, while offerings of only 1,100 shares carried American Sugar to its bottom price for the day.

⁂

Heavy Increase in Incorporations.

One of the signs of the great business activity prevailing is the large increase in the number of new enterprises starting up as indicated by the large aggregate of capital represented in the charters taken out. New companies incorporated in the Eastern States in October with capital of $1,000,000 or over had an aggregate capitalization of $174,495,000, according to The Journal of Commerce's compilation. This compares with the total of $145,050,000 in October of last year and with $124,220,000 in October, 1910. The remarkable feature of the increase of incorporations in October is that this has occurred in a Presidential year, and in the month before election, when new enterprise ordinarily awaits the results of the campaign. The October figures bring the year's total up to $1,917,452,000, which compares with $1,527,388,000 in the first ten months of 1911 and with 1,716,007,400 in the corresponding period of 1910.

⁂

Money Easier.

One of the helpful influences which brought about a stronger tone as the session advanced was the fixing of 7 per cent. as the rate for call money renewals over the holiday. The rate last Friday was 8 per cent. Money grew easier as the session approached its close.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Trading Active in Spots, with Continued Strength in United Cigar Stores.

Curb trading was active in spots yesterday and there was a continuance of the interest in United Cigar Stores which rose from the opening at 113¼ to 114¼. The close, after reported transactions of 11,000 shares, was at 113¾. British-American Tobacco sold off, the close being at 23½, one-fourth of 1 point below the opening, after sales of 800. The rest of the industrial list moved narrowly. In the mining list there was considerable activity in Braden Coper, which sold off from 7 to 6⅞, but returned again to the opening level. Transactions reported totaled 3,000 shares. British Columbia advanced ⅛ from the opening, and Greene-Cananea sold off a like amount. The only price change in the bond list was an advance of ½ point, to 83, in Western Pacific 5s, which sold only $4,000.

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Prices Drop, Then Rise, in London; Irregular in Paris; Very Weak in Berlin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES

LONDON, Nov. 5.—The Times says in its City article to-day:

"The supply of money was very abundant yesterday. The rate for day-to-day advances declined to 2 per cent. at the close, the market being temporarily much oversupplied. The rate for short fixtures, however, was steady. Discount quotations were firm at Saturday's level, a disinclination to take long maturities being still pretty general.

"Paris check moved against London. As expected, the Bank secured the bulk of South African bar gold.

"The stock markets opened dull all around the house. After midday a more cheerful tone prevailed. Prices gradually recovered the greater part of the initial decline also, so that in most instances very little change was shown on the balance. Consols, however, closed dull on the news of the underwriting of the Queensland loan.

"Owing to to-day's holiday in Wall Street, the American market was lifeless, but Canadian Pacific Railway shares were offered from the Continent, partly owing to fears of labor troubles on the company's system.

"The foreign market closed firm, on the whole, war stocks being in renewed request."

PARIS, Nov. 4.—Prices were irregular on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 89 francs 22½ centimes for the account.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—The Boerse was very weak to-day. Prices generally declined from 3 to 4 points.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

While there was a tendency on the part of numerous traders on the Consolidated Stock Exchange to even up and await the election day outcome, business throughout the session, considering the circumstances, was fairly active, with fluctuations for the leading stocks covering a range of one to two points. Transactions for the day totaled 24,780 shares, including 3,460 shares on the 9:30 o'clock opening call. The call prices reflected irregularity, compared with last Friday's closings.

OCTOBER BANK CLEARINGS.

The October bank clearings, just compiled by Dun's Review, show an increase of 28.9 per cent. over the figures of the same month last year and of 24.4 per cent. as compared with the corresponding month of 1910. The heavy gains over the two previous years may be taken as an index of the notable expansion in general business which has been fairly consistently shown in the bank clearings every month since the beginning of the year. Dun's total of bank clearings for October is $17,168,439,513, and covers the leading cities of the country. The gains are general in every section of the country. Dun's says:

"Every section into which the statement is divided contributes to the favorable exhibit, with the gains in the New England and Atlantic States especially pronounced as a result of the remarkable revival of manufacturing and commercial activity in many important lines and in the Central and Western States because of the exceptionally brisk demand for all kinds of merchandise following the most satisfactory crop returns in many years."

Manufacturing and Industrial Securities

Our offerings comprise the stocks of well established and successful corporations. They are tax exempt. Their dividends are regular and satisfactory and they are strongly safeguarded.

They can be purchased at prices that will yield from 5 to 7%.

They are equally well adapted to the requirements of trustees and small investors and can be substituted, to good advantage, for issues giving a relatively low yield.

Our November circular gives full information as to their merits.

BOND BANKERS ORGANIZED.

Programme for Their Convention Assures Interesting Two Days.

The recently formed Investment Bankers' Association of America, is rapidly perfecting its organization. The programme of the approaching convention, to be held in this city on Nov. 21 and 22, has not been completed, but enough events have already been scheduled to insure two full days of business and pleasure.

A committee on municipal bonds, working in connection with representatives of well-known dealers, has already taken steps to organize bureaus where certified copies of the legal papers connected with the issues of municipal bonds can be deposited.

AGAINST FASTER FREIGHTS.

Otherwise W. C. Brown Approves of Plan to Stop Car Shortage.

W. C. Brown, President of the New York Central lines, said yesterday that while he was in hearty accord with the suggestions of the Inter-State Commerce Commission looking to an increase in the per diem rate and more rigid inspection to alleviate the present car shortage, he disagreed with the proposal that operating officials be instructed to make fuller use of locomotives and cars by increasing the speed of freight trains. On this point President Brown says:

"If cars are kept in motion at the average speed of freight trains at the present time, they would make on an average at least four times the mileage they do now. The trouble is that cars, as a rule, are held longer to load and unload than the time involved in the actual movement of the cars.

"The average speed of freight trains could be increased only at a tremendous loss of efficiency in the reduction of the trainload, and this result neither the railroads nor the shippers could stand.

"So far as the New York Central lines as a whole are concerned, the highest car shortage for any one week this season was 5,766 cars per day; and this with a mileage of something over 13,000, most of it trunk line. The average shortage from the beginning of the heavy movement in August to date has been less than 4,000 cars per day.

"The New York Central lines have already received during the year 1912, 17,802 new cars, and they have placed contracts for 10,000 more, delivery of which will begin within the next few days, and be pushed as rapidly as possible.

"Assuming that the demand of the past sixty days is about the peak, it shows that if our lines had available during the last ninety days the cars ordered and delivery of which will begin very shortly, there would have been a current surplus of about 6,000 cars.

"At the present time there are about 6,500 more cars belonging to the New York Central lines on foreign roads than the cars owned by foreign roads on our lines.

"The solution of the matter lies in hurrying loading of empty cars and unloading of loaded cars; and the Inter-State Commerce Commission, by their active co-operation which Commissioner Lane seems anxious to extend, can do more in this direction than all the railroads combined."

WATERS-PIERCE HEARINGS

Indefinitely Postponed by Agreement—Wait for Small Shareholders.

The hearings in the litigation over the control of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, which had been adjourned to yesterday, were indefinitely postponed by agreement of Frederick Geller, representing the Standard Oil interests, and W. H. Gray, representing H. C. Pierce, who met in the offices of the Commissioner, A. L. Jacobs. Since the last adjournment the suit had been settled by the sale to Col. Pierce of the stock owned by John D. Rockefeller, John D. Archbold, and others, which gave him the control.

Under the agreement all the small holders of stock distributed by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey have the option of selling to Col. Pierce at the same price as Messrs. Rockefeller and Archbold, and it is understood that the suit will not be formally withdrawn until they have had time to exercise this option.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

SHOE DEMAND SLOW.

Weather and Politics Retard Fall Buying—Hides and Leather Firm.

The lack of continued cool weather and the approach of election has kept business at a low ebb in the local shoe market in the last few days. Wholesalers are inclined to be optimistic, however, and believe that with suitable climatic conditions November orders will be the heaviest in some time. October returns showed a fairly good month, but the business done was generally below anticipations. Spring business is growing steadily. Prices are firm under the sustained strength of hides and leather, and there have been no notable changes of late.

Continued strength in practically all branches featured in the hide and leather markets. Tanners were more active in their search for additional supplies, and a few advances were reported. Shoe leathers were active and firm, but upholstery leathers slowed up somewhat. No weakness in prices was apparent, however.

HAT SITUATION UNCHANGED.

Soft Hats in Good Demand for Spring —Straw Braids Advance.

Business in the hat trade has been rather quiet during the last week, but manufacturers are apparently satisfied with present conditions. There is an exceptionally strong demand for light-weight soft hats for Spring with the trend of the demand toward the smooth finish goods. Cloth hats of all descriptions are selling especially well, and orders already booked are larger than they were last year this time. Caps are gaining in popularity daily and advance orders for Spring are the largest on record.

American manufacturers of straw hats are experiencing difficulty in obtaining the better quality of braids from the other side. The demand for straws is increasing steadily in Europe, and this, together with the recent drought in China, is tending to cause a shotrage of raw material. The price of raw material is increasing in consequence and the cost of Italian braids is almost prohibitive.

LONG ACRE CO. IS CONFIDENT.

Its Bankers Are Prepared to Meet the Foreclosure Suit Against It.

Bankers who are interested in the financing of the Long Acre Electric Light and Power Company are not worried by the foreclosure proceedings started on Saturday by the Metropolitan Trust Company in the Supreme Court.

A few weeks ago practically all the company's $500,000 issue of first mortgage bonds were purchased by Anthony N. Brady, who acquired the largest block from the executors of the estate of Judge William H. Kelly, one of whom was Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall. At that time it was supposed that Mr. Brady, who is prominently identified with the Consolidated Gas interests, had taken the bonds for the purpose of forcing foreclosure and getting control of the company's franchise, which is practically the only property of value it owns.

A. B. Leach of the banking house of that name, who, with Harvey Fisk & Sons incorporated the Inter-City Power Company to take over and finance the Long Acre enterprise, has announced that the transfer of the bonds to the "gas and electric trust" interests would not prevent their going ahead with their plans and that the company's debts would be paid and foreclosure avoided.

Saturday's foreclosure proceedings were begun on the ground that the interest on the bonds has been in default since 1908, but representatives of the bankers said yesterday that the actual filing of the motion for foreclosure would not make any difference in the situation. The bankers are awaiting the decision of the Court of Appeals in the case brought by the Edison Company attacking the Long Acre franchise. This decision is expected daily, and if it is favorable to the Long Acre Company the bankers say they have funds in hand to pay the Long Acre Company's debts. They will then be able to carry out their scheme of making it an actual operating company in the lighting and power field in the city.

50% ON QUAKER OATS.

Common Stock "Melon" to be Distributed Through New Issue.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—The Directors of the Quaker Oats Company to-day declared a dividend of 50 per cent. on the common stock, payable to the holders of that issue of record on Nov. 25. This is the much-discussed "melon" that had advanced the price of the stock to 355, at which it sold to-day.

The dividend, which is declared against surplus, will reimburse the stockholders for money expended in improvements and in acquisitions of new properties.

A special meeting of the stockholders has been called for Nov. 20 to authorize an increase in the common stock from $5,500,000 to $10,000,000. Of the $5,000,000 additional stock $2,500,000 will be held in the treasury for future dividend purposes. The surplus on Dec. 31, 1911, was $3,526,153, which has been materially increased during the current year.

The new stock will participate in the quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on the common stock payable on Jan. 2. The regular dividend of 1½ per cent. was declared on the preferred stock.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Tiny Bookslates as Toys—Silk Webbing Refused Entry as Rubber.

The Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled a protest filed by M. D. Levy & Co., regarding the classification under the Tariff act of 1909 of small paper slate books. Collector Loeb returned the articles as "toys" at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem. The importers alleged that duty should have been taken at 25 per cent. under the law's provision for "slate books." In denying the contention, Judge Sharretts said that the books were too small for practical purposes, and were obviously for children's amusement.

The board also threw out protests by A. L. Tuska, Son & Co., Morimura Brothers, Scheuer & Co., and Soy Kee & Co. on fob chains, charms, scarfpins, brooches, &c., returned at 60 per cent. ad valorem as jewelry. The importers contended that under the tariff of 1897 the goods should pay 45 per cent. ad valorem under Paragraphs 112 or 193, or at any other rates lower than those assessed. Fan chains imported by M. D. Levy & Co. were held also as jewelry and not as toys as the firm declared.

Dieckerhoff, Raffloer & Co. were denied lower duty on elastic cords and webbings returned as being in chief value of silk at 50 per cent. The importers said that the goods were in chief value of rubber entitled to enter at 35 per cent.

Large Liquid Assets in U. S. Motor Plan.

In a statement sent out in behalf of the Reorganization Committee of the U. S. Motor Company, it is stated that in the balance sheet approved by the court, no account is taken of "good will" and that net assets after reorganization will be in excess of $15,000,000, of which $5,000,000 represents real estate, buildings and equipment. There are liquid assets, it is stated, in excess of $10,000,000, of which $3,000,000 consists of cash, while the only liabilities will be $164,500in real estate mortgages.

Gould Railroad Declares Dividend.

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 4.—All officers were re-elected at the annual meeting of the International & Great Northern Railway, a Gould property, here to-day. A 4 per cent. semi-annual dividend was declared on preferred stock.

Receivers of Distilling Company.

SCRANTON, Penn., Nov. 4.—Receivers were appointed to-day for the Rohr-McHenry Distilling Company of Benton, Penn. Liabilities were placed at approximately $800,000, with assets other than capital stock of $828,239. Former Congressman John G. McHenry is President. The concern, it was claimed in the bill, has $561,422 worth of whisky in bond.

SHIRTMAKERS BUSY.

Fall Duplicate Orders Heavy and Initial Orders for Spring Large.

So far as the activities of buyers are concerned, little fault can be found with the present situation in the shirt field. Business has been generally good all Fall, and one of the largest manufacturers in the country reports the best filling-in business ever done.

The demand for fancy shirts is visibly on the increase, and several novelties have been brought out to meet the needs of the more distinctive dresser. Finely pleated silk evening shirts, (some with 60 to 100 tucks on the bosom,) with soft French turnover cuffs, are especially popular for informal wear. For formal occasions the best selling fancy shirt is a stiff-bosom effect, not pleated, in self-figured or striped pique. Short bosom effects, which at once combine comfort and a neat appearance, are also moving well. Advance Spring business is substantially ahead of last year in several instances.

ANOTHER COAL RATE CUT.

Commerce Commission Reduces Carload Rates on Small Anthracite.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—The Inter-State Commerce Commission, supplementing its recent order reducing the carload rate on larger sizes of anthracite coal in the heavy traffic between Taylor, Penn., and Hoboken, N. J., to-day cut the rate on rice and barley anthracite, the smaller sizes, to not exceeding 98 cents.

The larger sizes were substantially cut before. The decision was on the complaint of the Marian Coal Company.

SIDELIGHTS ON SELLING.

Reports from the local fur market indicate a fair demand for full-length coats, despite the heavy call for sets. In the more expensive coats there is a distinct tendency toward cut-away effects.

Deliveries of all kinds of linens from European manufacturing centres are slow. Many producers are booked ahead for several months.

One of the latest knitted neckwear novelties offered is an imported scarf made entirely by hand. Several of the high-class local haberdashery shops have these ties on display.

Zibelines are not highly regarded in the dress goods market, despite the growing demand for them. They are not practical, it is said, and because of this are not seriously considered by the average purchaser. Their cost is also a factor against their wide distribution. Short nap fabrics are moving well at the moment, however.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The National Gum and Mica Company, formerly located at 502 West Forty-fifth Street, has moved to its new building at Fifty-ninth Street and Eleventh Avenue.

Fur imports at the Port of New York in the week ended Oct. 26 were valued at $474,682, a figure considerably above the average for the last few weeks. Imports of hatters' fur goods were valued at $5,536. Feather imports entered in the same period amounted to only $36,331.

S. Schoolherr & Co., ribbons, 138 Spring Street, will take new quarters in the building on the southwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Thirtieth Street about Dec. 15. The seventh floor there has been leased by the firm.

CONSULAR TRADE NOTES.

Not a little interest is manifested in a new Japanese steamship line which, it is said, will soon be started in competition with the Java, China, Japan line. The new line hopes to begin operations shortly with the following steamers: Hokutu Maru, 3,282 tons; Banri Maru, 3,231 tons, and the Ryojun Maru, 4,805 tons.

Elephants no longer command the high prices in Siam that they did in 1908-09, says the British Trade Journal. With longer leases, forest contractors in Siam no longer require so many animals in their forests, as they have more time in which to get their logs into the floating creeks before their leases terminate.

Notwithstanding the adverse conditions affecting trade, the total exports to the United States from the Rome (Italy) Consular District in 1911 exceeded those of the preceding year by about 20 per cent. Shipments of cheese, at all times the most important export from that district, were invoiced at $1,223,647—an increase over 1910 of about 20 per cent.

Prof. Ernest C. Moore of Yale, whose report on the "Organization and Methods of the Board of Education and of the Functions of the Local Boards" has caused so much discussion, will speak on "The Personality of the School System" at the meeting of the New York Schoolmasters' Club at the St. Denis on Saturday evening. George H. Martin, former Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education, will speak on "The Personality of the Teacher." The following nominations have been made:

President—Thomas O. Baker; First Vice President—Albert B. Meredith; Second Vice President—John Dwyer; Secretary—Matthew D. Quinn; Treasurer—Henry E. Harris.

The alumnae of Public School 90, 147th Street, west of Seventh Avenue, will hold a meeting in the school auditorium on Thursday evening.

The Board of Superintendents, at its meeting on Friday, adopted a set of resolutions in honor of Dr. Maxwell's twenty-five years' service as Superintendent of Schools.

The Schoolmasters' Association will hold a meeting at 16 West Forty-fourth Street on Saturday evening.

At the next session of the State Legislature the Male High School Teachers' Association will try to have the "superior merit" provision in the school law done away with.

Dr. Ira S. Wile, recently appointed a member of the Board of Education by Mayor Gaynor, has made a report to the Committee on Buildings with regard to the Grand Street annex of the Washington Irving High School. This building was formerly the Board of Education Hall. Dr. Wile declares that it is unfitted for use as a school building.

The next meeting of the Board of Education will be held on Nov. 13.

From time to time applications are received by the Committee on Buildings from various sources for permission to place in school buildings bronze tablets bearing Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg address. The Board of Education recently authorized the committee to grant such permission upon receipt of proper applications.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Grains Fall Heavily as Cotton Again Soars—Pork Breaks.

Wheat declined on the enormous receipts, expectation of large gain in stocks, and disappointing demand, reaching new low levels. Corn declined to new low levels on favorable weather, weak interior cash markets, and enlarged crop estimates. Oats were easier with other grain. Provisions were firm early, selling off late on disappointing demand. Cottonseed oil was steadier. Cotton again advanced sharply to new high levels. The Liverpool market showed important strength on weather conditions in this country. Spot markets are still firm. Coffee was featureless.

WHEAT.

The wheat market was weak all day, declining 1 to 1¼c and closed at about the low point. The pressure on the market came from the enormous receipts, the rapidly increasing stocks, and the complete indifference of the European markets. The receipts for the day were heavy, amounting to 5,079,000, covering the movement of Saturday and Monday, while the interior shipments were not as heavy as they have been, and there was a large increase in stocks indicated. The principal influence seemed to be the lack of demand, as prices declined. The market has now broken about 5 cents a bushel from the recent high level, between 6 and 7 cents a bushel from the high level of October, and still the demand has not been stimulated by the decline. he reason for this appears to be the large stocks on the other side and the growing confidence in a speedy termination of the Balkan war. The world's exports for the week were 12,504,000 bushels, against 14,144,000 bushels the previous week and 12,512,000 bushels last year. The amount afloat for Europe decreased 3,104,000 bushels. Cables stated that there had been improvement in the weather conditions in the Argentine and Australia, and this improvemnt was in part responsible for the foreign indifference. The visible supply statement was delayed. As far as the reports were received, it showed an increase of about 4,000,000 bushels for the week. Owing to the enormous movement any pause in the demand or distribution of wheat is likely to have a marked effect on stocks. No export business was reported. No. 2 red was quoted at $1.06½, free on board; No. 1 Northern, 9¾c; No. 2 hard Winter, 99⅛c, and No. 1 Manitoba, 99c.

OTHER GRAINS.

CORN.—The market was weak, declining to new low levels, closing at ⅞c to 1¼c net decline. The decline in the market was due to the continuation of very favorable weather conditions, and to the reports of much better yields of corn than had been anticipated. A report by Inglis on Ohio and Indiana claimed that the crop in those States was 50,000,000 bushels larger than the last Government report, with feed conditions of the best. Snow was out with an estimate for the entire crop of 222,000,000 bushels larger than the October Government, making an outturn of 3,238,000,000 bushels. The receipts of old corn are still light, but the offerings of new corn are increasing, and interior cash markets were reported from 1c to 3c a bushel lower. World's exports for the week were enormous, largely due to the Argentine shipments, amounting to 8,154,000 bushels, against 1,386,000 bushels last year, and the amount afloat increased 2,287,000 bushels, and is 35,250,000 bushels, against 4,455,000 bushels last year. Cash corn was lower, with export corn quoted 56¼c f. o. b., December to March, and c. i. f. corn 66c to 69c, as to grade and delivery.

OATS.—The market declined with other grain, and closed at about the low point. Although receipts were heavy, there was not any evidence of pronounced pressure against the contract market. Demand for cash oats continues good at the decline. The Chicago stock of oats increased 712,000 bushels, but is only 2,345,000 bushels, against 6,499,000 bushels last year. This extremely small stock, in view of the movement, indicates the activity of the distribution. No. 3 white oats were quoted at 39c, No. 4 whites 38c, and natural whites 37c to 39½c.

PROVISIONS.

Hog products were fairly active and firm early, influenced by a better live hog market and more moderate hog receipts, as well as by the statement of produce stocks showing a decrease in pork for the month of 13,000 barrels, a decrease in lard of 51,000 tierces, a decrease in ribs of 11,000,000 pounds, and in all meats of 30,000,000 pounds. Later the market eased off again with the decline in grain, closing at about the low point.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market ruled at small advances. Transactions were not heavy. Near deliveries were inclined to lag for a time, but generally the undertone was firm. The strength in cotton had influence. Fair sales of crude were claimed to have been negotiated over the week-end, but the basis was steady, and the market at Texas quoted at 4.74. Crude in the Southeast quoted at 4.80 to 4.87, and in the Valley at 4.87 to 4.94. Tenders of about 1,500 barrels of November were reported yesterday. On the declines in that delivery refiners purchased, presumably due to the liberal carrying charges as compared with December. Consuming inquiry is not attracting any special attention, but, according to most authorities, is moderate in the aggregate. Speculative demand remained perfunctory.

COTTON.

A buoyant market was witnessed during most of yesterday's session. The best prices of the movement were recorded, and with the gains of about ¼c per pound enhancement of values since the low levels is nearly $7 per bale. An enormous volume of trading transpired and shorts were literally stampeded. The persistency and the extent of the rise in quotations has made for attractive profits to some of the bulls, and on this account speculative realizing was quite a factor during the day, but at no time was there a weak undertone in evidence. More unsatisfactory news as to the crop tended to dissipate the ideas that the bull market was close to culmination, but unquestionably the technical position has been rendered more vulnerable and there is noticeable hesitation in some circles toward accepting a position on the bull side at these prices.

The foreign market was excited and strong. On Saturday Liverpool was 2½ to 6 English points higher, with these gains extended to 12 to 18 points prior to our opening yesterday. Locally the initial advances were from 7 to 22 points, the response being considered rather disappointing in view of the disturbed conditions on the other side. It was cabled that the weather news as received by interests abroad had alarmed shorts and also trade people, while more bullish figures concerning the probable consumption of cotton exerted material influence. The estimate promulgated by Ellison for consumption in the United States and Europe of 16,200,000 bales against 15,821,000 was rather widely commented upon.

An abundance of dispatches was at hand showing that heavy to killing frost occurred over virtually the entire Western belt and covering much of the Northern eastern belt. The frosts are just about as an average date, but recognition was given to the statements that in many sections the crop is considered backward, which seemed to strengthen opinions that further development of the cotton plant in the areas visited by the frost has been effectively checked. On the other hand, this lateness will have to be considered when ginning figures are given out. Indications favored clear and warm weather over the South, so that the tendency was to await more definite information as to the damage caused by the cold wave.

Rumors circulated that the National Ginners' Association estimated the crop at 14,900,000 bales, and made ginning for the period just ended 2,100,000 bales. This would suggest 9,000,000 bales ginned to Oct. 31, against 9,871,000 last season, when 64.1 per cent. of the crop was represented. In the moderately large crop year of 1908-09 there were 8,192,000 bales ginned, or 62.6 per cent. of that crop. The Census Bureau will issue its report on Friday. Correspondents of Weld & Co. estimate the ginning to Nov. 1 at 9,081,000 bales. The crop estimate of The New York Commercial appeared yesterday, this being for an outturn of 14,038,000 bales, against their figures last season of 14,850,000 bales, both exclusive of linters. Meanwhile, the spot news from the South continues bullish in tenor.

Public Service Commission Blocks Plans of Mid-Crosstown Co.

The plan for the reorganization of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth Street Railway Company by means of a new company, the Mid-Crosstown Railway Company, which proposed to issue $1,000,000 worth of securities and sell them in a block to the Third Avenue Railway Company, has been blocked by the refusal of the Public Service Commission to authorize the issue. Commissioner Maltbie points out that the absorption of the railroad by the Third Avenue can be accomplished much more cheaply by a direct purchase, and that the suggested issue of securities is much above the value of the property.

The Mid-Crosstown Company wanted to issue $500,000 in capital stock, $200,000 of first mortgage fifty-year 5 per cent. gold bonds, and $300,000 of fifty-year 5 per cent. non-cumulative adjustment income bonds. It was contended by the company's expert that its tangible property was worth $405,870, and its intangible property $304,433, making a total of $710,870. The expert of the Public Service Commission, C. W. Wilder, E. E., gave a much lower estimate. He held that to reproduce the property of the company would cost only $174,293, and that allowances for depreciation would reduce this amount to $133,165. The company's estimate of intangible property was also held by the Commissioner to be excessive.

The Commissioner concludes that there is no reason for the issue of any securities at all if the Third Avenue Railway Company is to buy the property. Mr. Whitridge, he says, offered to pay 30 per cent. of the $1,873,000 par value of first mortgage bonds deposited with the committee, for which he was to receive the proposed new stocks and bonds of the Mid-Crosstown Company and to assume obligations amounting to $164,000. He should go ahead with that arrangement, the Commissioner says, and then come to the commission to ask how many securities may be issued to capitalize the purchase.

NEXT SUNDAY'S TIMES

The Foyer of the SAVOY RESTAURANT on Sunday Evening.

EXTRACTS FROM THE LONDON PRESS:—

"Sunday evening at the Savoy Restaurant is once again one of the "sights of London. There will be six hundred persons or more dining "there to-morrow night; many of the celebrities now over here will "be present."

From The Evening Standard.

"Sunday night is the great night at the Savoy Restaurant, and "brilliant in the extreme is the sight it presents. Lovely women, flower-"laden tables, the glimmer of shaded lights, and the ripple of music and "laughter fascinate the eye and charm the ear. . . . No stranger "of distinction is permitted to miss a Sunday dinner at the Savoy."

From The Ladies Field.

"It is evident that Sunday evening at the Savoy is to be as great an institution as "ever during the coming winter. The demand for tables in the restaurant is already "reaching the limits of managerial capacity."

From The Westminster Gazette.

"For visitors to London who are desirous of beholding famous people of whom they "have heard or read there is no better vantage place than the foyer of the Savoy Res-"taurant. In that brilliant rendezvous may nightly be seen members of the noblest "families in the land, men and women distinguished in the world of literature, science "and art, with millionaires and M.P.'s in close proximity. On Sunday evenings the "company includes the leading lights of the drama and opera."

From The Gentlewoman.

"'London is always en fete,' said a French gentleman last week to summarize his impressions of a "visit to Britain's metropolis. The Savoy Restaurant certainly conveys that idea, for probaoly in no "other city in the world can such brilliant assemblies be seen as nightly gather there for dinner and "supper. There must have been quite 800 people dining in the Savoy Restaurant on Sunday last. The "winter garden was crowded; from the balcony came ejaculations in foreign tongues on the beauty of the "Thames at night."

From The Tatler.

"The Savoy is as cheerful a great restaurant as is to be found in the world. . . . I never stand "at the top of the crimson steps leading down through the cafe-au-lait marble pillars with gilt capitals "into the great foyer without feeling inclined to rub my hands together, as the good-tempered uncles "always do in plays, and to say, 'Now I am going to have a jolly good dinner, and am going to enjoy it "thoroughly.'"

From an article by Lieut.-Col. NEWNHAM-DAVIS, in The World.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Mount Morris Park Apartment in Harlem Sold—Cliff Street Deal—Park Avenue Dwelling Changes Hands—$300,000 Fourth Avenue and Broadway Leases.

One of the best deals of high-class apartment house property in Harlem that has been made in some time has been closed in the sale of the six-story Montana apartment on the corner of Mount Morris Park West and 124th Street to the New York Real Estate Security Company. It was sold by Albert Franke through the McVickar-Gaillard Realty Company and H. F. Ruebsamen. Mr. Franke has owned the property since 1894, and it has been held at $275,000.

The building covers a plot 100.11 by 100, and is one of the best structures of its kind in Harlem, being one of the few six-story apartments in the city of fireproof construction. The Lenox Avenue subway, one block west, has a station at 125th Street, and the situation of the house, overlooking Mount Morris Park, gives it ample light and air.

Only last week the New York Real Estate Security Company made an apartment investment in Harlem at 136 to 142 West 111th Street, and on the upper west side the company owns several high-class and well-rented buildings on Riverside Drive, Claremont Avenue, and in the Washington Heights locality.

Deal in the "Swamp."

A quick resale with a substantial profit in the "Swamp" was reported yesterday by the Charles S. Noyes Company, which resold for Harris & Maurice Mandelbaum 60 Cliff Street, a four-story business loft on a lot 20 by 100.

The parcel, which is located near Beekman Street, was purchased by the sellers from Evelyn Coventry about ten days ago. The buyer is an investor, who, it is reported, will improve the site with a modern structure.

Park Avenue Sale.

Douglas L. Elliman & Co. have sold for the estate of Henrietta Steinfelder, Samuel Steinfelder, Executor, the three-story dwelling at 1215 Park Avenue, being 20.8 feet south of the southeast corner of Ninety-fifth Street. The plot is 20 by 69.

A Resale and Profit.

Thomas Byrnes has resold to Lemuel Littlefield 320 West Fourteenth Street, a four-story flat on a lot 25 by 103.3. The buyer owns the adjoining parcel, No. 318, and now controls a plot 50 by 103.

The property just sold brought about $27,000, which is about $2,000 more than the seller paid for it several months ago. The Duross Company negotiated the transaction.

Tammany Clubhouse Sold.

The old four-story building at 48 Madison Street, occupied by the Downtown Tammany Association, has been sold to Eugene Driscoll and Michael Rofrano. The structure occupies a lot 19.9 by 53.6 by irregular, between James and Oliver Streets. Catherine Coyle is the owner of record.

Bronx.

Clement H. Smith has sold for a client the private dwelling 459 East 178th Street, to an investor.

Long Island.

The Somerville Realty Company has sold at Somerville Park, Arverne, a plot 140 by 100, on the west side of Gaston Avenue, to Samuel Engelsberg, and plot 40 by 100 on the east side of Vernam Avenue to the same purchaser; also a plot 80 by 100 on the east side of Gaston Avenue, north of Morris, to Louis Glass & Co.

The McKnight Realty Company has sold to S. M. Hitt of Philadelphia a plot on the Estates of Great Neck, having a frontage of 75 feet, at the junction of Hillside Avenue and Maple Street. The purchaser will erect a residence to cost $12,000. Other sales by the same company have been made to G. J. Hardings and Mrs. M. McMillan.

$300,000 Lease on Fourth Avenue.

The Hartley Silk Manufacturing Company has leased the eight-story fireproof building to be erected at 377 Fourth Avenue, between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh Streets, by William H. Heroy. The lease is for twenty-one years, at a rental aggregating $300,000, and carries a removal privilege.

The lease dates from the completion of the structure, which is being erected by Edward Corning & Co., from plans by H. W. Knowles. The tenant, which operates several large mills, has been located for many years on Broome Street. S. Osgood Pell & Co. negotiated the lease.

$300,000 Broadway Lease.

Leopold Weil, Adolph Meyer, and Heil & Stern have leased for a term of years at a rental of about $300,000, the corner store in the Marlborough Hotel property, northwest corner of Thirty-sixth Street and Broadway, being the part where the café of the hotel was formerly located. The store will be remodeled for business and occupied by the Vogel & Lemlein Company, retail clothiers.

Leases.

F. J. Whiton has leased for the Ten and Twelve Maiden Lane Company the store and basement at 31 Maiden Lane, to T. H. Wilkinson for a term of years. This completes the renting of this building.

Albert B. Ashforth has leased for the United Drug Company, in the McAlpin Hotel, Thirty-fourth Street and Broadway, the store, 15 by 50, between the drug store and the Thirty-fourth Street entrance of the hotel, to D'Amron Company, dealers in stationery and leather goods. The store has been held at $25 per square foot. Mr. Ashforth was the broker in the lease of the corner store to the United Drug Company, recently recorded, at $110,000 per annum.

Pease & Elliman have leased for Charles R. Pelgram the premises at 94 Riverside Drive, a five-story American basement dwelling, to Robert L. Beecher.

$1,100,000 West End Apartment.

Plans were filed yesterday for a new twelve-story apartment house on West End Avenue to cost $1,100,000. It will occupy a plot of 102.1 on the avenue by 139.11 deep on the northwest corner of Eighty-fifth Street. It will be constructed of brick, stone, and concrete, with a façade of terra cotta bricks and limestone, and will have accommodations for fifty-three families. The West End Avenue and 85th Street Company, of which Leopold Kahn is President, are the owners. The architects are Schwartz & Gross.

Queens Building Record.

According to the reports of the Building Department the Borough of Queens is making rapid strides in development. In the month of October, 1910, there were 350 plans filed with the department to cost $1,501,105. In October, 1911, 348 were filed at an estimated cost of $1,449,867, and during the same month in 1912, the plans filed were 506, representing an estimated cost of $1,702,745.

Realty Notes.

Shampan & Shampan are preparing plans for a high-class five-story apartment building to be located on the north side of Twelfth Street, 247.6 feet east of Fifth Avenue, Borough of Brooklyn. The Seymour-Rosenberg Construction Company of Manhattan are the owners.

Barnett House is the buyer of the plot 114 by 117, at the southwest corner of Pinehurst Avenue and 181st Street, sold by the Henry Morganthau Company.

Frederick Fox & Co. have been appointed by John J. Gibbons agents for the twelve-story mercantile building, 45 to 51 West Twenty-fifth Street, recently purchased by him from the Building and Engineering Company.

Indications are that the weather will be generally fair Tuesday and Wednesday in practically all districts east of the Rockies. West of the Rocky Mountains the weather will be unsettled with rain or snow.

Temperature will rise Tuesday throughout the East and South States, and it will change little elsewhere during the next forty-eight hours.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be moderate to brisk southwest; South Atlantic Coast, moderate east, except variable on the Carolina coast.

Steamships departing Tuesday for European ports will have brisk south and southwest winds and generally fair weather to the Grand Banks.

United States.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an open competitive examination, for men only, on Nov. 11, to fill two vacancies in the position of architectural designer and draughtsman, Isthmian Canal service, New York City, at salaries from $150 to $200 a month, according to qualifications, and vacancies as they may occur requiring similar qualifications. For the position paying the highest salary, only accomplished designers and expert draughtsmen will be considered. The applicant's knowledge of theory and practice of designs, especially in reinforced concrete, and of office routine, will be given consideration in the rating. Those applicants who, other qualifications being equal, have graduated from a reputable college in architecture or have had the advantage of foreign study, will be preferred. They will be required to give detailed answers to the questions in application and examination form 1,312, and to submit the names and addresses of not less than three, nor more than five, persons who are competent to judge of their qualifications and are willing to certify thereto in writing, if requested. for You—South America, 64 days, $300 up.

Can you think of anything better, or as good? You know Europe well. Here is a wonder continent, our next-door neighbor, that you have never seen.

In South America are mountains that dwarf the Alps, rivers beside which the Rhine is a babbling brook, cities that rival Berlin in size, Paris in beauty, and Rome in interest.

And you have never seen these things? Then see them this winter.

Write us to-day for illustrated book that gives details of two 64-day cruises that include visits to Bahia, Rio de Janeiro, Santos, Montevideo, Buenos Ayres, Sao Paulo, Petropolis, Barbados and Trinidad in the West Indies, and optional trips to Panama and Valparaiso. Sailing dates from New York, DEC. 28TH and MARCH 22D. Cost $300 and up.

These cruises are made by the new Twin-screw S. S. VESTRIS, 12,000 tons, equipped with modern safety devices and affording passengers the comforts of a well-appointed hotel. For booklet address

HOUSE CANNOT ELECT IF VOTERS DO NOT

Utter's Death May Change Rhode Island Poll, but Democrats Still Lack Two Votes.

HADLEY MIGHT BE PRESIDENT

Politicians Figure How, If Named with Taft, He Would Be Elected to Office by the Senate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—For the first time since 1892, when more than two Presidential candidates received Electoral votes, politicians are discussing the possibility of the election of a President being thrown into Congress. That would result if none of the candidates this year received a majority of the Electoral vote.

The peculiar interest of the situation is that a deadlock in the Electoral College would disclose a deadlock in the House, with the chance that when the Senate came to elect a Vice President who would become President, failing an election in the House before March 4, the Senate also would be unable to make a choice. In that case the Presidency would devolve upon the Secretary of State, a continuing officer, and Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania would be President.

The death yesterday of Representative George H. Utter, Republican, of Rhode Island does not break the deadlock. In electing a President the House votes by States, and a candidate to be elected must have a majority—twenty-five States. As the House stands, 22 States are Republican, 22 Democratic, and 4, including Rhode Island, are equally divided. Even if Mr. Utter were succeeded to-morrow by a Democrat, that would still give the Democratic candidate only 23 States, or 2 short of what is needed. In the three other "stand-off" States, Maine, Nebraska, and New Mexico, a shift of one man each in two States would be enough, but there seems little chance of such conversions.

Sherman's Death Changes Situation.

In the Senate the situation has been much changed by the death of Vice President Sherman. While the House votes on the names of the three candidates for President receiving the highest Electoral vote, the Senate is restricted by the Constitution to selecting a Vice President from the two candidates receiving the highest Electoral vote.

With Mr. Sherman on the Republican ticket it seemed almost impossible for the Senate to choose a Vice President, although the failure to elect would have meant that the Presidency would devolve on an officer who had not been voted on at all. The Senate is made up of fifty Republicans, half a dozen of whom are Progressives, and forty-three Democrats. No matter how the vacancies in the Senate are filled, neither candidate can win on a straightout vote, as election in the Senate is by individual votes, a majority of the whole number being necessary to a choice.

The expectation has been that if the choice lay between Marshall and Johnson, the Taft Republicans would refrain from voting or absent themselves from the chamber in sufficient numbers to make a majority for either man impossible. In the same way the Progressive Senators might stay away, though what they would gain by allowing the Presidency to go to Secretary Knox is not apparent.

If the Republican Vice Presidential nominee was a Taft Republican, the only chance for an election would seem to lie in such pressure of public opinion as would compel the Senators to attend the Senate sessions and elect a President on the obsolete rule of the Senate requiring all Senators to vote one way or the other unless excused.

Possibility of Electing Hadley.

But if the Republicans nominated Gov. Hadley of Missouri for Vice President and his name went before the Senate with that of Gov. Marshall as one of the two candidates who have received the highest Electoral votes, the regular Republicans would vote for him, and the Progressives could scarcely fail to support him, since, although he has declared himself a regular, he figured prominently at the Republican Convention as a Progressive. He would probably be elected without difficulty.

But regardless of Mr. Hadleys popularity with the Progressives, the situation in the Senate has by some been narrowed down to a point where the election might rest with Senator Works of California. He is a radical Republican, who denounced Roosevelt for bolting the party, but himself came out in favor of Wilson. His importance lies in the possibility that Senatorial elections this Winter might add five Senators to the Democratic column, making the Senate stand 48 to 48. His vote for the Democrat would elect him, while his vote for the Republican or the Progressive would prevent an election and give the office to Mr. Knox.

DEATH OF A WILD RUMOR.

Grand Jury Finds Groundless Story of Crime in Abraham & Straus's.

Whatever survived of the fantastic rumor, persistently circulated several weeks ago, to the effect that a girl had been found murdered in a locker room in the Abraham & Straus store, in Fulton Street, Brooklyn, was buried yesterday when the Kings County Grand Jury, which had inquired into the queer yarn thoroughly, reported to County Judge Fawcett that it had found the report to be absolutely groundless. The jury made an investigation, at the request of the management of the store, with a view to finding how the false story had originated, after the store people themselves had vainly tried by other means to trace the rumor to its source.

"It is little short of a crime," said Judge Fawcett, in discharging the jury, "that such a dastardly rumor has been spread concerning one of the foremost business houses of the city."

In its presentment the Grand Jury said:

"In view of the publicity that was given the fact that a certain matter was being investigated by the Grand Jury, we believe that common justice requires us to state the result of that investigation. We refer to the charge of a crime having been committed in the establishment of Abraham & Straus, in this borough, and that the dead body of a girl had been found in their store. We examined many witnesses and records in an endeavor to ascertain whether or not there was any truth in the charges that were made. We also had every rumor and report that came to our attention fully and thoroughly investigated. Every person who was alleged to have known anything about the matter was interviewed and every address that was furnished as a place where information could be obtained was visited. No one has been found who knows anything whatever about the charges, and no proof has been given and no statement made which show that there is any truth whatever in the charges that we have been investigating. On the contrary, our entire investigation into this matter has shown that there is no truth whatever in the charges and that the rumors and reports thereof are absolutely groundless."

Child Swallows Pills, Dead.

Anthony Andrukikus, 2 years old, playing about the home of his parents, at 228 Adams Street, Hoboken, managed to get hold of a box yesterday containing pills which his mother had been taking under orders from a physician. There were from eight to a dozen pills in the box, and these the child swallowed. Each pill contained strychnine. The child began to show the effects of the poison almost at once and his mother, seeing the empty box, grabbed him up and ran to the office of Dr. Branner, near by, but the child was dead.

BORDEN MANAGER FINED.

Heavy Penalty for Selling Milk Below Standard—Other Offenders, Too.

Miss Santa Carolina, manager of Borden's milk station at 87 Bayard Street, was fined $250 in Special Sessions yesterday after she had pleaded guilty to selling milk which was 7 per cent. below the standard.

Miss Carolina's counsel asked that sentence be suspended on the ground that no inspection of the milk had been made by the milk inspectors employed by Borden's, but Inspector Johnson, who made the arrest, insisted that a fine be imposed, and said:

"Your Honors, the Borden Company has had two convictions before, one in 1909, in which it was fined $25, and another this year, when a fine of $25 was imposed also. I think that it is only right that a big fine should be imposed in this case."

The Justices remarked that they hoped the fine they imposed would serve as a warning to others.

Henry Meyer, a grocer of 156 Eighth Avenue, pleaded guilty to selling milk 2 per cent. below the standard and was fined $35. Charles Summerstein an egg dealer at 184 Rivington Street, pleaded guilty to selling rotten eggs and was fined $25, while a fine of $20 was imposed upon Herman Bersh, an egg dealer of 221 Second Street, who attempted to sell decomposed eggs.

A fine of $150 was imposed upon Charles Blank of 1,571 Lexington Avenue, who pleaded guilty to selling cream below the standard. He has a store at 70 East 105th Street. Three others were fined from $10 to $20 for similar offenses, while forty cases of violations of the food laws were postponed until next Monday

EXPLOSION ON WAFFLE DAY.

Flashlight Photographing of Old Iron Throws Guests Into a Panic.

There was a small panic at the Woman's Exchange, at Forty-third Street and Madison Avenue, yesterday during the celebration of the annual Waffle Day. It was not caused by the explosion of Mrs. Cornelius Agnew's 201-year-old waffle iron, which celebrated its birthday, or the spontaneous combustion of the waffle batter made from Mrs. Russell Sage's 100-year-old waffle recipe.

It was while the 201-year-old iron and the 100-year-old batter, with Christina, the Swedish waffle cook, were having their pictures taken. There are double dining rooms in the house with a stairway leading from the Dutch room below to the American room above, and the stairway between acted as a chimney. The upper dining room was filled with guests, all eating waffles, when suddenly there was the noise of what seemed to be a terrific explosion downstairs, and simultaneously a flash of flame and cloud of smoke appeared on the stairway. Every guest jumped up and rushed to the door. There was a genuine fright until it was discovered that it was a flashlight, and then the waffles were finished, only a little cold. The exchange is closed today, but a number of prominent women are to give waffle lunch parties to-morrow.

17 DAYS FOR MURDER CASE.

New Record in Criminal Prosecution Made in Kings County.

The swiftest murder prosecution in the history of Kings County, and probably in the history of the State, was brought to a conclusion last evening when George Bishop, a young negro, was found guilty of murder in the first degree just seventeen days after he had killed Mrs. Margaret Bell of 53 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn.

The trial itself took only one day. It began yesterday morning at 10:30, and at 6:45 P. M. Supreme Court Justice Crane finished his charge to the jury. The jurors then went out to dinner, and at 8:30 brought in their verdict. Although the accused negro took the stand and said that he was so drunk on the night he went to Mrs. Bell's house that he remembered nothing of what had happened there, Justice Crane told the jurors afterward not to fear that they had done any injustice, for before the trial commenced Bishop had offered to plead guilty to murder in the second degree.

Bishop, who lived at 274 Pulaski Street, Brooklyn, went to Mrs. Bell to borrow money, and when this mission failed he stayed to rob and kill. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty caught him the next morning, and wrung a confession from him immediately.

COMPOSER SUES SHUBERT.

Sylvio Hein Claims $2,000 Royalties on "Judy Forgot" from Producer.

A complicated theatrical wrangle came to light yesterday in the trial before Supreme Court Justice Gavegan and a jury of the suit of Sylvio Hein, the composer of the score of "Judy Forgot," against Lee Shubert and Daniel B. Arthur.

Mr. Hein is suing Mr. Shubert for $2,000 in royalties which he alleges are due him from the production of "Judy Forgot," and although Mr. Arthur, who was Mr. Shubert's partner in 1910, is named as codefendant, he appeared yesterday as a witness for the plaintiff. This is explained by the fact that Mr. Arthur recently went through bankruptcy and is hence judgment proof.

Mr. Shubert, through his attorney, Max D. Steuer, explained to the jury that Mr. Arthur had engaged Mr. Hein to write the score of the comic opera in question without Mr. Shubert's cognizance and before the signing of the partnership agreement. He stated further that Mr. Arthur was appearing for the plaintiff in order to hurt Mr. Shubert, who opposed his discharge in bankruptcy.

The case was completed yesterday, and a sealed verdict was ordered.

PUT UP PRICE OF COAL.

Independent Operators Added 25 Cents to Premium with the Cold Snap.

Coal dealers in this city said yesterday that with the sudden short cold snap independent anthracite operators had added 25 cents a ton to the premium on stove coal. The cold also caused an increase in the demand for domestic coal, and many of the dealers were swamped with orders yesterday.

A representative of the coal industry said that by the middle or end of this month, when the frost stops the navigation on the great lakes, the West would be fairly well supplied, and from 25,000 to 30,000 tons of anthracite more than what was coming now would come daily to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston, and other Eastern markets. The operators had not increased prices, but independent dealers, he said, were charging $2 a ton over the schedule prices for stove coal.

NEW ENGLAND FACES HARD COAL FAMINE

Unable to Obtain Adequate Supply, and Prices Are Soaring.

SCHOOLS ARE WITHOUT FUEL

Many Towns Now Preparing to Meet the Winter with Wood Fires.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 4.—The scarcity of anthracite coal in New England is likely to lead to suffering in case the weather should become normal. Dealers here have enough to meet moderate demands, but they say that there is no prospect of coal being any more easily obtainable within the next month.

Some of the dealers foresee a greater scarcity than at the present time, which will necessitate a rise in the price before the end of another month.

Providence reports large receipts recently by water, and dealers in other cities say they cannot account for the apparent discrimination in favor of Rhode Island.

The New Haven road yesterday issued an appeal to receivers of coal to unload the cars promptly so that they may be returned to the mines. In many places there is also a famine in cement due to delayed shipments.

The coal situation in the interior is accurately represented by this extract from a St. Johnsbury, Vt., newspaper:

"There is not a pound of hard coal in St. Johnsbury that can be bought today, and the dealers are unable to tell when they will have any for delivery. George P. Moore, in conversation with a Burlington dealer, was informed that he could not expect coal for a month. Moore ordered the coal for the public school building last June, and not a pound of it has been delivered as yet.

"E. T. and H. K. Ide Company ordered 2,000 tons of hard coal last June, and not a ton of it has been delivered. They have options to buy of the 'independents' at exorbitant prices."

In one Massachusetts town the local paper reports that individuals are receiving coal in carload lots, while dealers declare they can get none.

$10 a Ton in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 4.—The supply of coal throughout New Hampshire is very short. Orders placed by consumers with dealers in Summer and early Fall are in some cases still unfilled. The retail price of coal is $10 a ton, and only a small quantity will be delivered to any one purchaser at this price. Dealers claim that their orders have not been filled by middlemen, and that the coal they are selling is "premium" coal, on which they make less than $1 a ton.

So far the Autumn has been mild. The actual need of coal has been slight, and dealers say that after the extraordinary movement of coal west is over they will get their usual supply here in time to avoid any suffering.

The supply of wood is ample in this vicinity, and so far there has been no advance in price on account of the coal shortage. It is understood that coal dealers generally have been stocking up with wood so as to be able to carry their customers through the Winter.

Complaining citizens in Strafford County have asked Gov. Bass to investigate the situation as regards fuel supply, but he does not hold that it is a matter within his jurisdiction.

Wood Is Going Up.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 4.—With anthracite coal at almost a record price of $8.25 a ton in this section, certain suffering confronts thousands of poor people in this section of New England should the weather turn cold. Nor will the poor alone suffer, for many people who paid for their coal during the Summer months have not yet received it, and the dealers have, in most cases, offered the alternative of returning the money or delivering it when they can.

The greatest suffering in the event of a sudden and intense cold spell will come in the cities, for in the rural parts of this section of New England it is always possible to get wood. Wood as fuel is bringing $8 a cord.

Coal in Half-Ton Loads.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Nov. 4.—The Winter prospects threaten severe suffering among the poor and discomfort throughout the State owing to the coal shortage. One dealer divided two carloads just received into half tons to meet the demand, selling at $7.75 and $8 cash, and at Barre and Northfield, $8.50 and $8.75.

The school supply ordered in June has not been delivered.

A majority of the people are caught without a supply for the Winter. They will depend on wood. Hard wood slabs have gone up from $8 to $9, and there is a big demand.

COUNTER-CLAIM BY PIERCE.

New Angle to Rycroft Suit Against Oil Man, Which Is Reopened.

Having obtained an order last week from the Appellate Division opening the default against him in the suit of Mrs. Alice G. Rycroft for $171,000, Henry Clay Pierce, President of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, filed an answer yesterday in the Supreme Court.

Last year Mrs. Rycroft, who resides at 246 West End Avenue, obtained a judgment for $171,000 against Mr. Pierce upon his failure to appear before Justice Erlanger. Mrs. Rycroft declared that the amount was due her upon some stock transactions which Mr. Pierce had undertaken at her commission. In addition to denying the debt, Mr. Pierce in his answer sets up a counter-claim of $44,184.15, which he declares he advanced to Mrs. Rycroft at different intervals from December, 1903, to June, 1909.

Mr. Pierce explains that he maintained an account called the "H. C. Pierce Special" at the brokerage firm of Post & Flagg for Mrs. Rycroft's sole benefit. In support of his contention a letter was submitted yesterday from Mrs. Rycroft which reads as follows:

> Dear Clay: I have held on to Virginia Chemical as long as I can and must let it go to-morrow unless we can arrange in this way: You sell my S. P., M., K. & T., and Hocking Valley and take over the Chemical. It will mean a great loss in value, and on the Chemical I will be getting 8 per cent. interest, while on those other stocks, nothing. Thirteen hundred shares of Chemical will mean $3,000 less than we are carrying now. Do you think it is wise to do this? When my father's estate is settled I shall be able to take the stock back. Dear Clay, do not think I want you to take on any more than you are carrying now. I am going to give the house to the real estate people. I shall not be able to keep it, and they can get a good price furnished. Please call me up, Clay. I must know first thing in the morning. Sincerely,
>
> ALICE RYCROFT.

Mr. Pierce will be represented in the suit by the firm of Van Vorst, Marshall & Smith of 25 Broad Street.

COLUMBIA PROSPERING.

Deficit Reduced Last Year by Half—A New Professorship.

Columbia had one of the most successful financial years of its history in the twelve months just ended, according to a report made to the Trustees yesterday afternoon at their November meeting. The Treasurer's figures show a deficit in the operating expenses of the university of $36,872, which is $20,000 less than the deficit of a corresponding period in the prior year. The total cost of maintaining the work of the corporation, not including either Barnard, Teachers College, or the College of Pharmacy, was $2,170,128. The interest on the debt amounted to $116,110, and $100,000 was added to the redemption fund for the payment of the corporate debt when due.

The total amount of the gifts and legacies received during the year was $2,175,176. These include the cancer research funds and part of the fund for the Pulitzer School of Journalism. The principal of the special funds now held by the Trustees for various purposes connected with the work of the university amounts to $8,256,972.81.

President Butler reported the successful organization of a movement in Holland, participated in by representatives of the Dutch Government, as well as by leaders of intellectual and commercial life, to establish at Columbia University a Queen Wilhelmina Professorship of Dutch History, Literature and Language. Half of the funds necessary for the undertaking are pledged by the supporters of the movement in Holland, on condition that the remaining half is raised in the United States.

J. T. WOOD SURRENDERS.

Ex-Northern Bank Official Released in $2,000 Bail.

James T. Wood, the former Vice President of the Washington Savings Bank, and Vice Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Northern Bank, who was indicted Friday for making a false report to the State Banking Department, was surrendered before Judge Foster in General Sessions yesterday and released on $2,000 bail, after pleading not guilty to the charge.

The arrest grew out of a mass meeting of the depositors of the Northern Bank, and the conflicting testimony given by Wood on many occasions when he was brought to court to defend actions brought against him by Joseph G. Robin, who is now in the Tombs on a charge of wrecking the Northern Bank. The report which Wood is alleged to have made is of Nov. 2, 1910, and at that time Wood treated $208,000 in worthless checks from the Bankers Realty and Security Company as cash.

In asking that bail be fixed at $2,000 Assistant District Attorney Clarke said that although the offense Wood was alleged to have committed was only a misdemeanor, he thought that it savored of perjury, and believed the District Attorney was against making any concessions whatever. Wood was represented by James R. Ely, and said that immediately upon learning that he had been indicted he had come from his home at Sayville, L. I.

BEGIN SUIT AGAINST THE POST

City Files Summons and Complaint in Action for $16,920.

The suit of the City of New York against The New York Evening Post was formally begun yesterday by the filing of the summons and complaint in the Supreme Court. The action is a demand for the return of $16,920 which the city alleges was obtained fraudulently by The Post through an advertising contract to which it did not conform.

The Evening Post contracted to publish the lists of registration and voting stations in New York City in 1910, from Oct. 9 through to Oct. 17. The city, through Corporation Counsel Watson, complains that on Oct. 7 and Oct. 16, Sundays, The Post failed to live up to its contract, as it did not publish a circulated, bona fide edition on those days, but a perfunctory sheet which it made no effort to circulate or to sell.

On account of these alleged misrepresentations, which the city charges were deliberate and conscious, the return of $16,920, with interest, is demanded.

The answer of The Post has not yet been filed.

DEFINES 'UNDUE INFLUENCE.'

More Than Opportunity or Solicitation Must Be Shown, Says Surrogate.

Surrogate Fowler admitted the contested will of Mrs. Mary E. B. Miller, who died last May, to probate yesterday. The will cut off her husband, Henry A. Miller, with $1, and gave the greater part of an estate estimated at about $15,000 to her second cousin, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Purdue. Mr. Miller contested the will, alleging fraud and undue influence. He showed by witnesses that the lawyer who drew the will had been brought to his wife's bedside two days before her death, and that she had never met him until Mrs. Purdue introduced him.

In upholding the will, despite its provisions, Surrogate Fowler said:

"Fraud and undue influence in procuring a will must always be proved. Proof of mere opportunity, or even the existence of a confidential relation or the fair solicitation on the part of a legatee are insufficient in themselves to establish undue influence."

KIRCHWEY SETTLES DEBT.

By Paying $50 Down He Escapes Supplementary Proceedings.

Prof. George W. Kirchwey, former dean of the Columbia Law School, and candidate on the Progressive ticket for Judge of the Court of Appeals, did not have to appear, after all, in the City Court in supplementary proceedings yesterday morning. A payment of $50 last Saturday and the promise to pay the remainder to Simeon M. Barber was what saved the professor.

The summons to appear in the City Court to testify as to his alleged inability to meet a $354 judgment declared against Prof. Kirchwey in 1903 in favor of Mr. Barber, who lives at 137 East Fifty-fifth Street, was issued last Friday and came as a great surprise. When the case came up yesterday it was announced by the attorney for Mr. Barber that the matter had been settled out of court.

Mr. Barber's judgment was upon a promissory note signed by Prof. Kirchwey in 1897 and payable to Mr. Barber's father, who died shortly afterward.

TESTIFY TO ETTOR'S PEACEFUL METHODS

Witnesses for I. W. W. Defense Say He and Giovannitti Did Not Incite to Riot.

'WILD ANIMALS' WERE MILITIA

Italian Gives Strikers' Version of Much Quoted Speech—Jurors to Sit on Election Day.

SALEM, Mass., Nov. 4.—That militiamen and policemen made no effort to prevent the attacks upon street cars in Lawrence on the morning of Jan. 29 and that the cars were besieged by an organized gang of about twenty men was the testimony to-day of Leo Ready, one of the textile strikers, at the trial of Ettor, Giovannitti, and Caruso for the murder of Anna Lopizzo.

Ready declared that he was near the scene of the riot that morning and that the strikers were peaceful. "I saw this gang of twenty men go up and down the streets," said Ready. "They were armed with clubs, with which they smashed the windows of the cars. Some of them threw chunks of ice. The policemen on the streets made no attempt to stop them. Neither did the soldiers."

"Did you see the police when the windows were being smashed?" asked Attorney George Roewer, Jr.

"Yes, several times," said Ready. "I saw one of this gang come up toward the curb and stoop to pick up a chunk of ice. One of his pals said to him, 'There's a cop,' and he said 'To h—— with the cop!' and let the chunk of ice drive at the car window. The policeman made no effort to arrest him."

Several Lawrence women and children workers testified that police and militiamen clubbed the strikers. One told of the stabbing of a 14-year-old boy by a soldier.

Efforts of the defense to bring out the wage issue as the basis for the industrial disturbance last Winter were unsuccessful. Judge Quinn excluded questions relating to the pay of textile workers, on the ground that this had no bearing on the killing of the woman.

Mayor Scanlon of Lawrence, who was in court, was excused from testifying until next Monday. John J. Breen, former School Committeeman, who was convicted and fined for "planting" dynamite, also was in court and may be called as a witness. Another witness present, summoned by the defense, was John N. Cole, former Speaker of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

It was decided to-day to hold court on Election Day, the jurors waiving their rights to vote. As the members of the jury live so far apart, Sheriff Johnson said it would be impossible to make the rounds of their homes before the polls closed unless he had a "German airship."

Leopoldo Tortora, an Italian, who testified through an interpreter, gave a different version of the speech of Giovannitti on the Lawrence Common, in which detectives quoted him as urging the strikers to "prowl like wild animals at night, seeking the blood of the scabs."

Tortora quoted Giovannitti's speech as follows:

"The parade is finished. Go home and play with your children and eat with your wife, for it is cold. Do not go to Canal Street, because that is private property, and those gentlemen over there have police and soldiers. The police have clubs and the soldiers have sharp instruments on their guns. When they see you coming they will seek your blood like savages. If you won't do as I say, I will go back to New York."

Tortora, when cross-examined by the District Attorney, admitted that Giovannitti in his speech on the Common used the words "wild animals," but on redirect examination he declared Giovannitti was referring to the police and soldiers.

Archie Adamson, a member of the Lawrence Strike Committee, testified that the only time he heard Giovannitti speak in English during the strike the defendant urged the leaders to provide food relief stations for the Italian workers. Adamson declared he never heard Giovannitti urge violence or disorder, nor did he ever see him do anything unlawful.

Thomas Holliday, an employe of the Wood mill in Lawrence, who was one of the American members of the Strike committee, said he never heard the defendant, Ettor, urge violant action. The witness quoted one of Ettor's speeches to the strikers as follows: "The greatest power of the working people is when they do nothing and remain absolutely quiet with their arms folded. As soon as you fold your arms there will be no one to build the automobiles for the rich. Then will you have the capitalist class at your mercy and be on the way to victory. Stand together solidly, let there be no violent uprising and we will win."

MISTAKEN FOR WILSON.

Judge Grosscup, Lacing His Shoes in Sleeper, Fools Two Women.

Ex-Judge Peter S. Grosscup of Chicago bears some resemblance to Woodrow Wilson, and while he was standing at the cashier's office at the Waldorf yesterday somebody addressed him as "Governor."

"This has happened more than once since the campaign began," said Judge Grosscup, who is an ardent Bull Mooser. "When I came East the other day, however, I had to smile at the way my identity was mistaken. I was sitting on the edge of my berth, lacing my shoes, when two women passed on their way to breakfast in the dining car. I made room for them, and I suppose my exertions had given me some color, for just after they had passed, I overheard one remark to the other:

"'Woodrow seems to be having trouble with his shoes this morning.'"
